A Daring Attempt at Hobbery. A daring but unsuccessful stiempt was made Sunday night to rob the residence of Anthony Morgan, colored, on Princess, be tween Tenth and Eleventh streets. It seems that Morgan's little girl, as she was about to retire, discovered an object resembling man under the bed. She called her mother' attention to the fact, and the old woman ridiculed the idea; but just at this momen the footsteps of Morgan were heard approaching from another part of the house, when, sure enough, out sprang a colored individual from beneath the bedstead, who quickly disappeared through a window in the room which the thief himself had opened, and through which he had effected an entrance. Morgan pursued the man but failed to overtake him. Upon return ing he found the hat and shoes of the fellow outside the house, where he had left then when he entered the building.
