

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE MORNING STAR, the oldest daily newspaper in North Carolina, is published daily, except on Mondays, at $7.00 per month, $24.00 for three months, $75.00 for six months, $150.00 for one year, in advance. Delivered to city subscribers at one rate of 15 cents per week for any period from one week to one year.

THE WEEKLY STAR is published every Friday, 50 cents for three months, $1.50 for six months, $4.00 for one year, in advance.

ADVERTISING RATES (DAILY).—One square, 10 cents for two days, 20 cents for three days, 30 cents for four days, 40 cents for five days, 50 cents for one week, 90 cents for two weeks, $1.20 for three weeks, $1.50 for one month, $4.00 for two months, $7.00 for three months, $12.00 for six months, $20.00 for one year. Tall letters of nonpareil type make one square.

ADVERTISEMENTS inserted on a week in Daily will be charged $1.00 per square for each insertion. Every other day, three fourths of the daily rate. For a week, two thirds of daily rate.

NOTICES OF MARRIAGE OR DEATH, Tributes of Respect, Resolutions of Thanks, &c., are charged for as ordinary advertisements, but only half rates when paid for strictly in advance. At this rate 50 cents will pay for a simple announcement of Marriage or Death.

ADVERTISEMENTS to follow reading matter, or to occupy any special place, will be charged according to the ordinary rates, and will be charged according to the ordinary rates.

ADVERTISEMENTS on which no special number of insertions is marked will be continued "full force," to the option of the publisher, and charged up to the date of discontinuance.

ADVERTISEMENTS for lost and found, and for other special notices, will be charged at the rate of 50 cents per line for the first insertion, and 25 cents for subsequent insertions.

Elsewhere we publish some of Gen. Butler's terse criticisms. The bill will hardly pass the House. The Democrats have too much patriotism. Too much sagacity. Too much caution. To make such a bill a law. It makes Gen. Sherman the Commander in Chief of the Army of the United States, and removes him from all authority, either of the President or the Secretary of War. By the bill he is clothed with autocratic powers.

Gen. Phil Sheridan—"Piegan" Phil—the barn-burner, the mill-destroyer, the slayer of old Indian women and men and little children—this General Phil favors the bill in a letter he has addressed to Gen. Sherman. "Birds of a feather," you know, will "flock together." Phil is interested. He may succeed to the honors and the despotic powers given by the bill. That explains the "milk in the coconut."

THE CHEYENNES. There is something of horror in such a starting line—"Shot like so many dogs." This is in the New York Sun at the head of the column that tells of the killing of some forty or fifty Cheyenne Indians. They are made desperate by the loss of their hunting grounds, are cooped up in a malarial and alien country, and when they make their flight they are butchered like hogs or "shot like so many dogs." Ours claims to be a Christian government. Our people claim to be a Christian people, and yet when Indian prisoners who have become hopeless and desperate under ill treatment endeavor to escape from the fort in which they are imprisoned, they are pursued over the ice and snow and hunted down like wild animals.

A telegram from Chicago shows how badly, how unhumanly the poor Red Men were treated. It says: "The only advice received by General Sheridan from Fort Robinson are dated previous to the outbreak of last night. They indicated that the military have been waiting to execute the orders of the Indian Bureau (which were that the fugitive Indians there be taken back to the Indian Territory) until proper clothing was provided for the savages, they being at present almost naked, and suffering intensely even in their sheltered quarters. Clothing had been promised, but was not expected for two weeks."

With the thermometer far down below zero, and the whole earth one vast sheet of ice and snow, these wretched prisoners were absolutely gaged into an attempt to flee for life. They could not provide for themselves, and the Government failed to provide for them. It is a great blot on our boasted civilization when we abuse, rob, starve and kill our prisoner. Cannot the Congress do something to cure this great abuse—this real crime against suffering humanity?

THE TOBACCO TAX.

The tobacco tax will be probably settled before very long. The arguments are now making before the Senate Finance committee. Commissioner Raum has been speaking before the committee. He opposes the House bill proposing a reduction, and declares that it will reduce the revenues not less than $3,000,000 on tobacco and $2,000,000 on cigars. He takes the ground that in order to yield as much revenue under the reduced tax as the government obtains now, the annual consumption of tobacco would have to be increased from the present amount of 105,000,000 pounds to 140,000,000, which he does not consider at all probable to occur.

