How to Preserve Watermelone.

For a steady diet watermelons can hardly be recommended for their health-giving and strength-sustaining qualities, although they may add considerably, at the time, to the avordupois of the individual who manages to get away with one or two good-sized ones at a sitting. In fact we have known an employer "on the wharf" to refuse to hire an apparently rotund and able-bodied "man and brother" simply because his ostensible diet during the summer months was watermelons and crackers, arguing that it would take three long hours to get fifteen cents worth of barrel-rolling out of him. But be this as it may, there be those in these parts who dote on watermelons, and who mark their disappearance as the season wanes with sorrow and regret. To such persons, and for their especial benefit we offer the following information, which will enable them to revel in the sweets of their favorite fruit all the year around, if they have the means to enable them to gratify their aquatic tastes in this direction. It was sent to us by a ady friend, who says she sends it as she received it, perbatim et literatim, vouching for it, however, as being successfully tried in past seasons, viz: die anii .figia ani

"If you want to know how to keep watermelons all winter I can just tell you, and this is how I does it. I takes them and gives them a coat of varnish every day for four days, and then pute them away. They will keep all wanter, and be just as fresh as when pulled from the vine."

Deadly Assault with a Ham Bone. A small white boy, about two feet high, by no means robust and said to be 10 years of age, was arrested and brought, before a magistrate yesterday for committing an assault and battery on a colored boy of about the same age. It appeared in the evidence that the two boys got into a fight, the colored boy striking the first blow, when the white boy k nocked the young son of Ham down with a ham bone. There was no evidence adduced to show the size, weight or shape of the storesaid ham-bone, but it must have had weight, for the youthful thrower was adjudged guilty and ordered to be committed to jail for the coats. And to jail he would undoubtedly have gone, but for the interference of some gentlemen who brought the matter before Judge Meares, in Chambers, who enlightened the magistrate on a few points of law, when the late ter dismissed the case.

As a consequence the party had to dispute the possession of the sands with the sand-fiddlers all night.

A Case of Bestirutton. A case of destitution in our midst has been brought to our attention which appeals strongly to the charitable. A family of eight or ten persons, it is represented to us, living on Second, between Hanover and Brunswick streets, (over the railroad), have all been down sick, were unable to help each other, and are suffering for the necessaries of life. We are informed that Walter Harrison, former cory well known resident of this city, was seen in New York a few days ince. He had just landed from one of the European steamers and was en route for San Francisco. Walter is well prepared for his new Westernihome, as he graduated ong since in "the ways that are dark and the tricks that are vain" for which the Blacking at the "Pint." An anxious country friend, in town yeserday, asks that a deputation of drummers oe sent to Point Caswell, as he is afraid that the stock of blacking there has given out, seeing, as he says, a prominent and worthy citizen of that locality step off the steamer less when she arrived last evening with a thick spread of stove-polish on the covering to his pedal extremities.

There was no session of the City Court esterday morning, Mayor Fighblate being too un well to preside. Two simple cases of "drunk and down" were on hand for trial. The parties were remanded for to-
