WEDNESDAY MORNING, July 20, 1881

MORE CONCERNING MR. DAVIS The staff correspondent of the Phil adelphia Press, "F. A. B.," has supplemented his elaborate interview with ex-President Davis with some additional facts concerning him. Mr Davis told him that before the war he was in consultation with the Governor of Mississippi endeavoring to induce him "to so frame his message as to prevent the Legislature from authorizing the call for a convention to consider the question of secession.' Mr. Davis has been much misunderstood and, consequently, much misrepresented as to his position in regard to secession. He was not per se a secessionist. The Press correspon-"Strong and aggressive as Jeff, Davis is because always in the forefront, than the

he is the bold enemy, more to be respected silent foe who strikes at the Government unmy visit to Mr. Davis show him in a better light than many of our people will be willing to recognize or can understand. Even his own people see the vigorous, able man with a will which does not permit dispute or question; therefore you rarely see in the States which he once governed those little evidences of regard which are so lavishly displayed upon the military chieftains of Whatever Mr. Davis's personal faults, and he has them, of course, as all mortals have, it cannot be said that he has any duplicity or selfishness or vascillating weakness. A strong, resolved, pertinacious, pure, brave, open, earnest man he is; such a man as should be honored and admired in an age of corruption and gilded vice and wide-spread public prostitution. True to his convictions, he has been indifferent to the ignorant, malicious, persecuting assaults of Northern editors and men of the quill, and has not stooped during the sixteen years since he had a country to bandy epithets or expose the errors of wilfully and blindly disposed Southern men who could never appreciate the deep devotion of the great Southron to the cause he espoused finally, the singleness of his purposes and aims, and the purity, honesty and high patriotism that marked all he did. Blunder he did, but Mr. Davis was not the stupendous failure that it has been the fashion among certain schools of politicians in the South to accuse him of. He blundered and any other man in his place would have blundered. If Gen. Lee himself had been President he would have offended some aspiring men, especially some of the political Generals, and he would have been abused by certain papers.

The Press correspondent says there is a single declaration in the second volume of the Davis' work, that is regarded as "the kernel of the work" in the portions of the South he has visited. It is this:

"Lee never contemplated surrender, and, in language similar to that used by Washington during the Revolution, declared that the war could be carried on in the mountains of Virginia for twenty years."

"F. A. B." thinks this is not the forever, one and inseparable."

only passage that will provoke much discussion. He gives this bint that seems to indicate something to at once significant and important: "I think the evidence is in hand that may confound some of Mr. Davis' critics. He is evidently fortified with argument and facts which make it reasonably fair to assume that the point which his Southern critics have especially selected as the point f assault is not without a good defense."

SKNTIMENTS WORTHY OF POURTH OF JULY.

Representative J. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, delivered an address in Philadelphia on the anniversary of our "national" independence. He summed up the results of the war beween the States as follows:

"The North triumphed and the South was overwhelmed. The war and the con-sequent amendments decided: First. Against the right of secession as a constitutional remedy for any supposed evil. We belong to an indestructible Union of indestructible States. "Second. Slavery was abolished: and is orever extinct. "Third the freed African has an equal itizenship with the white race, and his ace, color and previous condition of serviude cannot and do not abate his equal right to life, liberly and property or to suf-frage with the free men of every other race.

"To these decisions I bow with entire acquiescence. They are final and irrevocable, and I believe the universal South does the same with honest and slucere put-

"It is the American decree that the States cannot destroy the Union, and the Union must not destroy the States! Faithful to the integrity of federal powers, we must be zea-lous for the conservation of State authority Each is supreme in its own constitutional orbit of power. Of the Federal government says the present Chief Justice: 'Within the scope of its powers as enumerated and defined, it is supreme and above the States; but beyond it has no existence.' It is a government of delegated powers alone. Its authority is defined and limited by the constitution. All powers not granted to it by that instrument are reserved to the States or the people,' The true friend of our Union must be a friend to the fiberty to the States and of the people, and of the individual man. The enemy of the reserved rights of the States is a fee to their Union. Let us uphold the federal authority in all its integrity to the full and legitimate extent of its delegated powers, and preserve to the gevernment and the people of the several States all their rights and powers for the maintenance of their autonomy and for the promotion of their local, distinct and peculiar interests, so that, with the common progress of all under the control of our federative system, each State may have its distinct and separate type of civilization, 'distinct as the billows, one as the sea."

