Fifty-two barques, brigs and schooners in port at one time speak well for the commerce of Wilmington. Such was the case on Thursday, the 22nd.

Rev. W. W. Bennett, D. D., senior editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, has been elected President of Randolph Macon College. An excellent selection.

The Senatorial Bulldozers have been foiled. President Hayes stands frm. He will take no step backwards. Stand aside for the present the brigade of "I told you So."

The friends of the Silver Bill wil probably feel discouraged at the dewill veto any bill that does not expressly except the public debt from its operations. This will be good news to the "bloated bondholders."

The main body of the Russian Army in Asia Minor are now marching on Erzeroum, as Kars is no longer in the way. The fall of the former most soon follow. "We went from the house to the stable to inspect Ten Brocck, and when he was led out we confess that he looked a mere wreck of the grand horse he was last spring. He looks weak and dull out of the eyes, his coat is staring, and he is extremely low in fleah, his neck as thin as a yearling filly's. One can count every rio in his body, and his quarters are deeply creased and muscles wasted away. EDMUNDS ON HAYES.

New Opinion of the President's Line of Action-Decisions Reached by the Radical Caucus.

[Special to Philadelphia Press.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. The report of Senator Edmunds to the Republican Senatorial caucus, yesterday, of the result of the conference of himself and other Senators with the President on the political situation, has greatly aggravated the feeling of hostility which has been manifesting itself against the President since the assembling of Congress. The Senator made a detailed statement of the conference as it actually occurred. He said, in effect, that the points taken by the President in defence of his course were more suggestive of the wild fancies of a political dreamer than the safer sense of a statesman. He said that the President claimed that one of the beneficial results of his policy would be the carrying of eight of the Southern States for the Republicans the Presidential contest of 1880. In propounding this claration the President stated that in the first place there was an evident tendency on the part of the religious element of the South to support the Administration and its policy, and he anticipated the first results would be tangibly evident about two years hence, when it would be suffiof religious support upon the letters and professions of the Methodist Church, South. The Senator said that the next point made was that the President claimed that his policy is being received with great cordiality by the Old Line Whigs of the South, and that he anticipated large support untry. The President intimated that he proposed to select good men for office, and if the Republican party did not furnish one he would take one from the Democratic party. The Senator then remarked that he stated to the President that he did not agree with him in the appointment of Democrats to office, and would never give his sanction to the confirmation of any Democrat unless he would formally subscribe to a declaration, to be published in the public prints of his State, that he irmly believed in the Constitution and its amendments, and that they were right, and that he would carry them out in their spirit and letter He said that the President replied to this that he did not regard such declaration as necessary; that he took it for granted that the oath of office would cover all of the points men

speech in the Senate to-day in support of Senator Thurman's resolution to discharge the committee on Privieges and Elections from further consideration of the Butler-Corbin contested case from South Carolina. The first sound of his voice aroused the Senate, which had been listlessly enduring, as patiently as it might, one of Mitchell's long-winded and tedious harangues. Senators quickly deserted the cloak-rooms, where they had been enjoying a quiet smoke, and the vacant chairs filled up rapidly. Senator Hill's maiden effort was most successful one. His manner was figuified, his speech forcible, and his argument logical. He presented very clearly the exact status of the contested cases; how Spofford and Kellogg presented their case first to the committee because they were invited first by the committee; how he and his Democratic colleagues on the committee had acquiesced because they supposed the Senate would not so far violate all judicial precedents as to reopen a difficulty which had been settled by the parties to the difficulty; how he (Hill) had introduced a resolution affirming that the committee would accept the decihow that resolution was lost and another substituted by Senator Hoar, which re-opened the whole Louisiana controversy; how he and his Democratic colleagues epposed such a re-opening; and how, when Hoar's resolution was adopted by the Republicans on the committee, he moved to take up the case of Eustis, in which case there were no other oredentials before the committee than those of Mr. Eustis. Senator Hill's speech drew out labored replies from ganization. The rumor is of such vague shape that there is no way of ascertaining if the proposed new organization is under Democratic or Republican management; but it is believed that straight-out Republicans who oppose Hayes contemplate making one final effort to rally the party and divide the sheep from the goats, and that in a few days an important political address to the country will be issued under several prominent Republican signatures.

The Famous San Domingo Debate. |Special to the Baltimore Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. In the executive session of the Senate to-day a motion was made to remove the ban of secreey from the record of the proceedings of the Senate while engaged in the consideration of the San Domingo treaty several years ago, the object being the vindication of Senator Sumner in connection with the allegations made by ex-Secretary Fish. The Senators who spoke upon the subject all expressed a willingness to allow these records to be laid before the public, and it is probable they will be published in a few days.

WILMINGTON, N. C., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1877. An Attempt to Throw a Train off the

The passenger train on the Wilmington

Weldon Railroad came near being wrecked, Wednesday morning, about thirteen miles above this city, through an iron rail having been placed across the track. The engineer and conductor discovered the obstruction, but before the train could be stopped the rail had come in contact with the cow-catcher, by which it was broken, in pieces and the train passed safely on its course. Had the accident occurred at night and the train been going at full speed, the result would in all probability have been a fearful one. The rail was, no doubt, placed on the track by some designing villain with the view of wrecking the train, as it was, we learn, actually chained to the cross-ties, and no effort should be spared by the authorities to ferret out the scoundrel who could thus lend himself to a scheme which might have eventuated in a wholesale destruction of life and property. This is the second attempt to throw a train off the track, on roads connecting with this city, during the past week or two.

Died of his Injuries. We learn from a letter received from Mr. John F. Pugh, of this city, now in Clinton, Sampson county, that Mr. John D. Lamb, a resident of that place, alluded te in our last issue as being considered in a dying condition from wounds received from a hatchet in the hands of one of his employees, died from his injuries on Tuesday last, at one o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Pugh, who was summoned to his bedside. having reached there after his decease. At the time of writing (Wednesday at 12 o'clock) an inquest was being held over the body of the unfortunate gentleman, and his interment was to have taken place on the same day at three o'clock. The party who inflicted the blow that caused his death was arrested and committed to jail, as stated in our last.

A Persistent "Pussy."

A gentleman of this city was recounting yesterday the difficulties he had experienced in the effort to get rid of a cat which thought too much of to lay viole hands upon. He first had him sent to a listant part of the city, and turned loose, but he soon found his way back to his old home. After various other efforts to dispose of him, but without success, he finally had him placed in a covered basket and taken to the opposite side of the river, and now he was sure that he had seen the last of poor "Tom," especially after an entire year had passed since the last attempt to "lose" him. Judge of his surprise, there fore, when, one day this week, "Tommy once more put in his appearance at his old quarters. The question now is, how did pussy get across the river ?
