WILMINGTON, N. C .:

THURSDAY MORNING, Jan. 23, 1879.

RETRENCHMENT AND REFORM. We are not office-seekers. We have no axe to grind, but we ar tax-payers. What we have said concerning the reduction of salaries. has been prompted solely by a desire to help relieve a people who are sorely burdened with taxation, and by a conviction of fairness and justice. Months ago we wrote upon the subject, and subsequent reflection but confirms us in the position we then took. The salaries of our offi cials are too high, with the exception of the Judiciary. We do no think their pay adequate.

As to the pay of the officers, if the Legislature would obtain from all of the States a list of the salaries allowed, it would be astonished to find that North Carolina, in her great poverty, pays much higher salaries than other States two or three times richer and with but little public debt.

High salaries are not in consonance with the genius of our people, or the principles of our institutions. Our great forefathers never attempted to imitate the extravagance or splendor of foreign countries, and never pro posed that our public servants should go into office to get rich, or to make a great display. It is only since the war, when the era of corruption and speculation and peculation dawned upon our land, that high salaries were deemed the thing, when public officers lived like nabobs and princes,and when large fortunes were strangely made, that our people began to copy novel and improper customs, and became impregnated with some of the political miasma that lowers the standard of morals and poisons the public fountains. We are gradually getting back to the good and pure old times when the people were frugal and kindly, when honor and justice prevailed among men, and when the servants of the people were attentive to busi-fulfil their promises to the people here will come a day of reckoning for them just as there was a day of reckoning for the corrupt, extravagant, wasteful, vicious, and unfaithful Radical party.

Wisdom, right, prudence, honesty, fidelity, all unite in demanding that what the Democratic press of the State and what the politicians promised, shall be carried out to the letter and in the utmost good faith.

Prior to the war we believe North Carolina had the best constitution, the best laws, and the best government of any State in the Union. The men who held office were pure, capable and honest. Taxes were low, salaries were moderate. Now taxes are high and salaries are excessive. When the people could have easily given the public functionaries large salaries it was deemed improper and unsafe to do so. It was simply contrary to the best convictions and wishes of the tax-payers. In those days the total salaries paid the officials of the capitol amounted to not much more than $6,000. Now they aggregate over $25,000. Are the people any better served now than then? If necessary we could enter each Department and show that the men of that time were every way equal to those of the present. Why then this large increase? It is one of the legacies of carpet-bag rule. They introduced the custom of paying large salaries. The Raleigh News has shown that the taxes are relatively higher now than they were under Radical rule, and that the $90,000 saved by abolishing annual sessions of the Legislature has disappeared, leaving taxation as high as ever. In South Carolina the Democrats have reduced the taxes nearly fifty per cent.

WORTHY OF NOTE. Senator Lamar is certainly a man of very superior abilities. The country has done justice to his gifts. But he is more than a man of fine culture and superior mental parts. He is singularly scrupulous, and differs so much in his old-fashioned notions of mine and thine, from those that prevail, as to make him appear something odd, if not really eccentric. A hundred and fifty years ago- Henry Brooke, a man of genius and an Irishman, wrote a work that still lives and richly deserves a place in every library. It is called "The Fool of Quality." Brooke was a very de voted, spiritual Christian. He makes his hero, who was the son of a nobleman, conduct himself under all temptations and difficulties and dangers just as the Bible teaches. The result was the world deemed him a fool. Hence the title of the work. If Mr. Lamar continues to bear himself as he has done, he will be regarded as a splendid idiot-a crack-brained man of talents, and all because his ways

When the reader has run over the following he will then appreciate the astounding singularity of Mr. Lamar's conduct. We copy from a recent special in the Baltimore Gazette :

"I cannot save any of my salary,' said Senator Lamar to-day to your correspondent. 'It is impossible. I never paid a cent beyond livery hire and a few little kindred items of election expenses in my life and I have been in politics a long time. I could save $1,000 a year if I would do certain things, but I don't think my conscience would be satisfied if I did. For instance, I pay about $300 a year for newspapers; I like to read them. I have passes over railroads; I coulditravel all over the United States free, but I pay my fare. It costs me $57 for each member of my family every time I come and go between here and home. I have telegraph passes, but I never use them. I do not think it would be right. I can send anything I please over the express lines, yet I pay my express bills. I spend my salary, and never have any money. Some Senators use all these privileges of dead-heading, and they say it is right. I think otherwise."

