It is to be hoped that the House will not agree to the action of the Senate in striking out from the Army Appropriation bill the clause forbidding the use of troops at the polls. The House ought never to agree to that. It means mischief. It means a repetition of violence and intimidation in 1880. The House must stand like an anvil.

It is only too plain that the Radicals in Congress are planning a campaign of outrage. They are desperate. If they cannot by trickery and fraud and violence overcome the Democratic majority in the House they know very well that their chances in the next Presidential election will be too slim for success. Their plans have already been clearly intimated in the STAR.

It is only too plain that the Radicals in Congress are planning a campaign of outrage. They are desperate. If they cannot by trickery and fraud and violence overcome the Democratic majority in the House they know very well that their chances in the next Presidential election will be too slim for success.

A rich scene occurred in the Senate on Saturday. It was the most exciting episode of the session. Senator Burnside objected to the consideration of Mr. Stratton's case, who had been nominated for steamboat inspector in one of the New York districts. This brought the impertinent Conkling to his feet, who then poured out his sarcasms as will and in the most withering style. He characterized the conduct of Gen. Burnside as officious, intermeddling, impudent and impudent, and when Gen. Burnside attempted to interrupt him refused to yield, and demanded of the Chair that his right to the floor should be respected. He said in the most withering style of sarcasm that Gen. Burnside, not content with attending to the affairs of the great State which had sent him to the Senate, was constantly interfering with matters which belonged to the State of New York, and that it was a pity the people of New York, in consideration of his transcendent ability, had not also requested him to act as Senator for that State.

Gen. Burnside was desperately angry, and in reply told the New York peacock that he could not reply in the same style for lack of language, but he would say that he was willing to put his word against that of a man who all those who were associated with him knew him to be a constant and an habitual prevaricator and a teller of untruths.

At this the Chair rapped Gen. Burnside to order very vigorously, and Senators Anthony and Don Cameron rushed around and secured an immediate adjournment.

Spirits Turpentine. — Fayetteville has had but one snow this winter. — The venerable ex-Judge W. H. Battle is very sick at Chapel Hill. — Mr. W. Watson's blacksmith shop and contents were burnt at Fayetteville. — D. H. Hill, Jr., has been elected Captain of the Military Company at Davidson College. — The Lenoir Topic copies from the STAR and credits to another paper. But mistakes will occur in the best regulated office. — The Newbernian has an eloquent and vigorous plea for the Lunatic Asylum, and a strong plea for the retention of Dr. Grisson. — A man named Voltorn attempted to rob Mr. Rube Deaver, of Asheville, in the day. The rogue was knocked down but made his escape. — The Fayetteville Gazette is again on our table. It is still under the management of Mr. J. H. Myrover, who has made great and useful paper for the Fayetteville section. — Hickory Press: The store of Messrs. Williams & Finger, of Newton, was broken into last Tuesday night by Henry Smyre, colored. His entire aim was to obtain money, but to his surprise he only got three dollars. — In Raleigh, last Thursday, a colored man, Ransom Hill, was detained and treated to the hospitality of the station house for trying to pass a bogus check at the State National Bank. The amount was for something like a hundred or more dollars. — Statesville American: About 13 o'clock today, Thursday, an alarm of fire was sounded, which proved to be the two-story frame dwelling located in the eastern portion of town, and occupied by Mr. Yancey and family, who has only recently moved to this place from Caswell county. — Washington Press: We learn that the steamers Pamlico and Newbern have so arranged their trips that one will leave Washington for Norfolk via Newbern, while the other will leave Newbern for Norfolk via Washington. This arrangement gives great satisfaction to this community, as it is one that has been long wished for. — Goldsboro Messenger: We blurtly say to the Democrats of the present General Assembly that the infancy of 1876-77 must not be, and will not be repeating. No Radical magistrates, be they white or black, are wanted in the East; certainly not in the eleven counties of which the Messenger has the honor to be a faithful sentinel on the watch-tower. — Lenoir Topics: The wife of Rev. G. W. Lewis died recently. Gold mine is being carried on to a considerable extent this winter, but very little of the precious metal is being found. The average amount to the man is not more than eleven cents per day; yet they work on unceasingly, ever hoping shortly to realize a fortune. Mr. Will Sumpter, who was severely hurt by the caving of the dirt, a few days since, is improving. — Asheville Citizen: An aged white woman, Mrs. Johnson, the mother of Mr. F. M. Johnson, of this place, while walking down Main street, Monday morning, fell to the ground in front of Brown's tin store. She was at once picked up and conveyed into the residence of Mr. Rube Deaver, and Dr. Summey was called in, but she was already extinct. Her death was doubtless caused by heart disease. — Lincoln Progress: Died on Feb. 5th, 1879, Mrs. Annie Dellinger, aged about eighty-six years. She was an estimable lady and a consistent member of the church. She leaves behind ten children, a twenty grand children, sixty-four great grand children, and one great grand child. — An enthusiastic meeting of farmers at Beech's Chapel, Thursday night, a resolution was passed pledging themselves to purchase commercial fertilizers at the present exorbitant prices. Rather than do so they propose to buy chemicals and make compost instead. — It is with unfeigned sorrow that we announce the death of Isaac Lowe, Esq., which took place at his residence, near Beattie's Ford, in this county, on Monday, February 17th, 1879. — Raleigh Observer: Col. Polk, in his address on Tuesday night, was enumerating impediments to immigration, and mentioned the purchase of a member of the Legislature asked him if he could suggest any plan for its settlement. The Colonel replied that while he was not there to discuss questions of finance, yet he could give him an opinion as to the expediency of it. 1st. If we could secure satisfactory terms for a compromise of the debt. 2d. If we had a more equitable system for assessing property, by which all classes of it could be made to bear its just share of the burden of taxation; and, 3d. If we would arm our officers of the law with a Moffitt Register in one hand and a dog collar in the other we could not only pay the interest on our debt, but could create a sinking fund, and
