VOL. XXVI.--NO. 110.

WILMINGTON, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1880.

Grant's account of the patriotism and good behavior of the Democrats during his visit in the spring has done us good in the North. The people are not so ready to believe the thousand and one lies of the sensation organs of the Stalwart stripe. The following, from the Baltimore Sun's Washington letter, shows that the outrage mills are not in good working order, and the South is too well behaved to suit their evil purposes and plans. The special says:

"The Republican campaign managers seem disappointed because of the lack of material or ammunition against the Democratic party furnished by the Federal officers in the South. They seem to have relied upon political outrages and resistance to the luternal revenue officers in the mountainous sections of the South, where Illieit whiskey is manufactured contrary to law, to give life to the Republican canvass in the North. From all sections of the South come only the most peaceable reports regarding the intention of the people to obey the revenue laws, and the Republicans are at a standstill and a loss to know what it all means. There are no outrages to stir an the Northern heart, and the political managers at the Republican headquarters have run short of political thunder.

Gen. Roger A. Pryor, one of the greatest political orators in our country, and no mistake, is to speak in Richmond, Va., not long hence. In 1860 he spoke at Henderson, N. C., to an immense audience. He was then 32 years of age. The late Rev. Thos. G. Lowe, the seraphic pulpit orator, although an intense Whig (Pryor was a Democrat), went from Halifax town to Henderson, over sixty miles, to hear Pryor. He told un he was the most extraordinary speaker he ever heard, and with a vocabulary that far excelled any man's he had ever

The man who would write a book and take James A. Garfield as his theme will meet with many obstacles, One Connell has attempted the job, but with disaster, as may be seen from the following, taken from the Columbus (Ohio) Times. That paper

"Connell's life of Garfield s to be suppressed. The simple-minded biographer told too much truth and printed too many of Garfield's contessions. The Republican reviewers found that the book convicted Garfield, by his own admissions, of the Credit Mobilier bribery. Hence it was suppressed. Connell will endeavor to get out revised edition."

the encouraging outlook in New York and the amity now existing between the Democratic factions are very distressing to the Northern Radical organs. They see the handwriting on the wall at every turn and hear their death sentence sounding in every breeze. Mene, mene, tekel upharsin.

yesterday morning. The first case called was that of Lou Myers and Jane Blackman. both colored, who were charged with cursing and abusing each other in the neighborhood of Fourth and Bladen streets on Monday. It appeared in evidence that Lou Myers was to some extent the aggressor, though both used ugly language, and so the former was ordered to pay a fine of $10 or be imprisoned for ten days, and the

for five days. Spencer Faison and G. W. Hussey, two young colored men, were charged with fighting on Monday night last, though they insisted that they were only "skylarking." The Mayor insisted that the charge for such "skylarking" was only $5 or five days: when they vacated to make room for

William Phinney, colored, charged with cursing and disorderly conduct on the streets. The first charge brought against this defendant was that of assault with a deadly weapon upon Robert Phinney. his brother, but this was not sustained by the vidence, and was therefore withdrawn. For the other offence he was ordered to pay fine of $30 or be imprisoned for thirty days, being, as the Mayor remarked, an old

Laura Taylor and Francis Outlaw, two rather elderly colored women, were next arraigned on the charge of keeping a disorderly house on Castle, between Second and Third streets. The weight of testimony was against the Outlaw as being the instigator of the disturbances which so annoved the peaceful and law-abiding neighbors, while the Taylor was painted by the witnesses in colors verging upon what may be termed the angelic, especially by Kizziah Butler who avowed that "Truth was bound to shine," and another of the flustrated denizens of the vicinity, who pronounced Francis a "noosonance in the neighborhood" and Laura a much abused and longsuffering martyr. The Outlaw wanted permission to "talk a little," and was told to proceed, so she didn't make her speech too factorily to hersalf that she never "swored an cath in her life," and made the serious charge against the angelic Laura that she had brought up the witnesses by plying them with some of her home beverage known by the refined and classic appellation of "rot-gut whiskey." At the conclusion of her "argument" she (the Outlaw) was sentenced to pay a fine of $30 or go below for thirty days, and in the case of the amiable (?) Laura judgment was suspended. with the understanding that if any complaint was heard in regard to her hereafter she would also be punished.

The specific charge against the above defendants, as contained in the warrant, was that they "kept a disorderly house within the corporate limits of the city by using, or permitting the use in their house, of loud and boisterous cursing and swearing and obscene language, to the annoyance of many of the residents of the city iving near that vicinity," etc.

The defendants occupy different rooms in the same house.

Getting Well

Old man Robert Phinney, one of the victims of the murderous assault alleged to have been committed by Stephen Richardson on the night of Monday, the 11th inst., during which his wife. Lucy Phinney, lost her life, had sufficiently recovered yesterday, we understand, to be able to dress himself and go into his shop, our informant stating that he bought a watermelon from him. Hester Hichardson, the wife of the alleged intrdeser, who was sadly in-jured at the same time, was also able to get down stairs yesterday.

The Democratic Club of Point Caswell, Pender county, have decided to have their

The Sad Catastrophe at Masonboro Sound.

We learn that the stroke of lightning that killed Mrs. Julia Lumsden at Masonboro Sound Tuesday afternoon, an account of which appeared in yesterday's STAR, took effect upon the head and ranged down one side of the body. When parties who lived about one hundred and fifty wards distant arrived at the scene her pulse was still beating, and every effort, such as the application of mustard plasters, etc., was made to resuscitate her, but without the slightest latter to pay a fine of $5 or be imprisoned effect. It was not raining at the time, and there were very slight indications of a storm, though about the time of the terrible catastrophe parties in the vicinity were watching the play of the lightning upon the distant clouds, apparently hanging over this city, being totally upprepared for the death-dealing stroke which so soon succeeded. The cloud from which the electric current proceeded on its fatal mission did not reach the Sounds, but returned in this direction, deluging our city with one of the most fearful rain storms that ever visited this section. A gentleman who rode down the turnpike some time after the storm says he saw no indications of rain

Sound.

Coroner Hewlett held an inquest over the body yesterday, and from him we learn that the lightning first struck a large live oak tree located at one corner of the building, then came in contact with the gableend of the building next to it, tearing off the weatherboarding, splitting both cornerposts, and entering the house by an open window. The bedstead upon which Mrs. Lumsden was lying was so badly shattered that when a person touchedfit the framework fell to pieces. All four of the bedstead posts were split. The sun was shaning brightly at the time, and no other heavy reports of thunder were heard. Mr. Lumsden was absent from home, and the screams of the larger children, who were playing in the yard, brought the neighbors to the house. A dog lying at the foot of the oak tree mentioned was killed by the shock. It may be considered almost a miracle, under the circumstances, that the life of the infant was preserved, while the mother at its side was stricken to death.

The jury returned a verdict that "deceased came to her death from the act of Almighty God."

U. S. Commissioner's Court. Daniel Kirkland, colored, whose arrest on the charge of perjury was mentioned in our last, had a hearing before U.S. Commissioner McQuigg yesterday, and at the conclusion of the testimony defendant was ordered to give bond in the sum of $200. justified, for his appearance at the next term of the U.S. District Court, in default of which he was committed to fail.

Most perents can appreciate these blessings. Here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the sleep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural, and the little cheruh awakés as "bright as a button."
