It says: When the policeman reached them they were lying on the ground, clinched, and Hall called out for some one to take Elwood's knife from him, as he (Elwood) was cutting him. The knife was taken from Elwood, after which the parties were both taken into custody and carried to the station house, where Dr. O'Donoghue examined and dressed their wounds. Elwood was found to have two severe wounds, one on his arm, about half way between the elbow and hand, the knife entering the back part of the arm and ranging round to the front in the direction of the wrist, cutting to the hone. The other wound was a gash across the hand, just above the last joint of the thumb, about two inches long, also cut to the bone. Hall's injuries were found to be of a much more serious nature. The flesh on the side of his head near the ear was fearfully lacerated, there being three distinct cuts, two of which penetrated to the bone and one through a branch of the temporal artery. Hall's condition is considered dangerous and at one time yesterday he was reported dead. His physician thinks he will recover unless some unexpected change takes place. Elwood was able to be up yesterday.

Bitten by a Dog. Mr. John Haar, Jr., proprietor of the Mozart Saloon, was badly bitten on Saturday night by a vicious dog. It seems that two dogs got to fighting and he attempted to part them, when, as he was holding one of them off, the other seized him by the right hand, inserting his fangs nearly through it in two places, inflicting very painful wounds. Yesterday his hand was still swollen very badly and causing him in jail until the next session of the U.S. much inconvenience.

OPERA HOUSE.

After an interval of some years the talented and graceful American actress, Louise Pomeroy, last night reappeared before a Wilmington audience as Rosalind. Considering the inclement weather, the audience was large and appreciative-There is not much in this play in the way of plot or incident, to weary the attention or develop histrionic art, in Its ordinary manifestation. No deep tragedy moves the passions, no rich comedy provokes laughter, and hence little opportunity for that entente cordiale between the actor and the audience which is indispensable to the production of profound emotions. The part of Rosalind is one in which nicety of taste and cultivation are necessary to both the actor and audience. No transport of passion mars the symmetry of the performance; no boisterous laughter closes the ear to the exquisite music of the composition. The stately procession of incidents passes from scene to scene, with the pleasing flow and harmony of a rivulet; wave on wave, in diversified and smooth succession. The woods resound with festal songs, the forests of Belgium become an Arcadia. Love reigns supreme, and gilds each sylvan scene with its own sunshine.

In none of the plays which go by the name of "Shakespeare's" is there a more wonderful display of the creative power of the imagination of the author. He took a worthless pastoral romance of the sixteenth century and made of it a most interesting and lively drama, which has enchanted the English world for three hunimagery and profound philosophy.

Miss Pomeroy is peculiarly fitted by nature and cultivation for displaying to their utmost the fine conceptions and wonderfully transforming power of the author of this exquisite poem. Her performance last night was graceful, modest, artistic and successful. It was not long before she aroused in herself that ambition for excellence, nice discrimination and style in exe cution and delivery which seems to be her special gift. Nature and art fit her for the triumphs of the stage.

Mr. Leake's performance was excellent. He has a fine voice and possesses taste and

The operetta of "Little Red Riding Hood," given under the management of Misses Burr and James, at the Opera House on Friday evening last, is to be repeated at the same place on Thursday evening next, with additional attractions, and at the especial request of a number of gentlemen of the city, who, in asking a repetition, but express a unanimous desire of the community to share in the enjoyment of this delightful entertainment. The crowded columns of the STAR prevent the publication in to-day's paper of the correspondence relating to the matter; but it will be given in the next issue.

Hanging of the Murderer of the Late W. G. Fowler, Jr.

At Taylorsville, Alexander county, on Friday last, as we learn from the Charlotte Observer, Joe Gillespie, colored, expiated the crime of murder by hanging. His victim was a respected and enterprising merchant of Mooresville, Mr. W. G. Fowler, who had moved to that town from Wil mington a few months before, and the motive of the murderer was robbery. The crime was committed on the night of the 17th of December, 1878. Gillespie confessed on the gallows his complicity in the atrocious murder, avowed his belief that he had since been forgiven for the awful crime, and died with seemingly little fear his execution being witnessed by about four thousand people. It will be remembered that Jule Davidson, who inflicted the fatal blow while Gillespie watched, according to their own confession, was taken from the officers while en route for Statesville jail, a few days after the murder, by a crowd of about a hundred citizens, and hanged to a tree.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.—Rev. Sylvanus Cobb thus writes in the "Boston Christian Freeman":—We would by no means recommend any kind of medicine which we did not know to be good—particularly for infants. But of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing byrup we can speak from knowledge; in our own family it has preved a blessing indeed, by giving an infant troubled with colic pains, quiet sleep, and its parents unbroken rest at night. Most parents can appreciate these blessings. Here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the sleep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." And during the process of teething its value is incalculable. We have frequently heard mothers say they would not be without it from the birth of the child till it had finished with the teething siege, on any consideration whatever.
