The First of the Season.

Fish stories are in order. The last we hear comes from the Mozart Saloon, where a live fish, about an inch and a half long, was discovered in an ovster after the bivalve had been fried and served up to a hungry customer. It is not often that the local columns of the STAR contain anything "hard to swallow," and when they do we are "nearly always" ready and able to supply the necessary documents, by way of condiments, to assist in the difficult deglutition. So in this instance the reader can verify the statement. The lively little fish swims in a glass globe at the saloon, and the proprietor, attendants, and all other parties interested and concerned, are ready and willing to qualify to the facts as stated.

The Mayor offers a reward for persons guilty of stoning houses, pulling pailings off fences, &c. He should also include the practice, which has become very annoying, of marking fences, walls and houses with coal, chalk, etc. It has become almost useless in some localities for persons to endeavor to make their premises look neat.

A Big Shipment. We learn that one firm in this city shipped on Wednesday last three heaping car-loads of assorted merchandise to one point. This is pretty good for one day, and is an indication that business is looking up a little in Wilmington.

Preliminary Examination of Henry Cruse, Charged With Larceny and

Henry Cruse, colored, had a preliminary examination before Justice Gardner, yesterday morning, on the serious charges of larceny and arson. The first warrant charges him with stealing a table, bureau, chairs, pitcher, &c., the property of Mr. John A. Sanders. Witnesses testified that the articles were in Mr. Sanders' house at his plantation near this city on the afternoon of the 19th of February, 1879. The same night the house, which was only inhabited in the day time, Mr. Sanders sleeping at his house in town, was burned to the ground. The articles were subsequently found in the possession of Henry Cruse. and it was further proven that he had them concealed in a swamp or branch near by, and removed them in a cart a day or two afterwards, telling one of the witnesses who saw him that if she said anything about it he would kill her. The articles in question were in court and were fully identified as the property of Mr. Sanders, both by himself and others. He was ordered to give bond in the sum of $100 for his appearance at the next term of the Criminal Court. Defendant was next arraigned on the charge of having, on or about the 10th of November, stolen three turkeys, the property of Mr. Sanders. The turkeys were traced to the house of his mother, Minerva Ennett, and it was in evidence that when Mr. Sanders missed the turkeys the next day, and went to this house to enquire about them, they were hustled into the loft to prevent Mr. S. from seeing them; that they were carried there by Henry Cruse, where they were picked, and taken away the following day day to be disposed of.

Defendant was ordered to give a bond of $100 for his appearance in this case. Cruse was next called to answer to the charge of stealing a quantity of pork, the property of Mr. Sanders, a little over a accounting for the marks. For this labor month ago. The evidence was to the effect | he only charged 31 cents per sack, while that the barn in which the meat was kept in a barrel was broken into at night and the meat stolen. Mr. W. H. Salmon was sleeping in the back part of the barn, and hearing the noise made in the act of breaking in, he hurried out and was just in time to see three men making their way from the barn with bags on their shoulders. He fired upon them with a gun he had in his hand, when the thieves dropped their bags, one of them crying out "Oh, God!" Rosa Ames, with whom Cruse was staying at the time, testified that defendant had told her he was going after the meat, but that upon coming back later he said he had met with bad luck, and detailed the circumstance of being fired upon as he was leaving the barn with the meat, and said that he had fired back at the man who shot at him. Bond in the sum of $100 required in this

The arson case was next taken up. Mr. Sanders and Minerva Ennett both swore that the house was locked up on the evening of the 19th of February, 1879; that there was no fire in it at the time, and that the furniture afterwards found in the possession of Cruse was in it. Mr. S. and Minerva Ennett returned the next morning and found the house burned. Rosa Ames swore that Cruse had told her he was going to burn the house because Mr. Sanders had accused him of stealing some of his hogs. He had threatened to burn it the night before, but she prevailed upon him not to do so. The next night, between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock, after she had gone to bed, she discovered the fire shining through the cracks in the house, and Cruse walking the floor as if he had lost his mind. She told him to cry fire, but he refused to do so, when she herself gave the alarm. Assistance then came, but not in time to save the house. There was other evidence to the effect that Cruse had made threats to be revenged on Mr. Sanders.

At the conclusion of the testimony in this case defendant was ordered committed without benefit of bail, and be was remanded to jail.

It should have been stated that Cruse was staying at a house about one hundred and fifty yards from that of Mr. Sanders, which was burnt.

