Patterson, who so long a time misrepresented South Carolina, is a thief. He was a committee of one, accompanied by a deputy sergeant-at-arms, to go the Indian Territory to inquire into the interests of the Texas Pacific Railroad. The New York Times says this little trip foots up $17,000. A former committee of six cost $6,000. which was three times too much. Patterson ought to break into the Conkling has again made a very witty speech at Thurman's expense. This time it was because of the rule abolishing the supervisory control of appointments and removals in the Senate which has belonged to the President of that body for sometime. The speech produced great laughter.

The Richmond State's special says: "There is so much in Conkling's manner "There is so much in Conkling's manner and emphasis and gesture, and in the case and rapidity with which he chooses his words, that his best efforts of this kind lose much of their effect when read in print. Thurman was presiding, and therefore made no reply, but he and his party friends enjoyed the speech as much as the Republicans."

re had been guilty of strange forgetfulness in our partial enumeration of Southern poets in our editorial of yesterday. The name of Paul H. Playne is omitted. The forgetfulness is the more strange when we have read all the verse he has published, have often written long and short articles concerning them, and have so good an opinion of much of the work he has done. In our judgment Pee and Harry Timrod alone have equalled or surpassed him among Southern singers.

Edward Glavin for Mayor. A prophet, it has been said once or twice, If we are privileged to change "land" for "city," then we have an illustration at hand. A writer in the Charlotte Observer of yesterday places our former old townsman on the slate for Mayor of that city, and assumes that said Nedward "is a gentleman of excellent moral and mental attainments, and should he become the chief executive of our city, he will endeavor to modify some of the recent ordinances that are now in force. Therefore, being friendly to the cause, we place him in the arena this morning, as he does his celebrated game birds, heeled and equipped to win."

Badly Sold.

The difference between sugar and salts (epsom) may be very small in appearance, but a Fifth Ward Magistrate's experience yesterday abundantly testifies as to the facility with which a taste can detect the one from the other. The grave law dispenser is also a grocer, and visited one of our wholesale establishments as a sampler. A sweet tooth inspired too much zeal, and he did not scruple to thrust into his mouth and swallow at least a cup-full of snow-like sweetness. But, horror of horrors, when too late he found that it was double-concentrated, double-breasted salts. The dose was too much; he heaved, cast up his breakfast, and at last accounts, in spite of Battle's Revisal and its admonitions against peace disturbers, was heaving in a manner so noisy that his neighbors demanded his arrest as a disturber of the peace of the city.
