Another Lecture by Col. D. K. McRae -A Complimentary Benefit Tendered by Our Citizens.

It will be seen from the following correspondence that Col. D. K. McRae, in response to the solicitation of a number of our prominent citizens, has consented to repeat one of his admirable lectures, and this time for his own benefit. The lecture will be delivered on Tuesday evening next. the 10th instant, at the Opera House, and the subject chosen, as will be seen, is the very popular one entitled "Genius and Talent." We hope the eloquent gentleman will indeed receive a substantial recognition of his services in the cause of literary culture in our midst:

Col. D. K. McRae DEAR SIR—Appreciating in commen, with this whole community, the service you have rendered to the cause of literary culture in our midst, by the delightful lectures which you have delivered, and desirous of seeing you receive some adequate and substantial benefit therefrom, the undersigned request you to repeat one of the lectures, pledging themselves to use every effort to secure for the occasion such an audience as will accomplish the desired

Lecture by Col. McHae. Those of our readers who listened with such evident pleasure to the recent lectures delivered at the Opera House by Col. D. K. McRae, will be gratified to learn that it is his purpose to deliver another lecture, at the same place, on Tuesday evening next. The subject on this occasion will be "Genius and Talent," a lecture which has received the highest meed of praise wherever heard, and which is by many thought to be the best of the learned gentleman's repertory. OPERA HOUSE,

A Man of the People. There is much in Mr. Milton Nobles' new play,"A man of the People,"that is pleasing and entertaining, but it will hardly achieve the success that his "The Phonix" has attained and so justly merits. It might, however, be a very creditable production and still fall far short of the standard of his first success. Mr. Nobles was of course admirable in the part he enacted and Mr. M. B. Curtis in the low comedy part of the drama achieved a signal triumph. His Tony Todd was in every way capital and stamped him at once as an actor of decided talent and Miss Butt acted the heroine, a pretty and modest sewing girl naturally to Mr. and satisfactorily. Miss Langly was very good indeed as Maggie Ryder, and Mr.

Warren, "The Mystery." Miss Alice Baldwin had much more to do than in the previous piece. and did it exceedingly well. The medley duetto between Mrs. Baldwin and Mr. Curtis was charmingly given, and was again and again encored. The orchestra is a very pleasing feature of the entertainment, and both Mr. Fehr man and Mrs. Baldwin deserve special mention.

There were bitter times at Harrisburg and the discussions were fierce and angry. Blaine would have triumphed but for the Camerons. Bildad, of the Richmond State, writes on the 6th:

"The Blaine men here do not hesitate to say they were betrayed by Congressman

Harry Bingham, of Pennsylvania, who at a critical moment assumed to speak for Blaine and whose intimate relations with him were supposed to justify it. They say he in-formed them that Blaine didn't want to fight Grant; that Grant would be withdrawn in good time, and Blaine get the delegation, provided he did not make Cameron mad. "Congressman Frye says nine delegates voted for Grant instructions because they thought it would not injure Blaine and would oblige Cameron. "The Grant men say it is all bosh to talk about a bargain; that Blaine could not have carried the convention by any possibility and that Gen. Bingham acted wisely under the circumstances. Miss Horton who shot young Morgan, son of Senator Morgan, who
