By WILLIAM H. BERNARD. WILMINGTON, N. C.: TUESDAY MORNING, July 8, 187 THE GREAT QUESTION FOR 1880.

The Republican leader or organ generally assumes two points as established whenever he thinks of the South or writes concerning the States. He assumes that the States have no rights, and that the appeal to arms on the part of the South altered altogether the Constitution of the United States. There is no more dangerous or deceptive heresy or assumption. The States have rights, and the issues of the war did not change the Constitution of the United States only so far as the three new amendments concerning slavery affected it. When Senator Hampton said that the war had not changed the relation of the States, the organs took him to task for such an opinion, and coolly in formed him that when the South was whipped it meant something. H was told that in 1880 he would find out that the North regarded the re sults in a very different light.

The debates in the late extra session, as well as the leaders in Republican newspapers, all point clearly to one purpose—that the States shall have no rights, that State lines shall be obliterated, and that henceforth there shall be a great "Nation," with all of the powers of a great "Nation." The fight is to be waged on that issue. Hampton and others are given to understand Northern people mean to teach the South that "it was not whipped in vain," to quote the words of the Cincinuati Gazette. It is to be a struggle between a constitutional, free government regulated by law, each State having reserved rights and local selfgovernment, and a consolidated despotism-a strong, centralized government called a "Nation"

It is about time that the Radicals had clearly defined their position. If the war did make fundamental changes in the structure of our government-the government of our forefathers-it is high time that the country had learned wherein. If the Union has been restored only in part it is well that we should all know it. What part was changed, and what part remains? The St. Louis Republican has this to say, and it is

"If the Union and the constitution have been left in what may be called a muti-lated condition, of what use was the war waged in their behalf? If the war left them in their original condition, complete and perfect, how can the relations of the States be any different in 1879 from what they were in 1860? These questions are

The fight in 1880 must and will settle this question, for the Radicals must be forced to take position squarely and firmly. They must not faculty is composed of six professors. be allowed to dodge the issue. They Daring the year there were 114 stitution of the United States. In 1880 the Stalwarts must not only be met but overwhelmed. The St. Louis issue after this sort. It says:

"One of three things must be done with 'the solid South?' Either it must be let alone entirely, which would be a flat repudistion of the winning issue, or the Southern States must be reduced to military provinces and governed by military viceroys. or negro and carpet-bag rule must be re-established and maintained by Federal bayonets. The military system would be formal announcement that the Union and Constitution had ceased to exist. The re-establishment of negto and carpetbag rule would be a repetition of an experiment which has already failed disastrously, and can never by any possi-bility succeed. Which horn of the dilemma will the Republican party take? If the solid Democratic South is to be broken up—as the 'stalwarts' insist, that result can only be accomplished in one of the two ways mentioned, and as the Southern people will never voluntarily reduce themselves from citizens to subjects, or wear the negro and carpet-bag yoke-force must be employed, not temporarily, but permanently. If the Republican party is pre-pared to adopt this method of treatment, with all the inevitable consequences attached thereto, let it say so openly and boldly. If it is not prepared so to do, ther it is fighting on a platform of falsehood."

This is admirably stated. It is condensed and pointed. We regard the campaign of 1880 as every way more important to the country than that of 1876 was. It is more impor tant to the South, because all of the disturbing questions of 1876 are to be fought over, and then there is the additional one indicated abovewhether the war changed the fundamental principles of the Constitution or not, and if it so changed, what parts were affected by it?

The people of North Carolina must remain true to themselves. None but uncompromising States Rights Democrats ought to be placed on guard. It is not a time for compromise or hesitation. No man ought to be voted for who is not the friend of pure, good, honest government, who has not an unsullied political record though all the trying past, and who does not steadfastly hold to the teachings and principles of the Constitution of the United States, both in spirit and letter. Men who have not been firm and true and devoted to the people of the State throughout all of their troubles and oppressions are not to be trusted in 1880. Nominate no man for office who is not of unblemished character, and, like Cæsar said his wife Cornelia must be, "above sus-

WILMINGTON AND THE WEST. Encouraging words are heard al along the line of the proposed new railway that, when completed, is to connect Wilmington with the Yadkin Valley and the fertile country and rich mines beyond. The press is constantly agitating the important subject. What is needed is enthusiasm, and this enthusiasm should find expression in practical action. What does Wilmington propose to do in the premises? Our people should be moving in the matter. Time is money. No people will be so much benefited by this great highway of travel and transportation as the people of Wilmington. The people of the West are looking to the chief seaport to see what its business men are doing, or what they propose to do.

