WILMINGTON, N. C. WEDNESDAY EVENING, Dec. 15, 1880

EVENING EDITION.

AMERICAN SOBRIQUETY.

Mr. Frederic Gregory Forsyth, the originator of the Grand Aryan-Blue-Blood Combination Show of the Nineteenth Century, has been heard from. He writes a communication to the Baltimore American on the "Aryan Order." He makes an explanation of its design which has been misrepresented, according to the founder. He says:

"The purpose of the order, which is a social one, is to be a combination to promote social virtues; to reprobate fashionable vices and follies, and this, to the degraded vision of those who feed the minds of the American public, is 'sobriety.'"

"Our process of realizing a state of ideal virtue is by imitation—by imitating the greatest examples the human race can offer; and if any of those examples have occurred among us—as do occur—we record the examples as a stimulus to those who believe themselves to be possessed of good and magnanimous attributes."

"But this process of imitation must begin with childhood, when the mind is impressible and the form undetermined. It is, therefore, in course of time our intention to establish for our children a university in which paid instructors are not to teach, but those of us who have the care of work in our hearts, united with care for the well being of our charges."

of Mr. G. F. C.'s letter, says impressively: "The unknown heroes of the coal mines, the common sailors, chevaliers of the police and fire department, obscure clerymen, the mute, inglorious Miltons and bloodless Cromwells of the 'lower orders,' that the Aryan would not condescend to notice, might furnish grander examples of fortitude, patience, faith, incorruptible integrity and devotion to duty than can be found in the books of the peerage. These are the true 'uppaid prodigies' of the great University of Human Life; and if the haughty, swash-buckled, cold-nosed Aryans would sit humbly at their feet, they would learn something good for them to learn and forget much that, for their souls' health, they ought to forget. It is difficult for the average American to look upon the proposed 'Aryan American' order, and the proposed Herald College, and the 'Sacred Order of the Empire,' as other than a huge joke. But already there are enough of respectable names in it to show that the plan has touched one of the weak spots in American character—that ingrained humbug that delights in titles and pedigrees."

The whole thing is stupid and not worth noticing. We were led to suppose first that it was a secret order that meant to destroy if possible our liberties, but it is only the disordered development of a fellow who would rather be the son of Charles II., or some other debauched King, by one of his mistresses, than the son of an honest, horny-handed yeoman and a pure, good woman, who could not boast of "blue-blood" in their veins. America has no place for aristocrats. They are as much out of place on our soil, where "an honest man is the noblest work of God," as ideas of a strong Government are out of place in the head of a President-elect. The American says truly:

"Take the lordlies, most blue-blooded pedigree in Europe, and you will find as large a proportion of unmitigated scoundrels, deafoaches, idiots, lunatics, cowards, deformities, fools and brutes with good clothes on, as in any other grade of life."

"Now, that we understand precisely what sort of an aristocratic Aryan dreamer this fellow Forsyth is, we are rather glad that he started his 'Sacred Order of the Empire.' It will serve as a sort of big molasses jug or bottle. It will attract all of the snobs who love sweet foolishness and sounding titles, and thus will be gathered into one Order all of the fellows who trade in ancestry, and, as Abram Venable once said, who, like the luxuriant potato-vine, have all that is valuable connected with them lying beneath the soil."

We have enjoyed the reading of the supposed message of Hayes so much that we cannot agree to withhold such parts as we are able to make room for from our readers, wishing that they may be as much entertained by the irony and truthfulness of the composition as we have been. It is well done, and no candid man can deny the hit. We copy the more readily because it will serve to remind the readers of the STAR of some of the very extraordinary features of the Hayes Administration upon which we have had occasion to comment so often. In something over two and a half months the de facto will quit forever the Presidential Chair to which he was never elected, and which he has held by the long suffering and continued forbearance of the Democratic party. If the Radicals had been circumcised in all respects in 1876-77 as the Democrats were, they would have precipitated a conflict, the end of which no man was wise enough to foresee."

