Ben Butler is greatly provoked because Attorney General Devens has paid no attention to his letters concerning an investigation of the Massachusetts bulldozers. He is nourishing his wrath, and will open his batteries on the Department of Justice after a little while. Such is the rumor. He is training his guns and getting his powder ready.

One Kelly was before the Potter committee last week. He swore that the signatures of Levisee and Joffrion to the electoral certificates from Louisiana were forgeries, He declined to tell who did the forging. He was a clerk in the office of the Secretary of State, under Kellogg. He was allowed to consult his counsel before testifying further. He says he knows whereof he affirms.

It is regarded as certain in Wash ington that there will be no legislation during the present Congress on the counting of the electoral vote. The House committee has agreed to recommend the Southard bill. It will be recommended that the Senate pass the Edmunds bill. The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says:

"The Senate Democrats do not rise above party considerations any more than the Senate Republicans, and they are therefore perfectly satisfied to let things take their course. A suggestion has been made that, in the absence of legislation, the Democrats, although they will control both branches of the next Congress, may not find it plain sniling in case of a close Presidential contest, as Vice President Wheeler may assume that he has the power, as President of the Senate, to open and count

Congressman Stenger is not con tent to let the backers of St. Martin off. He is anxious to get John Sherman to father the effort to blacken him. John declines the honor. The Washington correspondent of the Richmond State says:

"Though he declines to say what will be the line of his defence, it is understood that he will prove beyond question that St. Martin was paid to make the affidavit; that afterwards he offered to make another duty of serving summenses for Republican witnesses, and therefore could not have been instructed to mark them 'not found;' and that the whole story is false in every particular."

While the serenity of the City Hall officials was not disturbed by a ripple of crime yesterday, the magisterial flood-gates were. up and a wave or two of criminal trouble swept "across their peaceful breasts."

That playful custodian of the law, Justice Wagner-who always makes violators of statutes, even when he spirits them off to prison feel as if he was half-way conferring a favor-had before him a seaman named Charles W. Tower, against whom the State had a small account. He was charged by Capt. C. B. Getchell, of the schooner Ralph Home, with assault and battery, and found guilty, the fine being fixed at $10 and costs. Charles was not content, however, with this experience of the dangers of the law, so he brought action against Capt. Getchell for assault, and failing to sustain the allegation, encountered another breaker in the shape of costs. Like a bold sailor, he could not rest under this defeat, and had a peace warrant served against the victorious commander, and this last was dismissed at the cost of the prosecutor. This resultn was a settler, and the defeated seaman left the judgment hall a wiser, if not better man. Justice Hill had two small cases, which were disposed of in a very crisp manner. The first was that of Charles A. Debnam, colored, on a peace warrant. A bond of $50 was demanded of him for his appearance for a future hearing, which he could not give and was locked up. George Washington Thomas, colored, put in his appearance for assaulting the aforesaid Debnam. It was adjudged that he should pay $2 and costs, but the greenback mills had not yet sent forward Thomas' quota of national spoils and he was unable to settle. He was jailed in de-"finis."

The "Haggis." Our Scotch friends had a grand feas Monday night. It was held in the fine hall of the MacRae building, on Front street; and they do say that for fun and frolic. there has been nothing to equal it in Wilmington for twenty years. "How to make a haggis" was the conundrum of the evening, and Wilkin Roddick and Roderick G. Ross were the only Scotchmen who knew exactly how to handle the "sheep's pluck." They did it in royal style; and since the meeting at "The Balmoral" everybody wants to know if there is anvthing peculiarly difficult about the making of a "haggis." We answer, no; nothing could be simpler. We have a recipe for making the "baggis" which was sent us by our great-grand-mother from Aberdeen more than four hundred years ago; and in order that every good housewife may know exactly how to make a " haggis, we append

