Attorney General Devens will visit Judge Rives, of Virginia, and talk over the matter of arrests, &c., that has so much stirred the good people of the "Old Dominion."

The Washington Post of Thursday is very confident that "there will be no betrayal or capitulation," and that the Democrats "will stand by their first position," as "it is impregnable." We suppose it means that Congress will vote no supplies until the Prisident signs the repeal of the election laws. It will be seen that various Washington correspondents give another account of the condition of affairs. Which is correct we do not pretend to know.

Up to Thursday afternoon Democrats in Congress were anything else than united as to what was best to do under the circumstances. Many Northern and Western Democrats were for adjourning without making appropriations. Bayard, Cox, Kernan and other conservative leaders did not favor this course. The Washington correspondent of the Richmond State on the 1st inst. says:

"Originally Senators Bayard, Ben. Hill,
Kernan, Coke, Maxey, Whyte, Cockerell,

Kernan, Coke, Maxey, Whyte, Cockerell, and Morgan, and perhaps others, were oposed to the plan adopted under the leadership of Thurman, which has ended in discomfiture. Now they demand that the Legislative bull shall be divested of the election and test oath clauses, and sent to the President in a separate bill.

"This was proposed in the Senate caucus yesterday by Senator Butler, of South Carolina, and was the subject of a good deal of discussion. The drift of epinion was in that direction, because it would be useless to pass the Legislative bill with those clauses, since it is known beyond a shadow of doubt that the President will not apof doubt that the President will not approve it. That would only add to the embarrassment in which they already find themselves in relation to the Army bill. It was agreed to refer the matter to the Executive Committee of the caucus, and await the decision of the House."

The Democratic Senators are not altogether satisfied. The plan adopted originated with Northern Democrats. but the South was saddled with the blame. This and much more leaked | - Weldon News: On Saturday out in the Senate caucus. The State's correspondent says that the best and prevalent epinion is that the Legisla-tive Appropriation bill will be held back, "and that the legislation in controversy should be embodied in one or more separate bills and sent to the President after they shall have been modified in some particular so as to provoke less opposition from tion laws that the Democrats would favor. A special to the Philadelphia Press, Rep., says of the Democratic

"The tone of the discussion in the caucus was decidedly against an adjournment without previously providing the means for carrying on the Government. Some favored the passage of the bills without the political riders and permitting the people to be arbiters. Others Isvored the proposition of extending the appropriations until December; and then renew the contest in the same shape in which it has already been carried on. been carried on.

"The general sentiment of the dadeus was emphatic that the political measures should be passed in an independent bill at any rate, as was urged by many when the question was originally presented, and was overruled by the joint caucus."

It says that the House caucus showed that at least thirty of the members "were in favor of a conservative course." The Philadelphia Times says : Tarohira

"The caucus was far from satisfactory o a majority of those present, some regarding the indications of a partial surrender as too strong, and others considering the extrame element as entirely too anxious to force a conflict with the President at all hazards. There was less harmony at the close than at the beginning. The only thing agreed upon was to refer the whole subject to the Joint Caucus Committee."

Here are some of the prevailing opinions among Democratic Congressmen, as reported for the Richmond State:

"Davis, of West Virginia, says there will be money to run the Government; there need be no alarm on that score. Chalmers, of Mississippi, says the President has left no ground for compromise. Swing says it is an irrepressible conflict beween right and wreng, and the Democrats must stand solid and firm. Williams, of Kentucky: the President's message is impudent. Bright, of Tennessee: There is no cause for alarm; an amicable settlement be reached. Cox, of New Yerk: Somebody will have to back down; we should detach the repealing clause and send it to the President as a separate mea-sure. Carlisle, of Kentucky; We must make a square fight or surrender; and the latter we cannot do

The following is from a letter of

"Morrison says there will be no backing down among Southern men. Proctor Knott is of the opinion that there will be ne compromise. He thinks it possible that in the of the Legislative bill Congress may take a recess until November. Senater Wallace said the talk of compromise was unfounded. There would be no compromise. The Democrats do not intend to back down. If the President would sign the bill by having it modified in some particulars, the Democrats might change the bill, but they will never surrender."

Another Case of Mail Robbery-Preliminary Examination Before U. M. Commissioner McQuigg.

Jas. Davis and Chas. Williams, the two young colored men alluded to in our last as having been arrested on the charge of robbing the mails, the former being already in jail on a charge of larceny, had a hearing before U. S. Commissioner McQuigg yesterday morning. The prosecution relied entirely upon the confession of Jim Davis to a colored preacher by the name of Cæsar Morton, in jail for costs, which was to the effect that himself and Charles Williams, some time in March last, stole and robbed a pouch of mail at Charleston, while it was being transferred, and took it to a lumber yard about a half mile from the depot; that here they stopped and tried to unlock the pouch with a key in the possession of one of them, but failed to accomplish their purpose, whereupon they ripped it open with a knife. They only secured fifty dollars in money from the pouch, which was equally divided between them. Morton says this confession was made before the arrest of George Davis for mail robbery.

Williams, who is implicated in the robbery by his alleged confrere, Jim Davis, stoutly denies any knowledge of the transaction; states that he has not been to Charleston for many months, and that he can prove an alibi when it comes to the

Mr. J. I. Macks appeared for the United

At the time he was arrested he was in the act of selling a side of bacon, weighing about twenty-six pounds, to a countryman for one dollar. In the meantime word was sent to Mr. Gore's clerk, who subsequently identified the prisoner as the man who had been employed at the store the day the lard was missing, and upon whom suspicion had rested as being the guilty party.

We referred a few days ago to a case befere the Toombs Police Court of New York, in which one Lemuel Williams colored, who stated that he belonged in this city, where he now has a mother residing, had brought a charge against the pashier of the Metropolitan Hotel of that city, one Merritt, to the effect that he had swindled him out of the sum of fifty dollars. The case has been continued form day to day, and seems to excite a great deal of interest, Merritt being a man of standing and a nephew of the Collector of the Port. We make a short extract from a long report in the New York Sun: "Williams had been accustomed to say that he was 21 years old; but when he went on board the Supply the officers questioned him about his past life, and, after taking a good look at him, concluded that he was 27. That makes him 28 new. He was bern on the cotton and tobacco plantation of his master, Daniel Moore, of Duplin county, N. C., sixty miles from Wilmington. His mother tended the silk-werms, and, when he was a few years old, he was taken into the house, and thus escaped being a field hand. At the close of the war his father, also named Lemuel, went to Wilmington; where he drove a truck for a Mr. Sullivan. Afterward Colville & Taylor loaned him some money, with which he bought a truck and horses. He soon replaced the loan, and in the course of time became the owner of two houses.

"In the meantime Mr. Colville had taken young Lemuel into his family. Mrs. Col-ville took a fancy to him, and taught him to read, write and cipher. He can cipher in addition, subtraction, multiplication and division. At last he wanted to see the world, and his father said if he'd behave he'd let him go. A place was pened to him as a waiter in the family of Mr. Winchester, a gold broker, 27 Charles street, Baltimore. He next shipped on the Fanita, with Capt. Doane, as steward. She plied between New York and Wilmington. After two years of service as steward on her, he spent a year on the Virginius, which ran between Charleston and Philadelphia."

Hagistrate's Court. A young colored weman, by the name of Missouri Watters, was mulcted in the costs yesterday for making a furious assault with her fists upon one Fred Brown, colored, and knocking him out of his chair.
