Now they are talking of adjourning on Wednesday. We dare them to do it. There now.

It is generally understood in Washington that Hayes will veto the Judicial bill after approving the others.

Since our second page was put in type we learn that Prince Napoleon Victor is the son of Prince Jerome. He is only about nineteen.

Lamar, after waiting to see what Lord Roscoe would do about it, and being satisfied that there will be no coffee and pistols for two, has gone to Mississippi.

We suppose there is no possible way of inducing Jim Blaine and Zach Chandler to go to Zululard. - Richmond State.

If Conkling, Frye, Conger, Garfield and Logan would join that brigade the country would breathe freer, and the Zulus would be in no more danger.

Hayes has done one wise and hamane act. 'He has withdrawn the nomination of Secretary McCrary for District Judge. If the Democrats had allowed the confirmation it would have been afflictive to the country and damaging to justice.

How is this? Evarts says that Hayes will not veto the Judicial bill On the other hand Devens says emphatically that he will. The Richmond Dispatch's special of the 21st says the veto is written. It says further, that if Congress adjourns on Wednesday the President will call it in extra session on Thursday.

It is now believed in New York that the Hull murder will never be explained. An old detective says nothing more is known now than was known at the start. It is conclusively shown that the husband of the cook was not in New York when the murder was committed. He has, how- 26th instant.

warmly praised by Democrats, al though in opposition to their policy. The State's correspondent says: "Kirkwood presented the Republican dea of the power and duty of the General Government to enforce its own laws without authority or assistance from the States. He is usually so silent he has not attracted public attention or been numbered among the ablest Senators. Certainly this speech howed a clear mind and the power to communicate concisely his well-considered views, and it was done with dignity worthy of the Senate and a careful absence of of-fensive language or charges. These ideas he elaborated in such kindly and temperate language, that Ben Hill, following, took occasion to applaud. Hill said it was a speech worthy the dignity of any de-liberative body in the world, and he would hat all debates in the Senate were conducted in the same spirit of frankness and courtesy. On Friday night while Lord Roscoe was orating in his gamest and most efflorescent style, the reporters in the gallery conspired against him, doubtless very much to his annoyance. The correspondent of the State says: "After Conkling had spoken for an hour and a half last night, and the midnight hour had gone without any prospect of his clos-ing, the fifteen or twenty correspondents in the reporters' gallery agreed to put up a joke on him. Every agreed to put up a joke on him. Every one of them got up simultaneously and left the gallery. Sens-tors looked up wonderingly at first and laughed when they saw the joke. Their absence may have shortened his speech, but it was a long time before he concluded. The newspaper fiends marched in as soon as Constant (as he is called) took his speet." as Conkey (as he is called) took his seat."