Some of the papers on one of the Southern fast mail lines do not seem well pleased at the change. If it had not been for the personal exertions of a gentleman not connected with this line the probability is there would have been but one great Southern fast mail line—The Atlantic Coast. On this line the change was much desired and the people all along it are delighted to have it. If a fast mail should give dissatisfaction to important centres on another line and the people interested should make application for a return to the old slow time table no doubt the Postoffice Department would hear them favorably. There are people in North Carolina who still hanker after the good old four-horse stage days and who believe the jehew who "pulled the ribbons" and cracked his whip over the "spanking leaders" and tooted his "winding horn" was a greater man than George Washington or "Kurnel" DeLancy Kane.

The Kinston Journal, in a well considered discussion of legal advertising, makes a suggestion that the members of the Legislature should consider. It is to require the County Commissioners to publish in the county paper one time a statement of every dollar they have expended. It says properly, we think, that they should fix the schedule of prices at reasonable and just rates, so as to prevent excessive charge on the part of the papers. It says:

"If there is any one public thing that the people are interested in more than all others it is in the question of what goes with the taxes they pay. They want to know it all along as the taxes are being used, and the idea of posting up at the court house door, once a year, an itemized exhibit of county finances is supremely ridiculous."

We have been reading, with exceeding pleasure, the quaint sayings, the bright humor, the clever sketching, the tender reminiscences of "Uncle Remus," and have found the adventures of "Brer Rabbit" and "Brer Fox" and the remainder of the characters of the fables really delightful. There is a rich storehouse of genuine enjoyment in this new Southern book. We are glad, really, to see how cordially it is liked in the North. The best papers are loudest in their praise.

MR. HAYES' MESSAGE.

Or What Would Have Been, if the Truth Were Told.

[We are happily enabled to give to our readers in advance of all contemporaries, the following remarkable State paper.—Ed. Washington Post.]

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: I congratulate you on the continued and increasing prosperity of our country. By the favor of Divine Providence we have been blessed, during the past year, with health, with abundant harvests, with profitable employment for all our people, and with contentment at home. Without intending to detract from the credit due to Divine Providence for the larger part of these blessings, it is proper that I should acknowledge the great debt due to the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury for his valuable cooperation. Indeed it is hardly to be doubted that, if he had not smiled upon us, the labor of the husbandman would have been deprived of many of its rewards. During his administration of the important and responsible duties to which he was called, we have been favored with four successive crops of great plenty and value. I cannot express in words the depth or sincerity of my regrets over the untimely deprivation by death of Chief Signal Officer A. J. Meyer. To him more than to any other instrumentality my Administration has been indebted for the early and latter rains which made such remunerative harvests possible. It will be a gratification in which all Christian people share to know that this lamented officer, with wise forethought, left a large stock of carefully assorted weather on hand. Gen. Hazen, whom I have lately appointed his successor, will, I am sure, by frequent consultations with Secretary Sherman, be able to so fructify the incoming crops as to add to the glory and broaden the esteem in which the Republican party is held by the American people."

The occurrence of the twenty-fourth election of Chief Magistrate will be followed on the 4th of March next, by the inauguration for the twenty-third time of the people's choice. I cannot refrain from congratulating you, and through you the country, on the immediate, general and cheerful acquiescence of all good citizens in the result; nor can I forbear to claim for my Administration a large proportion of the credit due to the active participants therein. During the entire canvass my Cabinet advisers, together with the principal heads of departments and bureaus, cheerfully abandoned their respective duties and labored for the success of the Republican nominees. Frequently, during the campaign, not a single official of the first or second rank could be found at the Capital, so zealous were they in the good cause. At one time it was estimated that not less than one-half of the entire clerical force of the Government were actively assisting in, or sagaciously directing the exciting canvass. This, I may add, was but a small proportion of the assistance rendered the Republican party by the employees of the Government, who, it is unnecessary for me to remark, are regulated for their arduous labors out of the revenues which are collected from all classes of citizens, irrespective of political attachments. * * * Being the only member of the Administration not subject to removal, I may claim, without egotism, the merit of being the only person who refused to subscribe or submit to an assessment. In order, however, that unwilling contributors might have no accessible pretence for refusing to comply with the just demands of duly authorized canvassers, I so arranged the public business as to be able to absent myself from the Capital during the entire campaign. In this way I avoided the annoyance of many unpleasant appeals and protests, based upon the general understanding of the civil service order with which I entered upon my usurped duties."