The House passed the bill from a conviction that by reducing the tax you would increase the consumption. The proposition is to reduce the tax to sixteen cents a pound. The Louisville Courier-Journal furnishes the following statistics: "Statistics have been presented to the committee showing that for three years, from 1896 to 1898, inclusive, the average rate for high grades after duty is for low grades: Average rate, thirty-four cents; average production, 43,963,143 pounds; average collection, $14,921,784. For the four years, from 1893 to 1897, inclusive, at thirty-two and sixteen cents tax: Average rate, twenty-seven cents; average production, 86,234,489 pounds; average collection, $23,260,715. For three years, from 1878 to 1879, inclusive, at twenty-four cents tax: Average rate, 24 cents; average production, 111,733,849 pounds; average collection, $27,026,139. The natural increase from increase of population is estimated at five per cent. per annum, but during the three last years of the twenty-four cent. tax, the production has fallen off more than six million pounds."

THE SOUTH'S GRATITUDE. Some time ago the New Orleans Times offered a premium for the best poem that would express the gratitude of the South to the people of the North for their unswerving sympathy and generosity during the fearful pestilence that devastated so many sections of the South. One hundred and fifty poetical exercises were sent in. Mr. Henry Grey Carleton was adjudged the successful contestant. His poem is entitled "Andromache Unchained."

The poem is a fitting tribute nobly rendered and speaks for us what we, every one of us, have desired to speak, but have not had the power. It is with mingled feelings of pride, grief, and gratitude that we of the sunny South offer these, our thanks to the people of the North—a people whose lives are spent in an ice-bound and snow-covered land, but whose hearts are as warm and as sunny as our own Southern home.

It is a poem of several hundred lines and is in blank verse. The following will give an idea of the poet's skill and inspiration. He is emblemizing the thanks of the South and says: Say more: Where slept the honored dead of them That did receive such sleep as only comes To valiant men, victorious or unbest— There where moss-garments, stern cypress stand To endless tours of jealous duty sworn, Like sentries clad in war-worn, tattered grey— Did stand a mystic Temple reared. It rose From deep foundations, wrought by sleepless Time.

Of kindnesses that shone as orient pearl; Nor wasted spires, high-pinnacled by Faith, Believer and enduring good: The pave Was laid in cordials, as of a heart Most mindful, where, traced in bright design, Mocked and delicate, the tale Of romance and legend downward eyes Might see; while from the lofty architrave A bas-relief, symbolic chiselling, laugh, And future brotherhood revealed to those Who cherished older hates. There, mute, He bowed To silent, thankful adoration: As the wreaths of incense rose, or to the shrine Of Past were poured libations out; While High Priest Memory reared, in sacred cup, Such grateful purity as I have seen In that Sierra lake, whose peerless soul, In surges of clouds, mirrored of trees Enshrouded, is far behind above, as seas By snow-haired patriarchs to God!

"If Mr. Hayes could be induced to indicate his purpose as to pardoning convicts a few weeks earlier—say, immediately after they are indicted—the needless and heavy cost of trial might be saved."—Washington Post.

Mr. Hayes is possibly a humane man, and can not be even seen to argue punished. Human feelings are commendable, but it is well enough "to be just before you are generous." The suggestion of the Post about anticipating masters and saving costs is worthy of consideration.

OUR STATE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. With over 1,100 convicts in the penitentiary, it is for the Legislature to say how long the great thoroughfares of the State shall remain unbuilt.—Winston-Salem Journal.

The no-fence system has been adopted in the counties of Virginia bordering on the western border of North Carolina, and all the farmers within whose lands we have been subject to the question of the fence. The subject of fences has been of great value to farmers, and that it has increased directly the market value of the lands. This fact also settles the question of the advantage of doing away with fences. In Norfolk county, Va., just across the border from us, lands have gone up from the market value. Even those persons who were at first opposed to doing away with fences have seen its advantage.—Richmond City Examiner.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Mr. Elden's alleged cipher correspondence is undergoing a searching investigation at the hands of the Potter Committee. Mr. Elden will probably be vindicated, but our heart goes out in sympathy to his misguided nephew, Mr. Pelton. Before the investigation has proceeded one week, Mr. Pelton will be seen in the guise of a goat, the ciphers neatly strangled to his back, bounding toward the impenetrable forests of oblivion. He will probably submit with good grace in order than his uncle may enjoy eternal political life.—Baltimore Gazette, Dem.