the recipe: A haggis is made of a fat sheep's pluck, properly prepared and boiled in a haggis bag, or sheep's paunch, which has been perfectly cleansed, by first washing it, then soaking it in cold salt and water for several of his relations to the congregation was hours, turning it inside out, scalding it, scraping it quickly with a knife (being careful not to cut it) and leaving it in cold water till wanted. Sometimes the stomach of a calf or a lamb is used, but that of the sheep is generally preferred. The pluck itself, too, should be thoroughly cleaned. The heart and the liver should be gashed with a sharp knife in several places, to make the blood flow out, and then the liver and lights should be boiled; an hour and a half will be sufficient for them, though the lights can scarcely bill too much. The windpipe should be allowed to hang over the side of the not to assist the escape of the blood. After ten minutes' gentle boiling the water may be drained off, and fresh water poured over the meat, and when the boiling has con-tinued for an hour, the rest of the pluck may be added. When all is dene, take up the meat, and trim away the skin and the black portions, grate half the liver, and mince all the rest finely. Mix with it one pound of finely shred suet, two large mild onions chopped small, half a pint of finely ground oatmeal, which has been toasted before a clear fire till it is brightly colored or, if preferred, an oatcake may be toasted and crumbled for the purpose. Spread the mince out on a pastry board, and sprinkle over it first the o then a liberal seasoning of salt, black pep-per, and cayenne. Moisten with half a pint of the stock in which the pluck was boiled, and the juice of a lemon; put the whole into the paunch already prepared for it, first looking carefully over it to see that there are no thin places which may burst in the boiling (some cooks use two bags or a cloth as an outer covering). Do not fill the bag much more than half full but leave room for swelling, for fear should burst in boiling; press out the air and sew the bag up securely. Plunge it into boiling water, prick it with a long needie every now and then during the first half hour to let the air out, and boll it gently for three hours. Serve it in the bag as it is without either sauce or gravy. Some cooks substitute the sheep's tongue and kidneys

About the time, however, that the "haggis" was nicely cooked Mr. Ross had disappeared. Then it was that Wilkin rose in the majesty of his princely presence and shouted: "Oh! where was Roderick then? One blast from his bugle horn were worth a thousand 'sheeps' paunches.'" But Roderick came not. Everybody asked, 'Where is the Dhu?" Echo answered, 'Gone to the ship-yard."

Hishop Atkinson's Lecture. We mentioned yesterday that Bishop Atkinson was to lecture Monday evening, in Raleigh, in behalf of St. John's Guild. The Observer of that city thus refers to the matter: "The lecture of this eminent divine before the members of St. John's Guild, and for the benefit of that noble institution, was listened to by a select audience. The President of the Guild, Rev. E. R. Rich, introduced the speaker. He said, 'Our Bishop is so well known to you all that an introduction by me is entirely out of place.' The Bishop then announced the subject, 'The Nature of Guilds,' and reviewed briefly the orign and history of Guilds, the advantages of the Society, citing instances of great good that had been accomplished by the organization in America. The lecture throughout was noted for its deep learning and beautiful language." And of his sermon at Christ Church, Sunday, the same paper says: "Bishop Atkinson preached a very able sermon in Christ Church on Sunday last and confirmed five persons. His words of advice were strong and tender. He warned young people against the present style of dancing, and pronounced it indecorous and, he feared, sometimes indecent."

A young man named Robert McLellan, a clerk in a bar room at Lumberton, was found dead on the pavement, in front of his place of business. Monday night of last week. It is supposed that the unfortunate young man, who slept in the second story of the establishment, went out on the piazza for some purpose, lost his balance, and fell to the pavement, where his dead body was found. Last Sunday the coroner's jury held an inquest, and rendered a verdict that deceased came to his death from causes unknown to them.

Garrason reports that a good many cattle were drowned by the freshet, and that many more will probably be, as he passed several herds on submerged islands, from which they would almost certainly be swept by the rapidity of the current.

Funeral Obsequies of Capt. Lippitt. The remains of the late Capt. James Wright Lippitt arrived yesterday morning, by the southern train, and in the afternoon. after the usual impressive services at St. John's Episcopal Church, were deposited in Oakdale Cemetery. The pallobearers on this sad occasion were: Capt. Wm. M. Swann, Gen. M. P. Taylor, and Messrs. W. H. Northrop, John M. Walker, W. A. Wright, E. H. Eilers, J. N. Huske and F. W. Kidder. The members of the Wilmington Steam Fire Engine Company No. 1, of which he was once a useful and active member, followed the remains to Oakdale.

The prediction made in the STAR of Tuesday was fully realized. The church where the funeral obsequies occurred was filled with those who knew and appreciated the sterling attributes of Capt. Lippitt, and their presence was a fitter tribute to his memory than any we can pay him with language.

Arrested and Bonded. Deputy Sheriff Thomas H. Batson, of Robeson county, arrived in this city last evening for the purpose of arresting Lewis H. Dorsey's bondsman, for satisfactory reasons, on yesterday notified the Sheriff of that county that the accused had come to this city, whereupon a telegram was sent to Sheriff Manning to arrest him. This was done, and Dorsey gave bond to appear before the visiting officer this morning at 10 o'clock.
