BENEVOLENT INSTITUTIONS.

There are intimations in some of the Northern papers that there are other so-called charitable institutions that need to be looked into, and that the Reverend Cowley of "Shepherd's Fold," or the Wolf's Den, is not a sinner above some other sinners in the North. A Philadelphia paper insinuates that a close investigation with certain institutions in that city might reveal some unpleasant facts. It says:

"What then shall we say of the city o Philadelphia and of the State of Pennsylvania, which allow thousands of such children to gather into the Almshousesinstitutions which no New York child may ever enter-and leave them to grow up amid surroundings which will make paupers and thieves of them in three cases out

The same paper condemns all Or phan Homes as bad in principle. I says however fair the outside there is want in the life of those who are trained there. We quote:

"They need the thoughtful individual care which no matron can bestow upon the multitude she is responsible for. They need a mether's lap and a mother's arms. And, as experience shows, there are thousands of childless homes into which a little urgency and pleading might secure their in-troduction, and where, as the same experience shows, they would soon make their way into people's affections, and secure the best of training for a useful and happy life. The grand work of the Children Aid Society of New York and its kindred charities, is striking at the very root of our worst social evils, by saving the neglected children from the life to which their birth and environment seem to condemn them.'

There may be much force in this as applied to Northern Almshouses and Asylums. It is because of the peculiar management of the Oxford Orphan Asylum that the STAR is its fast friend. The children are really cared for in the most kindly way. The Superintendent has a very singular power over children, and they are drawn to him in a way that is quite inexplicable. The matron is a refined and cultivated lady, of excellent blood, and a most kindly, sympathetic nature. It is charming to see her kindness to the orphans and their responsive affection in turn. She keeps for each their pennies and dimes that are given or sent them, and their clothing and comfort are looked after with motherly devotion and care. Her assistants appresiate, too, the responsibilities that rest upon them.

In New York, and in some of the towns of Massachusetts, we learn there are benevolent associations that look after the paupers and orphans, and get them homes in the families throughout the country. In New York there is some abuse, as children are sometimes placed in the Homes and Asylums instead of finding them places in kind families. In the Oxford Asylum children are trained and partially educated, and then homes are PACLURING.

The Charleston News and Courier of the 10th is almost exclusively devoted to writing up the cotton mills of South Carolina. The outlook is most favorable. There is a steady increase in the value of their capital, whilst the annual profits range from 18 to 40 per cent. Think of this, ye doubters, and stop your croaking. Ten thousand people in the State find employment or are supported by the mills. The field for the investment of capital, at home and abroad, is most inviting. Our excellent Charleston contemporary deserves credit for ts enterprise. It sent out one of its staff, Mr. J. K. Blackman, to every factory in that State. We copy the following, which is instructive:

"These results briefly stated are: That here are in South Carolina seventeen factories (not including the Westminster Clement Attachment Mill,) engaged in the pro duction of cotton yarns and cloths. "These factories have 95,438 spindles rith 1,983 looms in operation.

"They produce 101,338 yards of cloth and 17,183 pounds of yarn for each working day; consuming for each such day 54,-049 pounds of cotton. They employ 2,296 operatives, who in turn support 7,913 persons who are dependent upon them, the monthly pay rolls being over $38,000. The capital employed in these mills amounts to $2,288,600, and they are estimated to be worth to-day $2,844,

The entire article is very interest ing, and full of encouragement. The account of Mr. Blackman's visit to Westminster and the results furnished show most conclusively that the Clement Attachment is a great suc. cess. The largest profits made by any mill are by the little Westminster. The mill is in Oconee, nine miles from the Georgia line. Mr. Blackman found many visitors examining the new process. We quote: "Before we had gone ten steps I found that my companions were Mr. Holmes Harden, of Chester, the President of the Chester & Lenoir Railroad; Mr. Osman Barber, the representative in the Legislature from Chester, and Mr. F. H. Barber, of Rock Hill. I was informed by them that they had come to examine the "Machine" with a view to establishing factories in their localities. Upon arriving at the hotel I met another pilgrim. He had arrived the night before, and was from Bremond. Texas The introduced himself as Mr. T. R. Haves, of the firm of White & Hayes, proprietors of large cotton gins in Central Texas. He had come, he said, to make a personal examination of the Clement Attachment in the interest of several capitalists who would upon his verdict determine whether they would establish several factories near Bre-

