The news from Washington is that a majority of the Senators favor the Brazilian subsidy.

If Hayes should veto the Chinese bill he will do one good act. This breaking of treaties is a shabby business at best.

Both parties are very anxious to obtain the credit of securing the passage of the unfortunate back-grab pension bill; both are manfully dodging the responsibility of raising the necessary means to meet the payment. This is contemptible.

Bayard Taylor's family are represented to be in Germany without money, in debt, and in a very embarrassed condition generally. Mrs. Taylor is unable to pay the physicians who attended her husband, or even his funeral expenses. The Consul General has paid the funeral expenses out of his own means, but expects reimbursement.

The two parties in the House are in a big fight over the repeal of the election law, and both swear that they will remain as firm as the mountains. The Washington correspondent of the Richmond State says:

"On the surface it would appear that the failure of the bill that appropriates money for the whole government establishment is anevitable, but beneath it all one finds that very many Democrats, including Blackburn, who was chairman of the caucus, do not consider themselves bound by the opinion of the cancus that this troublesome amendment should be put on the legisla-tive appropriation bill."

Hale leads the Radicals. He and Garfield are the fellows who got the very law, sought to be repealed, tacked on the sundry civil bill, and thus it became a law. The Democrats are but feeding them out of the same spoon. If the Democrats waver in the least the Radicals will unite at once in a more determined resistance. We give an interesting extract from the special

State: "The House being in Committee of the Whole while perfecting the bill, Blackburn presided. Garfield made a bold, aggressive speech, and even ventured to charge that the House was called upon to register the decrees of a party caucus, and the chairman himself made his ruling in accord with party dictates. Blackburn came down, and having obtained from the stenographer a report of Garfield's words, read them and asked for an explanation. Garfield said he meant no personal reflection upon Blackburn, but that he, like every member of the Democratic caucus, was bound by its dictates. "Blackburn accepted the explanation, and declared that the caucus referred to was a mere conference by which nobody was bound. The scene was quite exciting and would doubtless have become intensely so if Garfield had not essentially modified his first charge. "Rousing speeches were made by General Chalmers; Aiken, Southard and others, and by Rieffer, Rainey, Hale, &c., on the WESTERN RAILROAD. The special order,-the bill to change the name of and authorize the Western (Coalfield) Railroad Company to consolidate with the Mount Airy Railroad Company, and to complete the same, was taken up, the question being on the second within one mile of the place where reading of the bill.

company to an amount of some $50,- official cognizance of the same." 000, under which a sale of the road | The amendment was adopted. was threatened in June next. Nearly | Bill then passed. all of the sum of $50,000 was money advanced by friends of the road in Fayetteville to save it from spoliation, and to rescue it from the hands of the unscrupulous, into which the fortunes of war had forced it. It was proposed to ask authority to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $400,000 to complete the road to Greensboro, said bonds not to be issued until the road shall have been graded, except to an amount of some $50,000, which the State is to be required to subscribe to pay the pressing judgments and save the road from sale. It was not proposed to pay this money out of the treasury, but to fund the little debt and save the road once more, that is to issue bonds for $50,000 to save $1,100,000.

Mr. Scales dwelt at length upon the prospects of the undertaking in of late by the State to the amount of $850,000 to clear off its debt, and

$70,000 per annum to continue the Mr. Caldwell warmly advocated the passage of the bill. He ridiculed the idea of the failure of the railroad system, for, with all its horrors, it went on progressively, from the tramway to the improved steel rail. He asserted that there was not a fifty mile narrow gauge railroad in the world that did not pay, and the continuation of the proposed road from Greensboro west would be of this character. Mr. Caldwell spoke feelingly and with warmth of the men of Fayetteville who had sunk their money to save this road, and were now simply asking for an arrangement by which their efforts may be followed up and the road saved from sacrifice. Mr. Caldwell appealed to Senators to come to the reliet of the road. The money asked for was an honest debt due individuals who had advanced it for the

To-Day's Indications.

For the South Atlantic States, clear and partly cloudy weather, northerly winds, shifting to easterly or southerly, a slight rise followed by falling barometer, are the indications for to-day.

Almost a Fire. No general alarm having been given, ver few beyond the immediate neighborhood were aware that there was a very parrow escape from a destructive fire in the extreme southern portion of the city on Thursday afternoon. The roof of a house on Frent, between Wooster and Dawson streets, occupied by Jane Oliston and owned by Fred. Merrick, caught fire, the wind at the time blowing almost a gale, and but for prompt measures the flames would not have been gotten under control. As it was, the property was damaged considerably. The house is a two-story one.

Washington's Birthday. While there appears to have been effort made for a general observance of the 22d, we are glad to know that the public offices of the city will be closed in honor of that distinguished rebel, George Washington. The Custom House will do no business, the Post Office is to be closed from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M., and at the City Hall only the office of the Chief of Police will be open. The shipping in port, although mostly foreign bottoms, will doubtless be left to give the day its most signal extent, &c. Section thirteen provides recognition.

WHOLE NO. 3,600

A Question and Answer. The following, which we clip from the New York Journal of Commerce, may be of interest to some of our business friends: WILMINGTON, N. C., Feb. 13.

Editor of the Journal of Commerce: A, of Wilmington, sells B, of New York. 1.000 barrels of tar, free on board, at a certain price. A submits the invoice and draws for the amount on B through a bank at Wilmington. Who pays the exchange?

REPLY .- This will depend on the understanding between the parties; but if nothing is said or implied about this between them, it is sufficient in New York if B cashes here the claim for the face of the bill as rendered. If, therefore, with this understanding A draws on New York for the face of the bill, he must pay whatever it costs to transfer the result to Wilmington; in other words, the exchange is at A's expense. If there is any doubt about this, it should form part of the terms of the contract at the time it is made.