The Age is thoroughly Democratic, and some of its articles are caustic and excoriating. It will doubtless improve with age.

The North has always been able to General Government that it needed or demanded. The South has never een largely favored. Whilst the North obtained its barrels the South got but drops. The South has been asking for an appropriation of $5,-000,000 for the improvement of the Lower Mississippi valley. The North s already fighting the proposition.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says: "There is not a river improvement de-sired by the South which is not national in its character, while that one piece of ditching, the costly Fox and Wisconsin river improvement, is a local job entirely, and it will cost $15,000,000 before it is com-

In addition to this demand the Courier-Journal mentions other little favors that are asked for by the people of the Northwest. For instance: Chicago wants several millions to dig a canal around the city; the Detroit people want $5,000,000 to dig a canal across Michigan. These little improvements foot up not less than $12,000,000 or $15,000,000.

correspondent of the Raleigh News has written an appreciative and admirable article on the late Col. David M. Carter. We would be glad to reproduce it, if space allowed. Mrs. Cobb, who has been sent to the penitentiary of Connecticut for life, for the murder of her husband, is a remarkable woman if she be guilty. She is a sentimental murderess, and can write no mean verse. An unfortunate woman, who was said to have been murdered by Mrs. Cobb and Bishop, her paramour, was a Good Templar. That Order held some memorial services, when the Cobb appeared and read some very touching lines to her memory. They are very curious under the circumstances. We give them:

Ben Butler said that there would have been no war if Davis had been elected President in 1860. The omission of the no spoilt the whole force of his remarks. It is hard to make the types, and sometimes typos, do right.

CURRENT COMMENT.

One of the most important and interesting events which has taken place in this country for a long time occurred in Charlotte, N. C., on Wednesday last. On that day representatives of Northern settlers in the South from five States assembled in convention and passed resolutions declaring that they were entirely satisfied with their social treatment in their adopted homes, and that in no section of the Union were citizens more thoroughly protected in the vannah (Ga.) News.

Age will find a sounder opinion ex- THE GREATEST DUEL ON RE-

Mark Twain on the Field of Honor rk Twain writes for the Febru ary number of the Atlantic Monthly an account of his participation in the recent duel between Gambetta and Fourton. When he had heard of the outbreak in the Assembly he says that he called on Gambetta, whom he found "steeped in a prefound French calm." Mr. Twain, after being embraced, began the conversation;

I said I supposed he would wish me to act as his second, and he said, "Of course." I said I must be allowed to act under a French name, so that I might be shielded from obloquy in my country in case of fatal results. He winced here, probably at the suggestion that dueling was not regarded with respect in America. However, he agreed to my requirement. This accounts for the fact that in all the newspaper reports M. Gambetta's second was apparently a Frenchman. First, we drew up my principal's will. I insisted upon this and stuck, to my point I said I never heard of a man in his right mind going out to fight a duel without first making his will. He said he had never heard of a man in his right mind doing any-thing of the kind. When we had finished the will he wished to proceed to a choice of his "last words." He wanted to know how the following words, as a dying exclamation. struck me:

"I die for my God, for my country for freedom of speech, for progress and the universal brotherhood of

I objected that this would require too lingering a death; it was a good speech for a consumptive, but not suited to the exigencies of the field of honor. We wrangled over a good many ante-mortem outbursts, but finally got him to cut his obituary down to this, which he copied into his memorandum book, purposing to get it by heart:

I die that France may live.

