EVENING EDITION

THE SOUTH IS FOR PEACE.

The doctrine of Garfield, in his speech on the Electoral Commission, was that if such a body were formed it would have the power to go behind the returns and pry into the character, quantity, &c., of the votes cast. The doctrine of the Democratic party was and is that it is just and proper to go behind the returns in cases of supposed fraud. So Garfield and the Democratic party are agreed as to theory. Garfield went back on his speech, and when he got on the Commission he voted with the majority and deserves to be known in history as one of the infamous 8. It was because of his course that Hayes became President by fraud-by fraud gigantic, monstrous and damning. That is to say, it would be damning if the sense of the country was not so perverted and dehanched that honor and dishonor, right and wrong have become synonymous terms. We refer to this now because of the agitation in New York over the electoral vote of that State We agree with the Charleston News and Courier in this opinion. It

"There were no doubt extensive frauds at the election in New York, and it is possible that twenty thousand fraudulent votes can be proved. But the Garfield electors will receive the certificates of election. There will be only one set of certificates from New York, before the Senate and House of Representatives, when the votes for President are to be counted. * * * In the abstract, then, the Democrats are justiued in investigating the charges of traud at the New York election, and Congress may find authority for rejecting the vote of the State altogether. But we do not see how the vote of New York can, in any event, be given to Hancock, if there be not nefore Congress, in proper form, certificates of the election of the Hancock electors. Congress may make its choice between two sets of certificates, or may reject all certificates, but it cannot count votes which are

The South is interested in having every fraud exposed. It is interested in having a free ballot and an honest count. It is interested in having an election elect, but it cannot agree to a general row, and become a party to ousting Garfield by technicalities or

The election of Garfield is a forcgone conclusion. It is worse than useless to talk about counting him out. The time to have acted was in 1876, when the Northern Democrats should have seen to it that Mr. Tilden was counted in. The South would not have been recreant then, and it will not be revolutionary now. In any calculations the John Kelly tribe may make they would do well to leave the South out of the count. The South is for peace and prosperity.

BAD LEGISLATION.

We agree with the Medical Journal of this city that it is neither wise nor proper to place a tax on libraries and scientific instruments. If we did not know that legislators were capable of many injudicious and that our Solons were blind enough to tax intelligence and put an embargo on education. Surely we have little enough intelligence in the State without trying to lessen it by taxation. There are other sources upon which to raise revenue without resorting to a bid for ignorance and illiteracy. Tax the luxures-tax these things that hurt and blight if you will, but do not tax brains and brain furniture. Do not go to work by legislation to keep North Carolina benightcd. A wise and beneficent legislation will do all it can to foster education; to extend its blessings; to encourage science and induce the people to read and thus learn and grow and become wiser and happier. We avail ourselves of the following from the Medical Journal:

"If North Carolina were the most prosperous State in the Union, and her citizens were the most scholarly, and if there was an aristocracy of learned people reaping large profits from learned pursuits, it would be unwise to tax libraries and scientific instruments. But unfortunately, North Carolina does not hold a high rank for learning, and it is a struggle for her poor scholars to collect books and instruments. * * * should be the earnest endeavor of the State to promote the cause of learning, and instead of damping the ardor of her sons who are struggling to remove the blight of illiteracy from her, a premium worthy of a great commonwealth should be bestowed upon those who spend their substance in such a worthy cause."

The outlook in Ireland is very gloomy. It begins to look as if serious outbreaks might occur with evil consequences. There is widespread excitement among the peasantry, and a collision may occur at any time between them and the troops. However much we sympathize with the Irish people in their misfortunes, we can but deplore the present condition of affairs. England has the organized power to crush out any hostilities, and resistance to constituted authority can only end in greater disappointments and sufferings. Mr. Gladstone is not unfriendly to Ireland, as his past life shows. But he is at the head of the British Government, and he must maintain peace and order as far as in him lies. In his recent dinner talk he said that before we talk of reform there must be "law and order." The New York Herald quotes the Irish Times as saying that "society is less concerned with the amendment of the laws than with the defence of them. and it will task the government as greatly to protect liberty as to devise measures." We hope Ireland will escape the horrors of war and become prosperous under better treat-

The plan in New York, it is said, to bring the issue before Congress as to how that State voted, is for Horatio Seymour, Jr .- the only Democrat on the Returning Board-to declare the Hancock electors chosen, upon the faith of evidence furnished by the Democratic State Committee. In this way the whole matter will be made an issue, and, following the Louisiana presedent, it is expected that the House will go behind the returns, and thus an inquiry will be had. It is further said mass meetings will be held to keep alive or create popular interest. Kelly is openly charged with beating Hancock, and he is represented as anxious to do something to assert his loyalty to the party. He says the job in hand is a large one. But the South will look on and if the North falls out and parties there take each other by the ears, it will stand ready to see fair play and hold the hats.