The closing of New Inlet is attracting much attention. It is regarded as so important that its successful completion should be marked by a grand celebration, and the people all along the new railway line should be invited to come "with their cousins, their sisters and their aunts." The Pittsboro Record has a long and timely editorial on the subject of Wilmington and its future. It is so kind and generous and appreciative in tone and sentiment that we take leave to copy a paragraph. It "If the proper depth of water is obtained, and vessels of heavy tonnage be enabled to cross the bar, and the port of Wilmington be open to the shipping of the world, there is no reason to doubt but that this will attain an equal rank with the leading cities of the Atlantic coast. And to aid in accomplishing this, should be the pride and leasure of all true North Carolinians. It is a shame that the products and resources of our State should be used to build up other States to the detriment of our own. Wilmington can offer the proper shipping facilities for our products, i is to our interests (laying aside feelings of State pride) to build that city. It is the nearest sea-coast city to all the great middle section of North Carolina, much nearer than Norfolk or Charleston. The building of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad will make Wilmington the outlet of the products of the richest section of the State. This road will in a great measure accomplish the object for which so much money was uselessly expended on Deep River, and that is the opening of an avenue of communication between this section and the sea-coast. As sufficiently important to demand prompt and satisfactory answers."

the streams of this section seek and find an outlet through the Cape Fear at Wilmingoutlet through the Cape Fear at Wilming-ton, so naturally should our products."

We have received a catalogue of Triaity College for 1878-79. The are constantly ridiculing the idea of matriculates. Of these 37 were in the

Since 1855 it has conferred the degree of A. M. on fifteen persons other than graduates. It has during the same time conferred the degree of D. D. on 17 persons. Of these 5 were members of the North Carolina Conference, M. E. Church. Judges Kerr and Merrimon have been made will be remembered that the STAR contained two notices, somewhat elaborate, of Col. D. K. Mc-Rae's two lectures, in which very great merit was claimed for them. Doubtless there were those who did not hear the lectures who thought the praise excessive, but whatever may have been the defects of the criticism there was nothing extravagant in what was said. We believe that Col. McRae is the most brilliant and successful lecturer in the South. We would like to see him stand before a Boston audience composed of its best culture and brains and deliver his magnificent lecture on "Genius and Talent," or his more philosophical and less popular lecture on "Laughter." The plaudits would be long and hearty no doubt.

We are led to make these remarks because of a recent criticism of the lecture on "Genius and Talent;" from the pen of a gentleman of literary taste and good attainments, and who writes with scholarly ease and elegance. In the last number of the North Carolina Presbyterian, Rev. W. S. Lacy has a very pleasing notice of the lecture delivered at Davidson College. It is so just and felicitous, we avail ourselves of the cream of the criticism for our own readers:

"It was understood at the reporter's table that he did not wish the lecture reported. Fortunate for us—for we could only listen, entranced. His manner was nervous, lightly dramatic, impressive; his voice, though not full, was clear, incisive, ringing; his appearance dignified, and distinguished; his matter-well, adjectives fail. There were fine thought, high culture, elethese did not constitute the ravishing charm of his eloquence, which, to me, lay in the perfect finish of his style—at times flowing, easy; again terse, even jagged—always the very garb for the idea presented. As I listened I thought of marshalled troops, gleaming arms, flying pennons, all with precision, and power, and beauty, sweeping the field. Or else the sentences seemed like a costly array of jewels: cut, polished, glistening. There was oft times the sharp angle of a diamond, also its piercing blaze, while anon the soft lustre of rare pearls ravished the soul. I speak thus of the style: I can give you no idea of it without elaborate citation. A generous use of wide reading and profound and elegant study adorned the address throughout. The applause was most hearty and most appreciative."

The Petersburg Appeal is banging away at a couple of sensible Virginia papers which advise against further observances of rebel memerial day.—Phila. Press, Rep.

We hope that the South will not abandon the beautiful custom of strewing flowers on the graves of the noble boys who wore the gray. Let it grow in interest. No just man can object to it. Let the heathen rage.

We wrote that Sarah Bernhardt was a histrionic genius. We never heard that she wrote history although she writes art criticisms.

DR. SATCHWELL AT THE UNI-VERSITY NORMAL SCHOOL.