The representatives of the best government the world ever saw are still extending the benign influence of Christian civilization to the Indians on the plains, and especially to the Cheyennes who made their escape from Fort Robinson. A twelve-pounder Napoleon has been added to the Christianizing agencies since the last report, and though the Indians, or as many of them as have not surrendered, is hoped that a few well-directed shots will bring them to see the error of their ways. Of course, if an Indian won't surrender to imprisonment on low diet, the only thing to do is to shoot him down, and his wife and children with him. In this way we shall soon have all the Indians civilized, or else show our civilization to be a cruel barbarism.—Phila. Times, Ind.

Congress. [Washington Post, Dem.] It is not an agreeable task to occupy any portion of our time or space in commenting on Omar D. Conger. We do not harbor the delusion that holding this person up to the public gaze will have any beneficial effect upon his future conduct. Hate is not an essential part of his being. He would not be Conger if he were not spiteful, malicious and revengeful. What he might have been if his better impulses had not been repressed by the luxurious growth of evil, we cannot tell. But as he presents himself to the public gaze to-day, there is nothing in his mental or moral state to encourage a hope that he will ever soar, or even wish to soar, from his plane to the level of the average demagogue. We set up his portrait in the same spirit that prompts the health officer to place a red flag in front of an infected house.

The men of the North, among whose honored names that of Omar D. Conger is not perceptible, triumphed. The men of the South accepted their defeat as a final adjustment of the disputed questions, laid down their arms, returned to their allegiance, and have sought to live in peace under the old flag, claiming only the rights that are guaranteed alike to all the people, all the States and all sections of the Republic. But from the hour of the surrender to the present moment they have not for a single day been free from such insults as only cowards can give, but which are hard for brave and honest men to bear.

Among the foremost of the malicious crew who have sought opportunities and invented pretenses for casting insult upon the Southern people, has been this man Conger, from Michigan; foremost in the bitterness of his hatred, foremost in the coarseness of his manner, foremost in the grossness of his style, but hidmost in every quality that could invite the attention of the objects of his incessant abuse.

Sentinel on the Army Bill. [Extract from a Letter.] I am so pressed for time that I cannot say but a word about the army reorganization bill. In the first place it is a bill to abolish the constitutional office of Secretary of War. Second, it is a bill to make the general-in-chief despot of the army. Third, it is a bill to enable the Providence Tool Company to sell a large number of muskets which they have on hand to the United States Government.

Fourth, it is to take over the arming of the militia of the United States to private contractors without any uniformity of guns, equipments and ammunition, leaving that to be settled by the caprice or fancy of each State. I do not go into the other demerits of the bill, because I have already stated enough to insure my hearty opposition in Congress and out.

An Ancestral Mansion Burned to the Ground. [Philadelphia Times] "Mandeville" one of the most famed ancestral mansions of the South, was burned to the ground the other night. It was built in 1808, and became the social and political centre in the Pee-Dee country, in South Carolina. Memories of three generations and elegant souvenirs of travel, together with the Mandeville family relics from Wales, rare pictures and costly books, that filled the house, were destroyed. The special glory of the place was its flowers, which bloomed in every apartment, and in every nook and cranny during the mild nine months of the year, holly and mistletoe remaining throughout the three winter months. Mrs. Lawrence M. Kett and daughter, the "Mandeville" heirs, sought refuge at the house of a neighbor.

Why Ulisses Barked Out. [Louisville Courier-Journal] It is now said that Grant was at first strongly inclined to accept the Bulgarian crown, but declined it at the suggestion of his friend, John Russell Young, who convinced him that he could do much better by waiting, as it would not be very long before so many of the European thrones would be made vacant by assassinating the very best of them could be going at mere slop-shop prices.

The Porter Discussion Ended. West Point, N. Y., Jan. 12.—In the Porter case, Saturday, Mr. Chonts concluded his argument on behalf of Gen. Porter. This ends the case, so far as the discussion of it is concerned. The three members of the board will now meet in private, review the proceedings and make up their opinion, to be forwarded to the President, who will recommend such action to Congress as he sees fit.

A Candy Elephant. An eight hundred pound candy elephant is exhibited in a Reading, Pa., confectioner's store. The figure is seven and a half feet in length, five feet high and two and a half feet wide. The trunk is solid clear candy, the tongue is composed of candy of the natural color, and with these exceptions the entire figure is composed of saleable nut candy. It could not be taken through the rear door of the store on account of its size.