The gentlemen who own the mill are delighted with their experiment. We quote again:

"The use of the Clement Attachment, therefore, they claim has wrought for them as farmers a saving of $2,250, the amount invested in these gins. The consumption of seed cotton is 500 pounds per day, and the production is 160 pounds of yarn per day. The yarn they are now selling at 23 cents per pound. The cotton, therefore, per day, at three cents a pound, which is more than they paid for it, would cost $15. Operative and contingent expenses are placed at $4 50 per day, which would make the total cost of producing 160 pounds of yarns $19 50. The value of this amount of yarn in the market, at 23 cents per pound, would be $36.90, or over 40 per cent. net profit. The estimated profit is one cent net on every pound of seed cotton manufactured. Mr Stribling is of the opinion that a mill of a capacity of 500,000 to 700,000 pounds per annum would pay 14 cents per pound. The net profit for the past twelve months had been, Mr. Stribling informed me, $1,800 on a capital of $3,700 invested."

The varns made actually command a premium in the market. They are in great demand and are pronounced by Philadelphia manufacturers to be of the very best. Why, then, can not these mills be multiplied indefinitely? A few farmers should combine and manufacture their own cetton. But more of this hereafter. North Carolina has more than fifty mills. She ought to have hundreds. This was prepared days ago, but was crowded out.

There appears to be an increase in the revolutionary agitations in Russia. The condition of affairs is growing more alarming daily, and it cannot continue much longer without a fearful explosion. It is said to be a fact that the mind of the Czar is very much affected, and he is in constant apprehension that he will fall a victim to the well-laid plans of the Nihilists. At Vienna recent intelligence has been received from St. Petersburg to the effect that the feeling of hostility to the autocracy is spreading and strengthening in spite of all the government can do. A sentiment in favor of a constitutional government is increasing with exceeding rapidity among the nobility and mercantile classes. A, demand for such a change will soon be made. We copy an interesting paragraph from the summary of the letters re-

"They affirm that the country is weary of the reign of terror which has so long pre-vailed; that the peaceful and profitable carrying on of trade and manufactures is impossible while any man is liable to be followed by unexplained suspicions, the tially educated, and then homes are found for them by the very careful Superintendent. Some few are sent to the higher institutions of learning, where they are received as beneficiarities. We believe a gentleman at Charlotte is engaged in the noble work of gathering helpless children and finding them homes.

Impossion will be auspicions, the capital auspicions, the espionage of the police, and summary arrest and punishment by arbitrary and unreasonable authority, and that the establishment of a constitutional monarchy list the only remedy for the curse of Nihilsm. The conservative liberals who cannot be accoused of rashness in their political opinions nor movements are said. Charlotte is engaged in the noble work of gathering helpless children and finding them homes.

Impossion with a devoted patriot of noble lineage. In many respects he resembles homenate, however, he does not equal in intellectual power. Like him, he comes from a small State, but if the vote of Pennsylvania can be secured for him in convention, as there is some hope of, or of New York, his chance for the nomination will be high. Tilden ought not to regard Bayard's nomination as derogatory to himself or a to the Irish Relief Fund.

om and safety resulting from either a republic or a constitutional monarchy with the chaos of Russian affairs greatly to the disadvantage of the rule of lexander and his advisers. It is believed by leading conservative liberals in Russia that unless the Emperor sees fit to yield, as he has frequently promised to do, to the demands of his best subjects by the speedy issuance of a decree modifying the existing system, the country will be the scene of an outbreak, in which thousands of lives will be lost, including, without doubt, his own, and relief will be purchased at an immense and unnecessary cost."