Dr. Satchwell was enthusiastically received. The lecture began at 8 o'clock and the old chapel was crowded with ears eager to hear and with minds willing to digest. His main subject was School Hygiene. After a short review of the rise and advancement of physiological science, he devoted himself to the issue in hand. His address was of a character to take in domestic sanity, and the necessity of a reform in those general supervisors of individual and public health. The Doctor stood on the broad platform of open air, pure water, thorough drainage, wholesome food and good cooking. His views were revolutionary in regard to the customs of society and the habits of our people, in these vital relations of health, comfort and success in life, as growing out of the laws of physiology, and established doctrines of family and school hygiene. He addressed himself to these sanitary questions in that able and practical manner so characteristic of the man, and his voice grew bold and fearless when he spoke of grand triumph of sanitary principles leading to the establishment of a new department of public health in North ing the children, and he depicted the litive in her identification. horrors of indigestion with such force and earnestness that the teachers will study hours, removal of those straight back seats and old-fashioned desks, and the institution of scientific methods of ventilation. In conclusion, he made strong ap peals to teachers of the State to go out and teach the laws of nature, and to see that her demands were carried out. The sound of his last words was drowned in the immense applause; and everybody believed that as Health is placed first in a pupil's education, so the lecturer stands pre-eminent for force, earnestness and strength.

CURRENT COMMENT.

--- The extra session shows that there is no longer any sectional ques tion to disturb the perfect union of all the States - that notwithstanding the efforts of the Radicals to disparage the South, the Southern Senators and Representatives in Congress are solidly united with Northern Democrats to preserve and defend the rights of the people under a strict construction of the Constitution. The extra session, notwithstanding all the bitterness of feeling engendered between individual members, has done much to re-establish the Union, on the basis of purely constitutional government, which clearly defines the respective powers of the Judicial, Legislative and Executive Departments. - Greenville (S. C.) News, Dem.

-- The first proof of our statement concerning a second extra session and the conspiracy on foot in Administration circles to render the reconvening of Congress a necessity, came to light yesterday, in the announcement that charges had been preferred against Marshal Fitzimmons, of Georgia, and had been taken under advisement by the de facto President. Fitzimmons, it must be remembered, is the only Democratic Marshal in the country. In order to carry out the game detailed yesterday successfully it will be necessary to replace him with a Radical, and that as soon as possible. The preliminaries seem to be finely arranged. Further developments in the case the country will watch with interest .-Wash, Post, Dem.

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

It seems to be the fashion to depreciate the living and extravagantly eulogize the dead; simple justice to both would be better. I love to honor our illustrious dead; North Carolina was never more represented in Congress, never had more virtue and talent subject to order at home.

J. H. Mills, in Raleigh News.

As we said in the outset, we don't take stock to any great extent in a number of Democrats who now, by force of political hicanery, are assuming to lead the party. We think the speedy disbandment of a certain Mutual Admiration, help me and I'll belp you Society would conduce to the benefit of the party at large, but at the same time we are too good a party man and believe too firmly in party discipline to aid in holding up to public condemnation even the members of this society, knowing that such a purpose will be seized upon by our political opponents, having in view the downfall of the Democracy and the re-establishment of Radical rule and ruin. - Oxford

[Financial Chronicle.] THURSDAY, P. M., July 3, 1879 .-The movement of the crop, as indicated by our telegrams from the South to-night, is given below. For the week ending this evening (July 3), the total receipts have reached 3,008 bales, against 6,293 bales last week 7,188 bales the previous week, and 6.612 bales three weeks since, making the total receipts since the 1st of September, 1878, 4,423,911 bales, against 4,243,264 bales for the same period of 1877-8, showing an increase since September 1, 1878, of 180,647 bales. The details of the receipts for this week (as per telegraph) and for the corresponding weeks of three previous years are as follows:

since Sept 1, 4,423,711 4,243,2643,944,758 4,064,770 The exports for the week ending this evening reach a total of 9,268 bales, of which 7,379 were to Great Britain, 1,000 to France, and 889 to rest of the Continent, while the stocks as made up this evening are now 180,4

From the foregoing statement it will be seen that, compared with the corresponding week of last season, there is a decrease in the exports of this week of 5,762 bales, while the stocks to-night are 21,510 bales more than they were at this time a year Something Good to Eat.

L'ATRACT from the North Light Bulletin.—In a correspondence to the above roted Journal, under date of June 30th, Mr. Entre F. Mayton, (of the firm of Mayton, Coleman & Co., manufacturers of fine woolen cloths), writes:

* * * * * Of the pleasant hours spent in Wilmington. N. C., the most pleasant of them all was experienced at 27 Market Street, better known to the trade as *Otterbourg's' Men's Wear Bepet and Merchant Tailoring Establishment. I was greatly surprised when told that the business was so lately established, only one year since its foundation, and one would think—looking on as I did for an hour—that it would almost be impossible to gain the confidence of the people, and build up the trade, which is now large, and which soon promises to become extensive, as this house has, as I learn, already accomplished. My letter is already toe lengthy. In my next I will write of the magnificent and stylish stock of Clothing, &c., sold at OTTERBOURG'S Men's Wear Depot.
