Mr. Tennyson received $1,500 for his recent ballad. Considering its quality he may be said to be in Lucknow.

In the Poindexter trial in Richmoud; Va., jurors will have to be obtained from different sections of the State, it being impossible to obtain's jury in Richmond.

Harper and Scribner are incomparably superior to the English illustrated magazines, both as to the quality and number of the illustrations. The New York Evening Post says:

"When one compares such a magazine as Harper's with any or all of the London magazines of the same class, he no longer wonders that not withstanding their specia adaptation to American rather than to English needs, our great illustrated periodicals of this kind are rapidly extending their

The Springfield (Mass.) Republi can-an honest independent paper o decided ability and large influence says the President will sign the Army bill in spite of what newspaper writers say and semi-official assur ances to the contrary. It says:

"There is no valid reason why the President should not sign the bill. He is not the head of a party. He is President. When a bill comes before him, passed by the two chambers, he has but two questions to decide in signing it. Is this legislation constitutional? Is it wise?"

If there should come a dead-lock in the issues now exciting the country, and the President vetoes the bills passed by Congress, what then? The Republicans are going "to die in the last ditch." Their cause is desperate. With them it is bayonets or defeat. No matter if the country is ruined and the people are despoiled; no matter If the ballot-box is over thrown, what care they so the bulldozing party triumphs? What wil the Democrats in Congress do when the final issue is made up? Back down, compromise, or what? The Washington special to the Richmond State of 19th inst., says:

"The more extreme men agree in saying that the contest of the people for free elections and fair juries must be maintained. They do not believe the President will veto the Appropriation bills in their present form, and if he does, say they, then let him take the responsibility of depriving the executive and the judicial departments of the means of support. But there are others who intimate that they will have done their duty when they they will have done their duty when they shall have passed the bills, and if the President disapproves, the Democrats will have to ensure the large that is the weest and most patriotic thing to do. This leads to the opinion that in the event of a dead-lock between the President and Congress, a spirit of compromise will bring about an adjustment, perhaps upon the basis of the repeal of the test oath and of the authority to use troops to keep the peace at the real between the repeal of the deputy the polls, leaving the repeal of the deputy marshal law for next winter. They all say it will be time enough to trouble themselve about these things when the exigency arises, and profess to 'believe that everything will come out right."

The STAR has watched Col. Walter L. Steele's Congressional career with interest. It has long regarded him to a gonleman of real ability and solid worth. On Saturday he made a first rate speech in the House on the Legislative Appropriation bill. We will let the intelligent correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch give an account of the speech and the impression it made. Saturday night he

"At ten minutes to 4 o'clock Mr. Steele, of North Carolina, proceeded to reply to a speech made by Mr. Frye, and the member from Maine, interrupting, said he took back what he then said, viz.; that North Carolina was not chargeable with the ontrages that had marked the conduct of the Bemocrate is other Southern States, for he had since ascertained that she had as many moonshiners and kuklux as the rest of them, and if he were given fifteen minutes them, and if he were given fifteen minutes he would prove he. He told under what wrongs the people suffered when they resorted to the kuklux, and cited recent instances of lynch law to abow that this manner of redressing outrages is resorted to under great provocation even now in States north of the Potomac. He now in States north of the Potomac. He told the story of the rule of ignorant partisan judges in North Carolina, with whom injustice was the rule and righteous decisions the exception, and said the wonder was that the people cadured them so long and so patiently. He also touched upon the negro exodus, and said the North would get tired of it. The speech was a constant. capital one, and Mr. Steele was congrilated at its close."

We like the candor of the Washngion correspondent of the Riel mond State. He is truthful, and has a newspaper conscience. He does not feel himself authorized to puff all the Democrats who speak. They are not all orators by a great deal. He says, for instance, of recent speeches in the Senate:

"The speeches of Senators Randolph and Groome were below the average. They must have disappointed even their friends." Referring to the debates in the other chamber, he said:

"In the House yesterday the Democrats fared no better than in the Senate, Mc-Kinley, of Ohio (Republican) and Burroughs of Michigan (Republican), were pitted against House, of Tennessee, and Coffroth, of Pennsylvania (Democrat). The first two are very good speakers, rather on the spread-eagle order, but their style of delivery was enlivening, and roused considerable enthusiasm among Republi-

Killed by Lightning. | Newbern Nut Shell. ]

A letter received in this city yes-day, gives an account of a most terrible affair which occurred at Adams' Creek on Thursday last, resulting in row escape of another.

Miss Mattie Ireland and Miss Nor Holland were on horseback Thursday, and nearing the home of the latter where both resided, when the two ladies and their horses were stricken to the earth by a thunder bolt. Miss Ireland and her horse were instantly killed. Miss Holland was so severely shocked that up to the hour when the letter was sent off she had remained paralyzed in one side and almost totally blind. The horse on which she was riding was only severely shooked and afterwards recovered.

Miss Ireland was about eighteen years of age, a most beautiful lady, a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and held in high esteem for her piety and amiable disposition.

Mistorical Event. It seems not to be generally known that Gen. Grant visited a this city shortly after the close of the war. Some of ou oldest citizens have denied that such was the fact, but the following from the Wilmington Dispatch of Dec. 1st, 1865, a file of which we were glancing over a day of two since, seems to settle the point: "General U. S. Grant arrived here earl yesterday morning, and, like a sensible man—having travelled all the night before —took a bed at the City Hotel and went to sleep. Having no special business with him, we did not see him; but we learn that, after resting an hour or two, he get up, washed his face and hands—just like other felks—ate his breakfast, and at twelve clock started for Charleston," We do not claim that the visit was a event to boast of, but it is well enough keep correctly informed about even such small matters.

The Truck Gardens. A visit to the various truck gardens the vicinity of this city shows a gratifying state of affairs, considering the prevalence of such unseasonable weather. The garder peas have suffered materially from the cold but cabbage, onlons, beets, cucumbers,&c. though somewhat backward, are looking finely; and even of the peas there is likely to be from one-half to a two-thirds crop. But for the cold spap many of the latter would have been shipped ere this. Capt Wooten lost his entire pea crop, which would have been a large one had the season been favorable.

Narrow Escape.

There was intense excitement yesterday, though it was of short duration, on Front, between Church and Castle streets, caused by a horse, attached to Dr. W. W. Lane's buggy, becoming frightened and plunging southward at "two-forty" speed. The suddenness of the animal's movement unseated Dr. Lane, and he was precipitated from the vehicle almost at the start; but Mr. Brown, who was riding with the Doctor, remained in the vehicle until it came in contact with a lamp-post, two blocks from the starting point, when the collision threw him out. At this point one of the shafts was broken, the horse Decame detached, and, leaving the buggy at a halt, continued his flight for some distance, but, CENTS A BOTTLE. finally becoming weary of the race, was captured.

Dr. Laue's horse was frightened by another horse, but even this would not have rendered him unmanageable had not the reins accidentally slipped from the Doctor grasp. The pleasant part of the affair is that the Doctor and his companion were not injured, and returned to their demicils
