The great day of heat in St. Louis last year, during which such a large number of deaths occurred from overheat, was July 18th. Saturday was probably the hottest day in Wilmington during the century. The thermometer at 3 o'clock P. M. stood at 99 in our office, which is a favorable situation near the river. It was over 100 in many localities. It stood 143 in the sun. It reminded us of what a humorous correspondent once wrote us concerning the heated term in a certain North Carolina town. He said it was so hot that it was a common thing to see a pair of empty boots standing on the street, and a copious stream of grease running along the pavement. The owner had simply evaporated, or rather, had been boiled down and converted into a stream of lard.

. Yes, of course, Secretary Sherman is in earnest. He is consumed with the desire of being President. He means to have the nomination if it is possible by the use of all sorts of means to secure it. He is the only obstacle that stands in the way of Grant. He is busy at work in the Southern States, and the first thing Ike Young will know his head will begin to swim. Sherman knows that he is for the "two G's." The Washington letter to the Baltimore Sun

The Heated Term.

During a very hot spell of weather there

Yesterday afternoon, at half-past four o'clock, at the City Hall, in the Treasurer's office, the thermometer marked 100 degrees. The instrument was placed in accordance with the above rule. This was undoubtedly the hottest day experienced in this city in twenty-five years, a fact in regard to which there seems to be very little dif-

Several penitents have presented themselves for prayer, and there have been several conversions, with the prospect of a glorious revival of re-

Thermometer Record. The following will show the state of the thermometer, at the stations mentioned, at 4.31 yesterday evening, Washington mean time, as ascertained from the daily bulletin issued from the Signal Office in this city:

Our city was the scene of one of the most terrible tragedies that has ever occurred within its limits. In the very heart of the town, in a crowded thoroughfare, thronged with Saturday night purchasers, a woman was deliberately murdered, and in a few minutes later, in a retired back lot, only a few blocks distant, the closelypursued, desperate murderer deliberately sent his own soul to join his victim.

About 11 o'clock last night the victim of the murder, a very bright mulatto named Mary Ratcliff, was going up Market street with a colored man named Jim -, who cooks for William Marstellar, at a stall in the Market House. When they arrived abreast of the furniture store of Messrs. Behrends & Munroe, at the intersection of Second street, they met up with James Heaton, a well known young white man about town, whose paramour the young woman is notoriously reported to have been for several years past. There are rumors of a quarrel between Heaton and herself on Thursday and she is said to have gone down to Smithville Friday for the purpose of avoiding him, having stated to parties on the boat that she wanted to get out of town for she was afraid he would kill her. When Heaton met her last night. he is said to have asked her to give him her hand. She refused his request, which was several times repeated. Finally Heaton drew a pistol and fired three shots at the woman in rapid succession, two of which struck in the street, but one of them took deadly effect in her body. The ball, as was subsequently discovered on the physician's examination, entered just below the right collar bone, and passed directly in, entering the right lung about the apex and severing an artery in its passage, which caused internal bemorrhage, producing death in about fifteen

As soon as the pistol shots were heard, Officer O'Brien, who was on the opposite side of the street, rushed over, and saw Heaton as he turned and fled. Officer O'Brien pursued him up Market street to Third, and saw him turn up Third to Princess and further pursued him up Princess to Fourth street, where he lost sight of him.

of the deceased woman, on Third, between Brunswick and Bladen streets.

In the mean time the police, under the that a man had shot a woman down there and that he (Heaton) was trying to head

About the time that Mary Ratcliff died information was brought to the Chief of Police that a pistol shot had been heard in a vacant lot known as the old Morris lot, on Fourth between Princess and Chesnut streets. We should have mentioned in the proper place that Officer O'Brien reported having heard a pistol shot soon after losing sight of Heaton, and located the report, to the best of his judgment, on the corner of Fifth and Chesnut streets.

On receipt of this intelligence Capt. Brock caused a search to be made in the vacant lot where the shot was said to have been fired and grouns further reported to have been heard. Capt. Goodman and Officers Everett and Walker were dispatched on this duty, and ordered to take a lantern and search every part of the lot. Subsequent developments confirmed the fact that the fugitive must have gone in the course followed by the officers in their search. On Fourth street, leading into the back yard of Mrs. Fulton's premises, a large gate, being partly ajar, opens up a dark passage which must have seemed a friendly shelter to the criminal in his flight. Darting into this retreat, he must have followed it to the outhouses in the rear of the residence mentioned and then taking an outlet at right angle: to his first course, he found himself in the large vacant lot. In the most remote corner of this enclosure the officers found him, lying flat upon his back with a bullet hole through the right temple, alive but breathing heavily, the pistol as if just dropped from his nerveless hand, evidencing that the last act of this terrible tragedy was

TYRE STREET, STREET, ALL W. It was evident that Heaton was in that state of haste and desperation as to anticipate capture every minute. He lay at the foot of a high fence which he had evidently attempted to scale, but in all probability missed his footing and fearful of capture put the pistol to his head and fired in sheer

Dr. King was summoned and examined the wound. The ball entered the right temple, from which the brain was oozing, and lodged in the head. It would have passed entirely through the head, but for the weapon having been held so close.

scorched from the explosion of the charge. The pistol, which lay by his side, and with which the fearful double deed of murder and suicide was committed, was an old-fashioned Colt's belt pistol, about 32-inch calibre, constructed on the old percussion-cap style. Four cylinders were found discharged and a fifth remains Dr. King at once declared the impossi bility of his recovering, though he admitted that life might not be extinct for seve

When the Coroner arrived the same heavy breathing continued, and after he had viewed the body and surroundings, the same ambulance that had taken the body of Mary Ratcliff home conveyed the almost lifeless form of James Heaton to the same house. When the ambulance arrived there, which was about 1.30 o'clock this A. M.; the driver reported Heaton still breathing, but on examination by the physicians he was found to be dead. .

The two corpses are now both lying in he same house. James Heaton was a fine looking young man, about 32 or 33 years of age, a son of Hon. David Heaten, of Ohio, but who represented the Second North Carolina District in Congress under the reconstruction acts. He was a man of wild and dissolute habits, of very respectable and genteel appearance when sober, but filled with desperation when drunk. Last night, however, he seems to have been deliberately sober. His record has been by no means peaceful or reputable, and is too well known throughout the State to require rehearsal | WE QUARANTEE A LARGE SAVING TO ALI

Mary Ratcliff, we think, was a native here, a fine-looking mulatto woman, about twenty-eight or thirty years old, in appearance almost a quadroon, and who has for long years past been devoted to her murderer.

The Coroner's inquest will probably be held to-day.

A large crowd at once collected around the body of the woman, Drs. Lane, King, Burbank and Walker among them, all but the latter of these medical gentlemen arriving before death occurred. On the arrival of the Coroner, the body was taken in an ambulance and conveyed to the house direction of their efficient Chief, Capt. Brock, were scouring the streets in every direction in search of Heaton. The route he had taken, as followed by Officer O'Brien, was further confirmed by the testimony of two gentlemen who met Heaton at the corner of Third and Princess streets, running with a pistol in his hand. He was interrogated by one of the gentlemen as to the cause of the shooting down the street, and he replied