My views concerning the dangers of patronage or appointments for personal or partisan considerations have been strengthened by my observation and experience in the Executive office. Entering upon this office as I did, through the energetic and not altogether commendable services of a large number of men, who were required to commit acts of a punitive character, it was obligatory upon me to furnish them with Government appointments in order to protect them from the penitentiary. I may urge in justification, however, that I was disagreeably complicated by the pledges of my party friends and representatives. The Hon. John Sherman and the Hon. Ed. F. Noyes, both of Ohio, who represented my interests respectively in the disputed States of Louisiana and Florida, embarrassed me by their bargains with Messrs. Stearns, McLib, Cogswill, Dennis, Anderson, Wells, Casanova, Kennor, Jenks and many others who were considered necessary to the successful abstraction, engorgement or false count of the votes in those States or the successful forgery or alteration of their returns. Owing to the unwillingness of the great bulk of the disloyal or Democratic party to submit to a reversal of the popular will by which, on the face of the returns, Mr. Tilden's election was assured, I was still further embarrassed by the demands of persons, found to be necessary at every subsequent stage of the great conspiracy, for remuneration.

The Hon. John Sherman, who engineered the stupendous fraud by which, for the first time in the Nation's history, the fairly expressed will of the people was successfully set aside, was entrusted with the management of the financial department of the Government, a position in which he has acquired distinguished prominence and a large fortune. His relations with one of the principal National banks of the city of New York have enabled the managers of that powerful institution to amass a million and a half of dollars in a single year—technically described as profits—and has made of the Honorable Secretary a millionaire. Very few public servants restricted as to salary to an amount barely sufficient to defray the ordinary expenses of living could, in so short a space of time, acquire a gigantic fortune, unless powerfully endowed by the Great Creator of all things with rare financial skill or genius. * * * Common men will not, without unusual incentives, encounter great perils or hazard extraordinary risks; and, therefore, with a due sense of my responsibility to the party which saved the nation in the dark days of 1861, and which, under God, carried us safely through the rebellion, I have to announce that with one single exception, every man or woman connected with the Presidential staff, so-called, of 1876, has been rewarded. * * *

On the 11th of August, at Columbus, being called upon by my esteemed fellow citizens of that beautiful city to address them, I remarked: "It is gratifying to note that encouraging progress has been made at the South. The labor system has been re-organized, race prejudices and antagonisms have diminished, and concord and patriotic National sentiments are returning."

In my second message to your honorable bodies, at the last session, I also said: "The recent Congressional elections have furnished a direct and trustworthy test of the advance made in the practical re-establishment of the right of suffrage to the liberated race of the Southern States. All disturbing influences, real or imaginary, have been removed from all of these States."

I do not now recall the emergencies which seemed to demand the expression of such sentiments, but I have no doubt they were considered at the time sufficiently exacting. At the present moment of communication I am as imperiously required to utter equally positive and wholly diverse opinions. Continued opposition to the full and free enjoyment of the rights of citizenship conferred upon the colored people still prevails in several of the late slave-holding States. I might dilate upon this topic to an inconvenient length, but you will not consider it necessary. Those who do not agree with one or the other of the opinions I have advanced, have no recognizable demands upon my time. * * * If I have permitted the employees of the Government to be drained of their hard-earned wages by self-constituted assessors in the assumed interest of a party I have not neglected to prudently husband my resources and carefully conserve the salary of the rightful claimant to the office whose emoluments I have so long enjoyed. This, although not written by my own hand, is, notwithstanding, a much more truthful document than any that has yet appeared, from the Executive Mansion, over the signature of

This is denied by its President, R. S.