I said that this remark seemed to lack relevancy; but he said relevancy was a matter of no consequence in last words--what you wanted was

I then wrote the following note SIR: M. Gambetta accepts M. Fourtou's challenge, and authorizes me to propose Plessis Piquet as the place of meeting; to-morrow morning at daybreak as the time; and axes as the weapons. I am, sir with great MARK TWAIN.

M. Fourtou's friend read this note, and shuddered. Then he turned to me, and said, with a suggestion of severity in his tone:

"Have you considered, sir, what would be the inevitable result of such meeting as this?" "Well, for instance, what would

"Bloodshed!"

TO THE PUBLIC GENERALLY "That's about the size of it," I said 'Now, if it is a fair question, what was your side proposing to shed?"

I had him there; he saw he had made a blunder, so he hastened to explain it away. He said he had spoken jestingly. Then he added that he and his principle would enjoy axes, and indeed prefer them, but such weapons were barred by the French code, and so I must change

He replied that the French code permitted no more. then begged him to go on and suggest a distance, for my mind was growing weak and confused under the strain put upon it. He suggested sixty five yards. I nearly lost my patience. I said:

Sixty-five yards with these instruments? Pop-guns would be deadlier at fifty. Consider, my friend, you and I are bandled together to destroy life, and not to make it eternal."

But with all my persuasions, all my arguments, I was only able to get him to reduce the distance to thirtyfive yards; and even this concession he made with reluctance, and with a sigh said:

"I wash my hands of this slaughter: on your head be it." There was nothing for me but to go home to my own lion-heart, and tell my humiliating story. When I entered M. Gambetta was laying the last lock of hair upon the altar. He sprang towards me, exclaiming: "The weapon; the weapon! Quick! what is the weapon?

"This!" and I displayed the silvermounted thing. He caught but one glimpse of it, then swooned ponderously to the floor. When he came to he said, mourn-

After a long silence he asked: "Was nothing said about that man's family standing up with him, as an offset to my bulk? But, no matter; I would not stoop to make such a suggestion; if he is not noble enough to suggest it himself he is welcome to this advantage, which no honorable man would take."

At 9.30 in the morning the pro cession approached the field of Ples sis-Piquet in the following order: First came our carriage-nobody in it but M. Gambetta and myself; then carriage containing M. Fourtou and his second; then a carriage containing two poet-orators, who did not believe in God, and these had MS. funeral orations projecting from their breast pockets; then a carriage containing the head surgeons and their cases of instruments; then eight private carriages containing consulting physicians; then a hack containhearses, then a carriage containing the coroner; then, the two the head undertakers; then a train of assistants and mutes on foot; and after these came plodding through the fog a long procession of camp-followers, police and citizens generally. It was a noble turnout, and would have made a fine display if we had had thinner weather. The weather growing still opaque, was agreed between myself and the other second that before giving the fatal signal we should each deliver a loud whoop, to enable the combatants to ascertain each other's whereabouts. now returned to my principal, who immediately stretched forth his hand and said: "I am myself again; give me the weapon."

I laid it, all lonely and forlorn, in the centre of the vast solitude of his palm. He gazed at it and shuddered. And still mournfully contemplating it, he murmured in a broken voice: 'Alas, it is not death I dread, but mutilation."

I heartened him once more, and with such success that he presently said: "Let the tragedy begin. Stand at my back; do not desert me in this solemn hour, my friend."

I gave him my promise. I now assisted him to point his pistol towards the spot where I judged his adversary to be standing, and cautioned him to listen well and further guide himself by my fellow-second's wheop. Then I propped myself agaiust M. Gambetta's back and raised a rousing "Whoop-ee!" This was answered from out the far disand carried it to M. Fourtou's friend: | tance of the fog, and I immediately

"One-two-three-fire!" Two little sounds like spit! spit broke upon my ear, and in the same instant I was crushed to the earth under a mountain of flesh.
