The tide at the time was ebbing, but she stood it bravely, and after thirty-five minutes' hard struggling reached the Jersey coast, where she was received with loud and prolonged cheers. Domestic Infelielty, There was a big excitement in "Paddy's Hollow," on Sunday morning last, between 9 and 10 o'clock, caused by a difficulty between a colored man named Towers and his wife, during which he chased her through the streets with a piece of scantling, with which he was threatening to "wear her out to a frazzle." Johnson Blakeley. [For the Morning Star.] In your account of the graduates at Chanel Hill, I notice that you mention

Johnson Blakely as being from Chatham county. In this I think you are in error, for he is a Cape Fear boy, and belongs to Wilmington. His father emigrated to this Corn. place from freland in 1780, and, after a short residence here, died, and was buried in the old church yard of St. James.' Johnson was but five years old at the time of his father's death: "He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" watched over the helpless orphan, and raised up a protector in the person of Edward Jones, himself an Irishman, and possessing all the generous impulses so characteristic of his race. Mr. Jones was no ordinary man; the purity of his character and his commanding talents gave him great prominence. He represented the borough of Wilmington in the Legislature from 1788 to 1792 consecutively, when he declined a re-election, and was chosen by the General Assembly Solicitor moved to Pittsboro, Chatham county, He adopted the orphan Blakely, directed his education, and was as a father unto him. He was living in Chatham county at the time Blakely entered college, and that was the reason perhaps that he was assigned to that portion of the State. We of this section, however, claim Johnson Blakely as one of our own. The bones of his ancestors lie buried in our old church yard. This was his first home in America—it was here his infant days were passed; here he lived until his patron removed into the in-terior of the State. We claim him as one of our own, and are proud of the lustre he has shed upon his State and county, and we claim also for this section of the State a larger portion of that glory which still surrounds the name of this orphan boy of CAPE FEAR. Quarterly Meetings. Fourth round of appointments, as made by Rev. W. S. Black, Presiding Elder for the Wilmington District Methodist Epis. Church South:
