The Virginia Republicans have begun to raid on Mahone. Some of them have seen Garfield and talked plainly. They have very decided views upon the Repudiator's position and have not failed to communicate it to the President. The Philadelphia Times has a special of the 15th which says: "A large delegation, headed by Jorgensen, called upon the President to-day to remonstrate against this recognition of the Readjuster movement by the administration. The delegation was composed of some of the most prominent Republicans in Virginia. Several very warm speeches were made, showing the condition of the party in Virginia; the inconsistency of treating with Mahone or his followers; the effect upon Southern Republicans in the future. The bargain with Mahone was denounced. They urged the President to recognize only straight-out loyal Republicans who had earned the right to be trusted, asserting that any other course meant the disintegration and destruction of the real Republican party in Virginia and all through the South, and would be a dead loss to the National Republican party in the end. The removal of Collector J. D. Brady, Readjuster, from the internal revenue district of Petersburg was requested, and also the removal of Colonel D. G. Potts, Democrat, as postmaster at that place. "The President replied that the matters presented to him should have full consideration, and the delegation left with the impression that the 'straight-outs' would not be deserted."

—E. J. Hale's New York letter: It is melancholy fact that the appointment to the most important office in North Carolina, that of Postmaster at Raleigh, has been controlled by Tourgee, the lying carpet-bagger, who is not in any way connected with that State except by the money he makes by slandering her. And his argument with Garfield to induce the withdrawal of the nomination of Holden, that "it would break up the Grant gang!" What a consideration to address to a President of the United States!

OPERA HOUSE.

The amateur operatic performance at the Opera House last night attracted a large audience and most agreeably entertained them for nearly four hours. Eichberg's very charming and spirited comic opera, "The Doctor of Alcantara" was first on the programme, and was splendidly put on the stage, and equally as cleverly interpreted by the ladies and gentlemen taking part. Mrs. Lippitt, Mrs. McFarlan and Mrs. Cameron, were all thoroughly at home in their parts and sang and acted admirably and delightfully throughout, winning always the heartiest appreciation and applause from the critical audience in attendance. Messrs. Clarke, Bradley and Welsh essayed the principal male characters, and acquitted themselves excellently, as did also Mr. Geo. R. Dyer in the decidedly difficult role of Balbazar. The two porters, Sancho and Pano, are also well entitled to mention for the amusement they afforded in their comic duet on the delivery of the basket. The full and excellent chorus added largely to the success of the opera and won golden favor not only for their effective singing but as well for the most captivating and striking appearance they presented in their rich and appropriate costumes. The entertainment concluded with the comic opera, "Box and Cox," which had this time, we think, its first presentation in this city. Messrs. A. B. Chase, J. G. Bradley and G. P. Welsh essayed the characters of "Box and Cox," and "Bouncer" respectively, and gave a most amusing and enjoyable fiasco to an extremely successful and pleasant affair. The piece is substantially the old farce of "Box and Cox" set to music, but the music is of a most exciting and artistic kind, and its creditable rendition, as on last evening, affords most delightful enjoyment. The performance was, if anything, rather too lengthy, and the late hour at which it concluded renders it impossible for us to give a notice this morning in the least commensurate with its merits. We are compelled to simply briefly recount the leading features and assure the performers that their efforts were well thought of and their entertainment considered in every way a grand success by one of, if not the largest audience of the season.

REPORT FROM NEW YORK.

—A report from New York is to the effect that Carl Schurz is to become chief editor of the Evening Post, William Cullen Bryant's old paper, and that it will be red-hot anti-Conkling. —A Herald telegram from Little Rock, Arkansas, says the Currie who was recently killed in New Mexico, was not the murderer of Porter. This really seems authentic from the general tenor of the dispatch. —While nearly every other Southern city is excited over the grand railroad combinations now going on, Wilmington keeps cool and collected. We can afford to wait while others wrangle. We see nothing in the situation yet to excite alarm. With our prospective deep water navigation, the port of Wilmington will before the lapse of five years be one of the most important outlets on the South Atlantic coast. —Charlotte has organized a Building Association with a charter suited to the present usury laws of North Carolina, and we would be glad to see Wilmington do likewise. We can think of no enterprise that would prove a greater blessing to those of our people who can save from one to ten dollars per month of their earnings. The failure of the old Building Associations here should not be considered, experience having pointed out the errors in their organization. —The Richmond Dispatch is level-headed on Conkling's specious and artful scheme to secure Democratic help by what he calls the "courtesy of the Senate." It says: "This scheme appeals to the vanity of every Senator. It was invented by cunning and malice. No Democrat, however, should be beguiled by either a soft phrase or personal considerations into a betrayal of his trust. The fathers of the republic never for a moment designed that the Senator from a single State should have an absolute veto over the appointments made for that State by the President."

THEY ARE BEGINNING TO TALK.

They are beginning to talk of withdrawing Riddle-bargainer, as Senator Morgan called Mahone's, and putting a Union Virginia soldier on the track in his place. But the Democrats will not take Mahone in that questionable shape any sooner than they will take Riddleberger. They will not have any Mahone bitters mixed with their "Old Bourbon Whiskey," not if they know it. The cause of the talk is accounted for by the following paragraph in "Biddid" letter in the Richmond State: "Senator Beck has set the outside world to speculating upon what is to come by remaining in debate that the Democrats would not allow Riddleberger to be elected now or at any other time, and intimating that in December the Democrats may nominate for Sergeant-at-Arms an ex-Union soldier, for whom at least one Republican Senator would vote."

CONCORD SUN.

—Concord Sun: Last Sunday, when Mrs. Hulda Benson, who lives a mile or two above Mill Hill, returned home from preaching, she found her house, kitchen and smoke-house a pile of smoking ruins. Everything contained in these houses was burned. —Fire number two occurred Monday night on Peter Earnhardt's farm. The stable of Tobe Probst and Bud Nesbit, two tenants, was burned with heavy loss. One horse, one mule, a wagon, corn, hay, fowls, plows, harness and all such were burned with the barn.
