The Morning Star

WILMINGTON, N. C. FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 3, 1878.

BILE VERSUS PATRIOTISM.

Senator Angus Cameron, of Wisconsin, has written a very foolish article for the North American Review. It has the significant title, "The Irrepressible Conflict Undecided." It is really a paper of ordinary ability, and has not wisdom enough in it to redeem it from contempt. It is spiteful, unfair, and vicious, and is the beginning of the new attempt to get up another bloody-shirt campaign that the next House of Representatives may be captured.

There are tens of thousands of people throughout the Northern section of our country who dislike the South and misunderstand the South, but they are so much in the minority that a successful campaign conducted on the sanguinary plan will scarcely succeed. Even so decided a Republican paper as the New York Times does not have a high appreciation of Mr. Cameron and his article. It says: "Careful study of Mr. Cameron's article in the North American Review leads to the conclusion that the policy he would have the Republican party to pursue next fall, and again in 1880, all comes under two propositions. One is, abuse the South. The other, let every debtor be the judge of what he owes and how he will pay. We submit that the party must look elsewhere for an instructor."

THE REBEL CLAIMS.

The Republicans are blowing loud and earnestly over the "rebel claims." They charge that it will require the enormous sum of three hundred million dollars to satisfy the rapacious Southerners. But there is another side to the picture. The Democrats in Congress have been examining into the matter of these claims, and they find that there are this time on the Northern claims to the amount of one hundred and sixty million dollars. The New York Herald, in commenting upon these Northern claims, says:

"It will be shown at the same time that the greater part of the so-called Southern claims are in the hands of Northern men, having been bought up by them or originated by them, and being 'Southern' in the sense of location."

Now is not this characteristic? The rascals who have ruined the country are the most voracious about the "rebel claims." Examination shows first, that the North has filed claims amounting to the stupendous sum of $160,000,000; and secondly, that the larger part of the claims that are branded "Southern" are really Northern.

We hope these figures will not be forgotten. We shall hear many times the same old cry of the rebels wanting to plunder the United States Treasury, and it will be well to remind the assailants that the real criminals live in the North. But very few of the claims are actually the offspring of the genuine "rebel." He either has no "claim," or he does not regard it of value enough to be presented or pressed.

The appointment of George L. Smith, as Collector of the Port of New Orleans, appears to have been an unfortunate one. His history is said to be anything else than beautiful. His character is held in any other than a favorable light in New Orleans, and the only excuse for Mr. Hayes is that he did not know what a scowly fellow he was favoring and rewarding. The Picayune says:

"If he knew anything at all of Smith he must have known that the appointment of such a man would be regarded in no other light than as a compensation for services which deserved punishment rather than reward. So far from enjoying the confidence of this community, Smith is profoundly odious to it. He is well known here, it is true, but he is well known as one of the most disreputable agents and instruments of the thoroughly disreputable gang of conspirators who twice defrauded the people of their rights by false counts of votes, and who attempted the same thing a third time when they tried to set up the fraudulent Packard government."

This appointment was not intended, we suppose, to illustrate civil service reform, that having been practically abandoned at its birth. Mr. Hayes had, however, promised that he would appoint as Collector a person of good standing, and who had the confidence of the community.

The managers who have charge of the "fraud movement" are said to be awaiting the arrival of the originals of the confession of McLin and Dennis, before they take any decisive steps towards pressing an investigation. The Washington Post says:

"Before many days a resolution will be introduced in the House authorizing the Judiciary Committee to investigate the matter thoroughly. In connection with that resolution all the evidence that can be obtained will be presented to the House and referred to the Judiciary Committee. The Democrats who have control of the subject consider it important to refer the original papers reciting the frauds, rather than copies. Several of the originals are now in possession of the Democrats, and it is believed the others will be obtained within a few days. In addition to the documents already made public there are others forthcoming, so it is claimed, equally as startling as the McLin and Dennis confessions."

It is a noticeable fact that many of the most conservative Democratic and Independent papers are beginning to regard an investigation as necessary and as certain to come. They do not appear to regard the ousting of Mr. Hayes as a necessary result of the investigation.

The New York Sun is a very unreliable paper when it makes statements with the most assurance. It lately described Bishop McCoskry as slightly above the medium height and rather thin. This is very accurate. He only weighs three hundred pounds, and is the David Davis of the House of Bishops. But one hundred and seventy-five pounds do not make much difference in the weight of one person. If the Sun had missed it a half ton or such a matter it would have been something to talk about.

Gen. Ignatieff, who it is thought will succeed Prince Gortschakoff if the latter should die from his present sickness, is reported as having recently said that Russia could not demand less than she has done—that she is determined that the vexed Eastern question shall be finally settled—that England and Austria must decide whether they will accept the concessions made—that Russia is ready for whatever may come, and that England will not fight, but that she will

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

During the past month public sentiment has undergone a wonderful change in regard to Judge Scheck, and it is doubtful if he can ever be nominated for Associate Justice. Where once he would have met a hearty endorsement, he may expect great lukewarmness in his case, if not unspoken hostility, and for this he will have no one to blame but his friends.—Oxford Free Lance.

In another article we noticed the new practice of hiring out persons convicted of offenses against the criminal law. This use of the privileges given by the law is likely to be abused, and we wish at once to enter our protest against the perversion of its purposes. In the treatment of offenders, the law referred to has a higher object than the simple function of saving expense to the country. The safety of society, which legislation through all time has endeavored to secure by the punishment of offenders, must not be jeopardized by any indulgence which condones guilt for money.—Hillsboro Recorder.

Mr. Raudall will probably agree with us now that he made up some of his committees very stupidly.—Washington Post, Dem.

It is a striking fact that Mr. Tilden in retirement is a more important factor in the politics of the State than when he was in the White House.—Union Courier.

The President now has a beautiful opportunity to appoint a commission to let him know if he knew anything about the Florida frauds.—Phil. Times, Ind.

Judge Blair said that the movement against Hayes was no longer his movement—the people had taken it out of his hands, and would finish it.—Baltimore Sun, Ind.

The fact is that the duty of investigation is in a manner forced on Congress by the appearance of such disclosures as this confession of the chief criminal in the Florida Returning Board. The truth is bound to come out in spite of every attempt to suppress it.—Syracuse Courier, Dem.

A bevy of children were telling what they got at school. The eldest got reading, spelling, and definitions. "And what did you get, little one?" asked the father, to which the child replied, "I got at the time was aly driving a ten-penny nail into the door-panel. 'Me! I gets readin', spellin', and spakin'!"

An exquisite, leading a dog by a string, lunched up to the ticket office window of a railroad company and inquired: "Is that the ticket for the 'Puppy'?" He was naturally both surprised and annoyed when the ticket seller answered, in a slightly bewildered tone, after a moment's calm reflection: "No—you can travel as an ordinary passenger, at the regular rate."

"There is nothing new under the sun," remarked Solomon the wise king. "How about neuralgia?" asked Rebohom, walking into the palace with his jaw tied up in red flannel, and the faint, far away odor of old Robertson county arnica on his mustache. The monarch scowled, and said he hoped the kingdom of Israel hadn't got down to running a Paraphraser's Association just yet.—Burlington Hawkeye.
