It was because seven Democratic Senators were absent that the Republicaus were able to filibuster through two days and nights.

The organs are now saying that the Democrats have again surrendered. The Baltimore American, Rep., predicts that Haves will veto the doubleheaded measure decided upon in Democratic caucus. We will see.

The following is the sub-committee that will visit Kansas during the recess of Congress, if it has one, to investigate the charges against Ingalls, viz: Senators Saulsbury, Bailey, Vance, Cameron of Wisconsin, and Logan.

The Democrats have got themselves in a rather awkward predicament. They cannot adjourn without the aid of the Republicans. Absenteeism does the work. Why do men run for Congress if they do not wish to go if they are elected?

As a "vetoist" Haves is a great failure. Why, Gov. Robinson, of New York, just pulls off his coat and squares himself for a general wholesale business. He has vetoed, however, but 183 bills passed by the recent Legislature. We do not believe that the Governor of a State should be entrusted with the one-man power -power over the life of individuals and of laws. William J. Groome, a young man of respectable family, aged 30, and Joseph H. Clements, about the same murder committed near Vass's Ford. on South Anna river, in Louisa county, Va. The victim was a young colored woman. They are now in jail, and the evidence against them is conclusive. Clements is anxious te confess his share in the bloody

It appears that Senator Vance has been misrepresented as to his attitude in the Lamar-Conkling flasco.

Christine Cox, the murderer of Mrs Hull, has a wife in Richmond, Va. His mother also resides there. The State says: "When she heard that her husband had been arrested for this murder, she gave an cjaculatory grunt, "Umph! dar, my Lord, so, glad. I knew dat was a bad nigger." he has continued to manifest her gratification at this misfortune which has been visited upon her recreant husband. She is fifty five years of age. Her marriage took place in Gen. Moore's house. She is a large woman, while her husband is not above medium size, and about thirty-five years of age. She represents Cox as having been a "mean nigger," which means a bad

In none of the Southern cities visited by yellow fever last year is there any case of the dread disease On the 20th official reports were received from most of the afflicted cities and towns of 1878, and the health reports were unusually satisfactory. A dispatch from Memphis, dated 24th, says:

"In no instance has there been any indications of a return of yellow fever. Better health than usual at this season of the year prevails, and every prevention that saniary regulations can suggest has been accomplished toward preventing a recurrence of last year's epidemic. Quarantine regu-lations have been established ready to be enforced should exigency arise."

Let us keep our eyes directed seaward. Perhaps our main danger lies in that direction.

The Ohio Editorial Association has been interviewed by the Grant organ, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and the results were not pleasing to that nice sheet. Most of the editors are Sherman. The remainder are divided among Grant, Blaine, Conkling and Garfield. It is a Republican concern of course. We find the folwing account of the "cheeky" way in which the interviewing was done:

As the editors bore down upon St. Louis the Globe-Democrat dispatched a corps of interviewers to meet them on the train. There were eighteen of them, and they were provided with cards as follows: "Globe-Democrat Interviewing Corps-With Malice Towards None, but With Questions for All. 'A S ft Answer Turneth Away To prevent confusion and a repetition of the interviewing process, each of the reporters carried with him pink card board checks, in size and style like a conductor's check, as follows: "Pumped-Keep this check in sight to avoid further Delinquent Tax Listers. We intended to mention the fact, yesterday, that the books of the Assessor show that there are more than five hundred delinquent tax listers in this city. These may regard themselves as escapes, and vainly imagine that the war is over; but let such remember that under the law they are liable for this neglect to fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the Criminal Court. The State law makes the omission to list a misdemeanor, and as a large majority of the delinquents may have procrastinated in the matter without any purpose to evade their duty, we hope the Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners may see proper to give another opportunity to escape the penalty the statute denounces against them.

Runaway and Smash-up on the

Wednesday evening, about 81 o'clock, party of three young men from this city. who went down in a rockaway to Wrightsville Sound that morning, having with them a colored boy for driver, met with quite a serious accident to their equipage They were standing in Mr. Bishop's yard. engaged in conversation, the vehicle mean while being left in charge of the boy, who having by some means imbibed rather freely of whiskey, laid down in the rockaway and went to sleep. In the meanwhile a colored boy belonging on the sound. thinking he would have some fun, tied pack of fire-crackers to a dog's tail, set fire to them and turned him loose. The dog ran frantically hither and thither, the centre of a grand pyrotechnic display, the shooting crackers causing him to almost go mad in his efforts to escape the fate which seemed impending over him, and, finally, running furiously in the direction of the waiting rocksway, with its unconscious burthen, when the horse became frightened and dashed madly down the slight declivity in the direction of the turnpike. collided with a tree and smashed the vehicle, and then ran with the broken shafts still attached to him to the vicinity of Capt. C. D. Myers' house, where he was finally halted.

In the meantime the alarm had reached the party of young men, who set out with saddened countenances and broken spirits to search for the bruised and mangled body of the unfortunate driver. They found the tree which had sustained the shock of the collision with the rocksway badly bruised and scarred, the ruins of the vehicle strewn around, and in the midst of the debris the form of the poor driver, who was-still asleep! the furious runaway and the shock of the final catastrophe having failed to arouse him from his sound slumber. It was thought at first however that he was dead, and the services of a young physician, who was near the scene, were called into requisition, while all the ladies in the neighborhood rushed forward with all the bottles of physic they could hurried. ly muster, but fortunately there was no necessity for medicines or medical treatments The darkey was the only object that came out of the wreck unscathed.

Captured. Last evening, as Mr. H. Hensel, clerk for Mr. L. Vollers, was on the eve of closing the store, he discovered what he at first supposed was a pair of pantaloons that some one had left in the establishment, and which had apparently fallen from their place of deposit between two barrels of whiskey. Before making an effort to pick them up, however, he ascertained that a pair of stout legs were encased in the dilapidated garment, when he closed the door and gathered a son of Ham of fine proportions. He then summoned an officer and had the intrusive darkey marched off to the guard house for appearance before acting Mayor Flanner this morning. It may be remembered that Mr. Vollers was victimized some months since by a number of articles being stolen, and it may be that the present arrest will furnish a key by which the perpetrator of the earlier theft can he discovered.

This occurrence should induce business men to adopt Mr. Hensel's plan and inspect their premises thoroughly before closing at