For the Star. Not a Member of the New Orleans

Cow Pea Ring. We would like to give the public an idea of the manner Cow Pess are handled by a man not a member of the New Orleans Cow Pea Ring. D. C. Seymour is the man, a dealer in cow peas, a so-called commission merchant, who claims most posttively and avows that he does not belong to any ring, club or combination formed to defraud consignors of Cow Peas. On this account he claims to be a better man to handle consignments of peas than any of the Ring crowd. Let us show you his manner of doing business. W. P. Oldham & Co., in the spring of 1879, had about 1,000 bushels of Clay Peas, in new sacks, in the hands of J. Z. Gibbons & Co., New Orleans. This noble, kind and generous hearted so called gentleman wrote W. P. Oldham & Co. from two to three letters per week sympathizing with them on account of Gibbons' neglect in not selling their peas. He would write thus:

"Had I your peas there would be no "trouble for me to get more than one dollar and a half per bushel for them, because I sold peas from your city last week for more than that, not equal to yours in the market were correct, these ranging from W. P. Oldham & Co. being provoked with Gibbons & Co. for not selling their peas, ordered Gibbons, June 6th, to turn the Peas over to Seymour, the generous and noble hearted so-called commission merchant. Did he sell the peas when he got possession of them? No. Did he continue to keep Oldham & Co. posted with his tri-weekly letters? No. Did he reply to Oldham & Co.'s frequent telegrams and letters? No. Did he advise them that his luck for selling peas at market quotations bad deserted him? No. This much he did do, he kept his mouth shut-something on the Grant order-or in other words, he was as dumb as an oyster. He had nothing more to say about Gibbons or the peas, out if he sold them, which we think he did and replaced them with lower quality, Gibbons or some of his own family pocketed the money, inasmuch as Oldham & Co. got none, although they got more than B. F. Mitchell & Son did on a consignment they made to another of the Ring. What do you think Oldham & Co. It was a statement of account dated July 24th, showing a balance due D. C. Seymour of $57.55 against the peas, after crediting proceeds of sales of 98 sacks. He at the same time advised Oldham & Co. to hold balance of peas for another season, as he had preserved them with lime and salt, and they would do to hold over until another season. In December, Oldham & Co. thinking Seymour must be tired of holding the peas, ordered them turned over to Robt. Carey & Co. Seymour tells to make up his account. He being honest and truthful, thought the best thing to be done was to put the peas in new sacks, which would obviate the necessity of his the actual charges should not have exceeded 12 cents per sack. When this was accomplished he found his account was still too small, so he adds one month's storage, insurance and interest, more than the time the peas had been in his hands. He also charges Oldham & Co. with a draft and interest, drawn on him by J. I. Metts & Co. Wilmington, on a shipment they had made in which Oldham & Co., had no interest whatever. He further adds $6.50 for advertising, and for commissions $43.80, on the peas which he could not sell, making total of $426.70 against the peas, and says, most positively, that he will not one else until this amount is paid. The public can see very well that this man does not belong to any ring, because the Ring merchants will allow 50 cents per bushel on good clay peas in New Orleans, even if they are quoted at $2.50 per bushel, while Seymour takes all and wants more; and even is not satisfied at that, but wants to whip Oldham & Co. because the shipping marks will not stay on the sacks and clay peas all turn black and speckled, and got mad because Oldham & Co. requested him to send the old sacks back to them at their expense. He would not even do this, saying they were so badly cut by rats that they could not be identified. Oh for more Ringmen! Give us a Ring man every time in preference to such cattle.

Carey thereupon declined to take them, but sent Oldham & Co. a sample of same, which turned out to be Black Peas and not Clays, which were shipped by Oldham & Co. The climate changed them, of ceurse, because Mr. Seymour was honest, and did not belong to any ring. Nevertheless he could See-more black than clay peas in the lot. At this stage of the game, which caused Oldham & Co. to open their eyes, they at once wrote D. C. Labatt made the demand for the peas according to shipping marks. Seymour could net deliver peas by said marks, because they had changed as bad as the peas. 45 Market Street. SORRY, old fellow, you were not in attendance last evening. Grandest Hop of the season—perfect success. Miss Pinkton was there, and she and the handsome stranger were declared the most stylish and best dressed couple on the floor, George laughed heartily—couldn't help it. The joke was explained. He had previously fitted himself out entire at OTTERBOUKG'S Clothing and Men's Wear Depot, and in a dress suit bought at this establishment accompanied Miss P. to the scene of music and the dance.