There is much talk of a ramored abdication of the Czar, but this is not the first time that such rumors have been set affoat. That the Czar is very nervous and his mind in a very distressed, or rather diseased condition, is certain if we may credit repeated rumors from the Russian capital. The Czar is evidently in no condition to give much personal attention to the internal affairs of his vast kingdom, much less to the question of a war with such powers as Germany, England and Austria. The evil genius of European politics at this time is Gortschakoff. If he were removed from the political arena there would be peace.

One of the most noted of living English writers is Alexander William Kinglake, whose history of the Crimean War has attracted great attention in England, and is regarded as a most striking literary performance. It is very full, and abounds in passages of uncommon splendor. But Mr. Kinglake is probably better known by reason of his celebrated "Eothen," the most brilliant book of travels ever published, far surpassing Lamartine's once famous "Travels in the East." It has recently been placed in Harper's "Franklin Library," we believe, and is sold for about 15 cents. It was published some thirty years ago in this country by Wiley & Putnam, but the edition was long since exhausted. We find the following interesting history of this remarkable book in an exchange:

"A writer in Belgravia, who has personal knowledge of the matter, discloses some interesting facts about the secret history of Mr. Kinglake's 'Eothen,' which he remarks by the way, 'has long since taken its rank among the classics of English literature. It was written many years before it was published, and, after being revised in a keen spirit of criticism, was placed under a lock and key, where it remained for a long time. When Mr. Kinglake finally offered it to the English publishers, they refused it, one and all, upon any terms. The author at last walked into a shop in Pall-Mall and made a present of it to the publisher, provided he thought it worth printing. In this way it finally got into print; but the first edition lingered in the publisher's hands until Lockhart called attention to it in the Quarterly Review. Then its success was assured, and for many years afterward the publisher, on every Christmas day, sent Mr. Kinglake a check for

The New England traders are pressing Congress heavily for a untional bankrupt law. They want such a law in order to strengthen their purchasing power by giving them more credit. They contend that the necessities of trade demand such a law-a law that will operate alike in all parts of the Union. The STAR has already taken - ground against any such law at this time. The people were swindled most shamefully by the old bankrupt law and the wrecks are scattered all over the country. The country has not recovered yet from the evil effects of the law that was repealed. After a few years it may do to talk of a new

CURRENT COMMENT.

-- We might be misled into believing that as Grant's strength is so great he would antagonize the other candidates, and that they would in this event combine their forces to defeat him. But this difficulty will not occur. For Grant will not suffer from the ill that may befall either Sherman or Blaine. Each of these candidates may and will probably be too strong for a compromise, and not strong enough to be elected. This will not be Grant's fate. He will be strong enough to enter upon his own way and to march over it in triumph, not needing just a few votes more to win success, and disdaining to be the second choice of a majority in the convention .- Richmond (Va.) OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES

We believe it to be greatly to the interest of the State to complete the Western North Carolina Railroad to Paint Rock, and believe the people are willing to do it, now that the end of the road is drawing in sight. It is a great folly even to think of parting from that great public work, new that dayight pierces through the mountain, and when the eyes of the great West are set in this direction, anxiously seeking an outlet through this State via our North Carolina seaports. The eagerness shown by these railroad syndicates to capture that great enterprise, is the strongest evidence of its value. Railroad rings do not form for mere fun, but they propose to make money .-

The Board of Directors, as we think, wisely declined to recommend the calling of an extraordinary session of the Legislature, at present, to consider the Best proposition. We have never yet been able to ee the necessity for haste in a matter which is fraught with the best interests of the people of the whole State. If the Best proposition is a good one, it will keep until the people's representatives are called together by virtue of the provisions of the constitution. Nothing to the contrary has ever been given to the public, at least. In the meantime the State's five hundred convicts are digging dirt on the banks of the Swannanos, and the appropriation of seventy thousand dollars per annum will be in force until the end of the year at least. All the necessary employes, beside the convict labor, has been regularly employed until the end of the year, and President Wilson, who voted against the calling of the extra session, does not seem to be in very great distress for money. This sudden inspira tion to get the old thing off our hands, and get it off quickly, makes us begin to believe there is a "nigger in the wood-pile" some-where. — Charlotte Observer.
