But thenperhaps the syndicate would not want the road on such conditions-and perhaps it would. At all events the State must deal with Mr. Best and his associates precisely as it would deal with persons whose characters were entirely unknown.

- Mt. Airy Times: A sad accident occurred on last Bunday, some eight miles west of Mt. Airy, resulting in the death of Mrs. Wm. Snow. She, together with her husband, had been to church in the morning and had gone to the house of a neighbor to take dinner. After dinner they started for home. They were traveling in a one-horse Jersey wagon, and during the drive homeward the horse became frightened, ran away, overturning the wagon and threw Mrs. Snow against a tree with great violence. She died from the effects of the fall the next morning.

- Salisbury Watchman: We have sample of wool raised by Mr. Vaughn, Senator in the General Assembly from Alleghany county, which is certainly remarkable for its length and texture. It is denominated Swopserdown, being the product of Southdown sheep crossed on the Cots-wold. Israel. In accordance with announcement memorial services were held at the Temple on Sunday in honor of the late Isaac Cremieux, of France. The attendance on the occasion was very large, and included representatives of all nationalities and creeds. At the solemn sound of the organ the Rabbi, Rev. S. Mendelsohn, entered and ascended the rostrum, the congregation rising, and, when in front of the Ark of the Covenant, delivered a very impressive introductory prayer, the choir singing sweetly certain "reposes." This concluded, the Rabbi ascended the pulpit and gave out a hymn, which was followed by a prayer for the repose of the dead.

J. I. Macks, Esq., Secretary of the Congregation, was then called upon by the Rabbi to read to the assembly the resolutions previously adopted by the Board of Trustees, setting forth the irreparable loss that not only Israel, but France, has sustained in the death of the lamented son of our sister Republic.

Another hymn was read by the Rabbi and sung by the choir, after which an oration was delivered by Rev. Mr. Mendelsohn, who made one of his best efforts and enchained the undivided attention of his audienc for forty-five minutes, concluding his eulogy upon the life and character of Isaac Adolph Cremieux by relating a Talmudic anecdote, representing a Rabbi exclaiming over the bier of a colleague, "Truly we must honor thy death! When kings die they leave their crown to their children; when rich men die they leave their wealth to their offspring, but thou hast departed, and with thee true greatness

After the oration a hymn was sung and a collection taken up in support of the Alliance Universale, the cherished institution of the late Isaac Adolph Cremieux.

Stealing Beeswax.

panorama in Charlotte. He has had fine Information was received by Mr. Morris Bear, on Water street, yesterday morning, to the effect that a colored individual was endeavoring to dispose of a quantity of beeswax which had his name on it. He went to the store where the fellow was reported to be, and asked him if that was his wax, and if he brought it to the city; to which questions he gave an affirmative answer. He then asked the boy to come to his store with the wax and he would pay him for it. In the meantime Officer E. S. Griffith had been let into the secret, and, as he endeavored to make his escape after finding that Mr. Bear was only setting a trap for him, he was nabbed by the officer and taken to the guard house.

There were sixty-two pounds of the wax, which had no doubt been sent on consignment to Mr. Bear and stolen by the prisoner, who gives his name as George Hill, before it reached its destination. The case will probably be investigated this morning. Since writing the above we learn that the beeswax alluded to was stolen from the Cape Fear and People's Steamboat Wharf. and that the thief also cut some blank leaves out of the book used by Mr. James Madden in receiving and shipping freight by the above line. It has also been ascertained since the arrest of Hill, as is alleged that he is the individual who stole the canvass from Messrs. E. Kidder & Sons, alluded to in Sunday's paper.

"success"-A Lecture by Rev. J. R.

Wilson, D. D. A very fine and appreciative audience greeted the Rev. Dr. Wilson, of the First Presbyterian church, last evening, upon the occasion of his delivery of a lecture upon the subject of "Success," which is, we believe, the second of a series gotten up under the auspices and for the benefit of the Library Association of the city.

Dr. Wilson was happily introduced by Mr. C. H. Robinson, in a few brief and appropriate remarks.

Although success in life, he said, was the general aspiration, it was much more easy to point out and describe it by its shining. living or recorded examples, than "successfully" to describe the means by which it was to be achieved, or to define its true character. According to the popular idea it was confounded with celebrity; the acquisition of wealth or the possession of power, irrespective of the means by which they were acquired or the uses to which they were applied. The purpose of the lecturer was announced to be to discover and to apply another test if possible to reconcile the ambitions and aspiring among his audience to the attainment of another standard within the reach of all reasonable and properly directed effort. True success did not consist in the applause of the multitude, the collection of the appliances of wealth or the possession of the honors and emoluments of office. It is a heathenish fency to imagine that there was any occult power which baffled analysis or distributed its favors irrespective of merit. There is a success in life more valuable than all these in the reach of every individual, however humble, who would exercise his intelligence in finding the place to which he was best fitted, and filling that piace with bonesty, cheerful ness and a confident trust in God. The private soldier on the battle field, who presented his living body a willing sacrifice upon the aitar of patriotism. and made of it a rampart against the destructive march of advancing squadrons, was as truly successful as the plumed general who, too frequently and unjustly, reaped the glory of the achievement. The humble cottager, who passed his life contentedly in the faithful discharge of the duty he owed a sick wife, and was father and mother alike to the helpless beings entrusted to his care, was more truly admirable and successful than the slave of mammon-"the least erected spirit," who marshalled squadrons and destroyed the peace of heaven by his love

Sam Weller, who although he never lived, was one of the liveliest characters described by Dickens, presented the idea when he abandoned the ambition of ascending the stage-box his father had filled, and contented himself with the occupation of a boot-black, in which he particularly shone. It was better to push a wheelbarrow, and do it well, than to attempt to control the factories of the world. The style of the lecture was graceful. scholarly and philosophical; a calm and thoughtful presentation of a subject of great interest, and was well calculated to inculcate correct notions of success upon the young and aspiring, and was listened to with profound attention by the large and appreciative audience.

Through the courtesy of Mr. W. H. Stirling, manager of the W. U. Telegraph Office here, Mr. B. D. Forest, Assistant Superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company, connected Wadesboro and Wilmington by telephone Sunday afternoon, and a lengthy conversation was had between different persons here and parties at Wadesboro. The distance is 130 miles, and although the instrument used at Wadesboro was not intended to work so long a distance the experiment was quite a success, and left no question that with a Blake Transmitter and a telephone like those used here the sound would have been transmitted as clearly and distinctly as between houses in this city. As it was there was but little difficulty in distinguishing all that was said, and much pleasure was derived from the novelty of the experiment.