We publish a portion of a letter dated Raleigh, and which appeared in the Springfield Republican. It is the work of a Yankee of evident ability as a writer who thinks he has made discoveries that have escaped the eyes of other Northern travellers. It will amuse if not instruct. It is astonishing how little the best informed Northern people know of the Southern people. We sincerely believe they know every other people on the globe better than they know our people. The extracts will do to laugh over. The mistake of all such writers is that they take a rare specimen and judge the remainder by it. to represent the whole.

Mr. Gummery Blair has found a new name for the South. He calls it the "rotten South," and all because Mr. Tilden was not elected. Mr. G. B. is not a man of the highest possible wisdom. Gen. Hancock received a larger vote than any other Democrat would or could have received. He got the South "solid," and that is more than his favorite would have gotten, not to go into the Northern

It may turn out that the Morey letter is a forgery, but it has not been proved that the sentiments of United States Senator Pearce, of Maryland, foolish acts we would be surprised the letter are not in accord with Gar. daughter.

field's views and in harmony with his votes and utterances. We hope all concerned, if it is a forgery, will be punished and that all improper methods may be driven out of politics. The Radicals were very active in ferreting out the real or supposed forgers, but they are content to let the rascalities of their own party go unchallenged. We incline to think they rather like them.

General Phil. Sheridan, in his annual report to the General of the Army, insists upon an increase. He says there are not enough men to do the work, and those in service in the South and West are overworked. He says the railroad companies are the strongest allies of the military in the West, and shows what wonders of enterprise are being accomplished by these vigorous corporations in the unsettled regions of the Territories.

The Bernhardt does not think her New York reception particularly en. thusiastic. Of the American audience she said to a Tribune reporter: "I find it very much like an English audience. The public strikes me as being much the same. I have had some experience with the public of different countries, and I am very well contented with my reception here, although the audience last night did not show me marked favor until the fourth act. In Paris the second act of Adrienne is always well received and applauded; but that part of the play is full of delicate finesse of expression and half shades of sentiment and feeling."

CURRENT COMMENT.

- It is in vain for Kelly, after defeating Hancock in the election, to attempt to recover his credit and his lost party standing by a stapid endeavor to reverse the settled verdict of New York. Kelly cannot succeed: but if he could succeed the inevitable result would be a civil war. He is reckless enough to attempt anything to screen himself; but not even the Democratic party, to say nothing of the country at large, will give him any countenance in playing with fire and trying to precipitate a revolution to hide his own treason to General Hancock. Hancock contemns and despises him as heartily as any of the Democrats who hold him responsible for the defeat of the Democratic national ticket. Kelly is playing with fire, but Democratic indignation will extinguish both it and him. - N. Y. Herald, Ind. -Mr. Hill goes even further and declares that both the Democratic and Republican parties ought to be disbanded and their places supplied by "a great national Union party." It is difficult to comprehend how any public man of Mr. Hill's experience can have the hardihood to promulgate such views. No one knows better than Mr. Hill that the fundamental ideas for which the two parties contend had their origin with the birth of the republic, and that they must, under the peculiar conditions of our national existence, continue to be the subject of partisan discussion for many years to come. Even if Mr. Hill could persuade a considerable number of persons to join him in the effort to disband the Democracy he would find the task beyond the power of any human agency. Democratic principles must continue to be indestructible so long as the Union asts, and the defeat of November 2d only provides an additional and more urgent reason for their perpetuity as the only possible barrier to the encroachments of centralization and Republican lust of power.-Baltimore Gazette, Dem.

- At last, the most momentous controversies in the history of a people are determined by what is possible and practicable, rather than by what is right in the abstract. That a State had a right to secede from the Union can hardly be questioned. It was a remedy that the Middle and New England States were ready to resort to when it suited them. But when the Southern States seceded, the right of secession proved to be an abstraction. The heavy battalions were on the side of the States which then made up their mind that the Southern States should not withdraw from the Union, and the heavy battalions, as usual, prevailed. There is no reason to hanker after another illustration of the broad truth. The. North will not permit the electoral vote of New York to be so handled as to give the election to Hancock or so as to throw the election of President into the House of Representatives, where the Democrats, by unseating two or three members this winter, can control a majority of the States. There is an inexpugnable determination in the hearts of the Northern people that the Democratic party, while a majority of the voting ower of that party comes from the South, shall not rule the country and have entire possession of the government.-Charleston News and

RAILWAY COMMUNICATION WITH MEXI CO GEN. GRANT'S VIEWS.

[By Telegraph to the Morning Star.] NEW YORK, Nov. 12 .- The World reports that Mr. Romeia, formerly Mexican Minister to the United States, entertained Gen. Grant and a number of leading rail-Way men, at Delmonico's, last night, and laid before them the question of a railway communication with Mexico in a long speech, in which he urged American capitalists to come to the assistance of Mexico in developing her means of interior communication. Gen. Grant made a speech reviewing the history of the Mexican people, and said he thought it would be better to build the road independently, and not be controlled by the nation giving subsidy. In his opinion the Mexican people were now too poor to grant subsidies.
