WILMINGTON, N. C.: THURSDAY MORNING, Nov. 6, 1879.

NEW YORK-1880.

The result in New York is not a surprise to the STAR, whatever it may be to more sanguine calculators. We anticipated the result both in Ohio and New York. The only surprise to us, and it is a most gratifying one, is that the majority of the remainder of the Democratic ticket promises to be larger than we supposed it would be. We frequently told our friends that Robinson would be defeated, but we had strong hopes of electing the remainder of the ticket. We could not see how Robinson could be elected with Kelly's defection. We supposed, however, that the unfortunate split would so affect the vote for Lt? Governor as to very greatly reduce the usual Democratic majority. But this does not appear to have been the case, if we may judge of the general result by the very large majority of Clarkson Potter in New York city, according to the last reports on Tuesday night, when it was placed at 45,-000. It is proper to say that at the time we write no later news has been received, and our reflections are based upon the reports in yesterday's paper. If it should turn out that the bloodyshirt campaign has not caused the Democrats to lose in the rural districts we shall be disappointed also in our calculations. It was to be expected that in the commercial centres the Democrats, when united, would publicans will have the Legislature. Supposing that the Democrats have elected their State ticket with the exception of the Governor, what then? The result shows clearly that New York is Democratic-that when they unite and work they can give the 35 electoral votes to their candidate. It shows that New York is safe for the Democrats in 1880 if the right man is nominated. Who that man is it is not for the STAR to say. It may be Bayard or Church, or some other man. The showing for 1880 is that with New York and Indiana, the South, if united, can elect a Democratic ticket. Tilden and Hendricks, or Bayard and McDonald, or, Church, of New York, and McDonald, of Indiana, may be the ticket, or it may be some other. But which? There is the rub. New York must be carried and Indiana must be carried. New York gives 35 and Indiana 15 electoral votes. The South has 138. These will elect, as 185 is necessary, and they give jointly 188 electoral votes.

be able to hold their own. The Re-

It will be absolutely necessary that the Southern States should all go Democratic, unless we can carry Connecticut, New Jersey and California, or enough of these to make up any loss. The South will go "solid" if the right man is nominated.

Mr. Tilden, it is thought, cannot carry South Carolina, Louisiana, Florida, and perhaps one or two other of the States. He risked all in crushing Tammany. He insisted that Robinson should be the candi, with aiding their party in "National" date. He declared he could elect He made the issue. Kelly and his friends said that they would support any other man than Robinson, and said the latter, it shall be Robinson, and I will crush you-I will so much crush you that New York politics for Governor in New York. Sh far received can be relied on, went Cornell from being restored to soon. I propose as soon as he is heard then Tilden failed in his chief his place in the New York Custom issue-in the chosen point of his as- House, that such an act would prave sault. Tammany defeats his man "serious injury to the public sevi of the Democratic ticket. This re- in the dark as to how this "serious Mr. Tilden's changes for the nomination. His opponents in the South will feel strengthened, and his chan- toss of public revenue and an ed ces for securing the vote of several Southern States in convention will be certainly materially diminished.

The STAR has no choice in the matter only so far as the question of sucdess is to be considered. It favors the man who can win-who is most certain to receive the largest vote. The question is—who is that man from the outlook now before us, it may be Church, of New York, and McDonald, of Indiana.

The election in the other Northern States does not appear to furnish much comfort for our side. The reult in Connecticut is very unsatisfactory and looks as if that State night be placed in the Republican olumn in 1880. Ben Butler makes rather surprising run in Massachusetts, but he is defeated by a much better man. The Democrats mainly supported him, as Adams's vote small. It may be that the above speculations will have to be altered by the election returns that will be received before we go to press. On our first page we shall have something else to say at a later hour.

AN OHIO EDITOR ON THE RESULT. According to Mr. Murat Haleton the able editor of the Cine

Commercial, the Democrats made a very extraordinary fight in the late election in Ohio. Be it remembered that Halstead is a Republican, and the ablest journalist of his State. His opinion of the remarkable exhibit of strength made by the Democrats, under the circumstances, is worth considering surely, and shows there is immense vitality in the party in Ohio. In fact, if Mr. Halstead does not overstate the case, there are some grounds of hope that Ohio may even vote with the Demograts in 1880 if a strong ticket is nominated. But of course Ohio will not be counted in any estimates of probable success that may be.

