2,800. A letter in the Louisville Courier-Journal says:

"Merchants are closing their stores and removing their merchandise. The town begins to look like some "banquet hall deerted.' Those who passed through last year's epidemic are as much excited and year's childenic are as much excited and are leaving as rapidly as those who are not exempt. Drs. Crait and Johnson, Com-missioners appointed by the National Board of Health, the first to investigate the fever, the latter to report on the sanitary condi-tion of the intected districts, arrived here this morning. Both say they have not seen a healthier locality—natural drainage ex-cellent, sanitary condition good.

Louisville, Ky., opened wide its doors last year to all refugees. It is growing a little more careful, and the Board of Health has issued instructions as to the disinfecting of all baggage. No person can leave the city without having baggage checked by a quarantine officer. There are four mported cases and all are doing well. There is one imported case at St. Louis and one at Cincinnati.

Col. Keating, the humane editor of the Memphis Appeal, is in Washington. He thinks the virulence of the fever is passed, and that it cannot spread very greatly for the want of material to feed upon. He thinks further that business will be going on as usual in the course of six weeks. We trust his hopes and expectations will be fully realized.
