Over four hundred dwelling houses have been contracted for, near Harlem, N. Y. This is because of the construction of the elevated railway to that place. People can live there and do business "down town" without delay. Rapid transit, in other words, did the business.

Gen. Ben. Butler made his speech on the cipher dispatches. He told nothing and was very conciliatory. There was a disappointment all round. He took the position that these dispatches were the work of private individuals, and that Congress had no right to expend the people's money in investigating them.

A prominent Georgia Democrat has written a long argument to try and persuade Senator Gordon that the only salvation for the Democracy in the next campaign was to nominate Hayes for a second term, and asking the cooperation of the Senator in this measure. He was answered that the Senator was in favor of nominating a straight-out Democrat in 1880, and could not consider the plan proposed.

The Senator is right. This appears to be the time of "coagulated idiocy" about public affairs.

The Opera House To-Night. The Charlestonese have had the privilege of enjoying "Our Boarding House," and they pronounce the catering to the popular appetite to be decidedly relishable. The News and Courier refers to its presentation there on Monday night as showing "how generally the name of the promised play had tickled the imagination of the public. Most people, at some period of their lives, have had an opportunity of being amused at the queer manifestations of human nature which the American boarding house is apt to exhibit in kaleidoscopic variety, and the anticipation of seeing these reproduced and caricatured behind the footlights, was novel and pleasing. But though the play was in many respects excellent, it was not precisely what the audience had come to see. The droll things with which boarding house life is so replete, hold a secondary place in the entertainment, being made to form, as it were, the framework in which the story of a sham marriage and its miserable sequel is set. There is, however, quite enough in the piece that is funny and laughable. The ludicrous makeshifts, the shocking scandals, the sly flirtations, and the curious social mixtures of which the boarding house of the period is prolific, were all illustrated to the life."