The points given by the editor of the Commercial are of interest enough to be copied. Mr. Halstead does not feel any sense of exultation over the defeat when he views the field. He says:

"The most remarkable thing about that election seems to me to be that when the Democracy were so manifestly in the wrong on the National, State and municipal issues; when the assassination of Dixon and the acquittal of the Chisholm murderers had intensified the public feeling about the methods that insure the solidity of the South: when the Democratic candidate for Governor was the most flagrant representative of inflation ideas, and was persistent in asserting them to the last in the face of accomplished resumption; with millions of gold pouring into the country every week, with our great harvest, with the very weather coming area in the early days of Occ. ther coming, even in the early days of Ocober, hot and dry to perfect the corn by hardening it in the ear and making all the other crops good; when every furnace in Ohio was lighted up and the smoke of the chimneys greeted you at every manufacturing centre; with the Democratic candidate on record as declaring that resumption would bring ruin, and that it rould take an army of 100,000 men to keep the people down in case they undertook to force reamption; when, owing to the jeal-ousies arising in the fight, they had thrown away their generalissimo, John G. Thompson, who had managed their campaigns many years with singular energy and advoitness; when the Democratic management of the benevalent institutions of the benevalent institutions of the sense of the sens of the benevolent institutions of the State had been offensive; when their meddling in municipal affairs in Cincinnati, Cleveland and the central cities of the State was all unpopular and vicious, and notoriously so; that after all, Ewing should have received more than 319,000 votes more votes than any man ever got who tan for a State office in Ohio, with the single exception of the votes that Foster got this time, when his plurality was only 17,000 in a poli of over 550,000 votes—seems to show the formida-bleness of the Democratic party as a political organization, and the great force of discipline in the party, as no other incident in the history of the country has done."

With this exhibit may not the Ohio Democracy "pick their flints and try again" with a good heart? It may be that under more favorable ssues and surroundings that Ohio might be carried. But we build no hopes upon such success. With New York and Indiana assured, the Southern Democrats have the power to name the next President and Vice President of the United States.

Now Sherman and Evarts pretend that the reason the Administration removed Cornell from office was that "he did not support its policy." Bahl John said there would be serious loss to the ublic revenue and also an increase in

We find the following paragraph n a recent letter of the Washington correspondent of the Baltimere Sun, which is germane:

"These two members of the Cabinet must have forgotten the lengthy catalogue of reasons for the removal of Mr. Cornell sent w the President to the Senate, and that long those reasons were many which make Mr. Cornell just as nufit a person to be Governor of the State of New York as he was to be naval officer at the city of New York. They must also have forgotten the fact that last session Mr. Cornell came here and was the most active worker in the lobby against the bill authorizing railroad general business. Mr. Cornell's persistent unblushing efforts to influence the votes of Senators and Representatives were such as to excite general disgust."

The American Agriculturist warns he farmers against a swindle known s "The Vitative Compound." It says that Prof. Le Donx, of the Uni ersity of North Carolina Experinent Station, has been analyzing this 'compound," and with this imporant result: it is found that it does not contain one fertilizing ingredient.

With the 137 votes of the Southern States, New York and Indiana will elect a Democratic President? How would this ticket do? For President, Sanford E. Church of New York for Vice President, James E. Mc-Donald, of Indiana.

-- "The demand from the South for dry goods and general merchandise is unusually large." The above statement appears in scores of Republican organs all over the North. t is suggestive of several things. First, the Southern people are not diers, assassins, disturbers of the case, nor is their employment that of killing negroes, as is charged by the Republican papers. People who parchase largely from Northern merchants dry goods and general mer-chandise are necessary by peaceful industry obtaining money to purchase such supplies. In the next place, the merchants of New York, Philadelphis and other Northern cities con sider themselves fortunate to get the Southern trade, It used to be im-mensely profitable before the war, and it is gradually resuming its old im-portance. The latter class, in the natural course get fixed when the "Old Man" comes in cannot possibly be accommodated, and many of them will be greatly disappointed when they are told to look for their reward not in earthly office but heavenly dwellings. Chandler died in harness, with the latest war cry of his party still ringing in his ears. Well; but he is dead! The South makes no was upon dead men. Whether he used his power, his influence, his commanding sition for lawful and patriotic objects the historian will say. To us, it is only this that one old man full of bitterness gainst us, who seems never to have been willing to do us justice, who found it well o inflame his section against out people and to take counsel of his anger and prejudice rather than of his reason, has passed away. It matters little to us. His place will be filled by some one else; and the rock will move on within a week as if schariah Chandler had never emerger rom his late political obscurity.—Rateigh

Balky Horses.

|Salem Press.] A few days since a fine young mare, tched to a light wagon, balked on the level street in front of our office. All the coaxing and whipping did not move her, only seeming to make her more stubborn. One of our printers, Mr. Crist, recollected an article published in the Press sometime since, about the brain of a horse entertaining but one idea at a time, and procuring a stout twine, tied it tightly around the animal's fore leg, between the ankle and the foot. The mare stamped a few times, hesitated a little, and finally walked off as quietly and steadily as any well trained horse. It is a simple remedy and can be tried by any one. After driving him a short distance the string should be loosened or removed to prevent injury to the tendons. The following is the reason given in a few words: "The brain of horses seems to entertain but one idea at a time; thus continued whipping only confirms his stubborn resolve. If you can by any means give him a new subject to think about you will have no trouble to move him."
