THE LEASE OF THE HAILROAD We gave yesterday an extract from the account of the late meeting of the stockholders of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad, but we did not give all. We supplement it with a few facts. There was an overwhelming sense on the part of the private stockholders to lease to the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad. the vote as published showed that, Col. John L. Morehead, who represented 350 shares of private stock, de lared unequivocally that he was against Best's proposition under any circumstances, and the reason he did not vote for the Wilmington & Weldon offer was because he did not wish to commit himself, but hoped for a still better bid from some one else. The bid of the W. & W. was $33,000; that of Best $34,000, and still the sentiment against Best was overwhelming. In fact, he stood no chance of getting but 39 votes, and a part of this was by his attorney, who accompanied him.

The Kinston Journal says that "the State's proxy, in obedience to the Governor's telegram, refused to vote on the question, and thus deleated the lease." It says further that the "will of the private stockholders was overwhelmingly in favor of leasing."

It then reproduces two extracts from articles'in the Journal, of the dates of August 12th and August 26th, 1880. We give the gist of these articles:

"We took this to be an intimation that the State's Proxy would break up the meeting in September by refusing to parin ipate in its deliberations, but Gov. Jaivis, in his speech here last Saturday, put a quietus on that by stating that he proposed to allow the will of the private stockholders to govern in the matter, and to allow them to lease whenever they desired and to whom they pre-

"We think we can answer in a very few words why the State's proxy will not withdraw from the meeting:

"1. Because Gov. Jarvis openly asserted in his address here at Kinston that the will of the private stockholders should be allowed to govern in the matter.

"2. Because Mr. F. M. Simmons, the State's proxy, on the test question of leasing, at the June meeting voted aye along with about 1,300 voters of private stock, and after so voting upon full deliberation, he would never resort to a trick to nullify that vote. He might change his opinion as to the advisability of lessing, but would never consent to block the will of the private stockholders unless positive'y command-ed by the Governor of the State."

The STAR reserves all comment for the present.

That great English poet, Altred poem of the last two hundred years, In Memoriam, speaks of a "wide and wandering grave," which is highly poetical. We tried to use the latter yesterday, but we are made to drop into the time-worn "watery graves," with which we dismiss the subject.

The Opera House To-morrow Night's Of the performance to be given at the Opera House to-morrow evening, the New Orleans Times says : "A full house greeted the first representation of "Drink" at the Grand Opera House last night. The play is intensely realistic, and was interpreted by one of the best dramatic companies ever in this city. Cyril Searle's interpretation of Coupeau is a treat in itself, and evinces close study and decided dramatic ability."

Another paper says :

"Miss Eytinge possesses a pleasing, youthful face and comely figure, a strong and not unmusical voice, and an evident familiarity with the business of the stage. The very strong dramatic power displayed by Miss Rose Eytings was quickly recog-nized by the audience, and the shuddering spectators paid the highest compliment to the acting of Miss Eytings that could pos-sibly be conveyed. The American actress had a special recognition when the curtain natched from Ruin. For nearly two weeks past officers have been on the slert for a young white girl by the name of Annie Knox, an orphan, who had been raised in the family of Mr. J. G. Branch, of Polkton, Anson county, and who Tennyson, in the grandest elegiac suddenly disappeared from her home and known to be somewhere in this city In order to stimulate the search for her a reward of $100 was offered for her apprehension, and finally, on yesterday, she was found at the house of one Jim Lassiter, alias Doc. Barnes, colored, on McRae, be tween Red Cross and Campbell streets, and is now held to await Mr. Branch's pleasure. Lassiter, it is said, came here from Charlotte

He was hailed on the street after the finding of the girl by a party who was with the officer, when he drew a pistol, but, without attempting to use it, suddenly took to his heels and escaped to the woods.

The girl is apparently about sighteen years of age, and quite preposessing in appearance. Mr. Branch was telegraphed to and will probably come after her immediately.

Nominating a Bishop for North Care

We learn from the Baltimore papers that convention of the bishops of the Province of Baltimore was held Wednesday at the archiepiscopal residence, Archbishop Gibbons presiding, and there being also present Bishops Becker, of Wilmington; Keane, of Richmond; Kain, of Wheeling; Lynch, of Charleston; Gross, of Savannah; and Moore, of St. Augustine, Fla. The object of the meeting of the prelates was to determine upon the names of candidates to be sent to the Holy See, for, the vacant Episcopal office of North Carolina, which Father Gross, brother of Bishop Gross, declined after being appointed to the office by the Pope. A number of names for the vacant office were proposed, and the bishops proceeded to ballot. The three names receiving the largest number of votes were then placed in an envelope and ordered to be sent to Rome, out of which the Bishop of North Carolina will be selected. The members of the Convention are not permitted to reveal the names of those sent to Rome. It is understood, however, that Rev. John Foley, of St. Martin's Church, of Baltimere, received quite a large vote, and that his name is among these seat to Mayor's Court. A. Bockard and Georgiana Gause, & colored man and woman, were arraigned on the charge of disorderly conduct. Officers Gordon and Everett testified that they heard the cries of "murder" on Dickinson's Hill, in the northwestern section of the city, about 10 o'clock Friday night, and upon proceeding to the house from which the sound emanated, they found it closed and Bockard holding the door shut. Upon forcing their way in they found the woman lying upon the floor, and thought at first she was dead, but upon lifting her to her feet it was discovered that she was "playing 'opossum," though she was expectorating blood. Both parties were then arrested and taken to the guard house. The officers saw no fighting between them, and the woman denied that the man had inflicted any blows upon her "to hurt," saying that she didn't know it was any Larm to cry "murder !" Bockard was discharged. and the woman, who proved to be an old offender, was sent below for ten days.