because of of its truth and value. In the clearest terms the able Virginian statesman has presented the truth and nothing but the truth. The man in the North and the man in the South who cannot subscribe unreservedly honestly, without mental reservation to the above wise, judicious, and patriotic sentiments is not the proper person to be trusted by the people. This government of ours, so complex, so unique, so freighted with blessing, is a government of the people and by the people and for the people. It cannot be perpetuated unless the reserved rights of the States are acknowledged duly, and are most scrupulously upheld and guarded. Each department of the Government must be kept within its own proper sphere, and the General Government must not be allowed to invade the sacred rights and constitutionally guarded powers of the several States. The cautious and wise Virginian well says, and we thank him for it:

"Let us grant to governments the mini-mum of power, and secure to the citizen the maximum of liberty, consistently with the order and safety of society."

Whenever the South affiliates with any party under any plea that does not subscribe to the wise and patriotic utterances contained in these extracts it will have formed an alliance that will end in the destruction of its own liberties. Wipe out the States, as recognized in the Constitution, and you wipe out civil liberty. No candid man, who has information, can believe that the present Government would have been formed if the State rights and State authority had not been recognized specifically in the Constitution. It took a long time before North Carolina would enter into the compact and put her signature to the great indenture; and if there had been no acknowledgment of the States she would to this day have remained free and independent in her sovereignly, and outside of the

The South, since 1865, has acted in the utmost good faith. The North has all along treated out people with suspicion and distavor. The pledges of the South have been despised, but progress of the school under Princihave never been broken. Let us pal Sylvester Hassell. We have tohope for better things. Let us trust that the South is at last better understood. The South is true to the Union. The South cannot be untrue to the States until it is unfaithful to its lessons and unmindful of the past. It accepts what Chief Justice Waite says as to the Federal Government and the States. It will be true to the rights of Federal authority; it will be true to the rights of State authority, for it will be true and faithful to the Constitution. The sentiment of Webster is the sentiment of the Southern whites-"The Constitution and the Union, now and

Fruit Growers was formed at Ra-. The purpose was to advance as far as possible the fruit growing interest of the State. We have received from S. O. Wilson, Raleigh, the Secretary, a circular containing questions which persons are requested to answer to whom it is sent. It embraces a number of inquiries concerning apples, peaches, pears, cherries, plums, everbearing mulberry and grapes. Why the inquiries are limited to these kinds of fruit only we do not know. The object of the association is praisworthy. North Carolina is adapted specially to fruit raising, and it is surprising that a great deal more has not been done than has been done. As we had occasion to mention recently, so we repeat, there is no State that excels North Carolina in the production of the pear, the apple, the peach and the

The death of Dean Stanley, of Westminister Abbey, will cause regret in this country as well as in England. His visit to the United States two or three years since, was one of interest both to him and those who came in contact with him. H was of the Broad Church party in the English Establishment, and was a man of large and generous, views. His historical works and his celebrated book of travels in the Holy Land are of much value, and distinguished for their fine description, superior scholarship, and eloquent style. He was one of the best writers among the clergy of his generation. His last work -theological -has been out only a few months. It has provoked considerable discussion. A superior intellect and a noble heart have been stilled in death.

Every section has its disadvantages. The Southwest, West and Northwest are too often visited by cyclones, tornadoes, &c., to be the most desirable portions of the country for a home. To be always in danger of a visitation from a cyclone is about as disagreeable and exciting as it would be to live at the foot of a badly behaved volcano. The loss of life and damage to property by the floods and whirlwinds and tornadoes in the Northwest must be very great in the aggregate. The last one reported-that of the 16th inst., in Minnesota - was a very fearful one. It swept away a large portion of a thriving town of the size of Goldsboro in a few minutes.

"Was it Not Unwise?"

D G Neelley in Greensboro Patri t. Was it not unwise to attempt to thrust Probibition upon the people of the State? Great reforms are never accomplished through sudden impulse. The minds of the people must undergo a gradual process of preparation. To prepare the people of North Carolina for a Prohibitory law - especially such a law as is now offered us-would perhaps require be labor of years. A heated canvas of a few weeks or months, characterized by an unlimited amount of bitter crimination, with or without an occasional instance of recrimination, is not the canvass to be crowned with favorable results. It does not require "a prophet or the son of a prophet" to foretel that the very canvass now in progress will result in such damage to the cause of temperance as cannot be repaired in a dozen years, and that in less than one fourth of this time the very men (the moderate men,) who are now denounced as "apologists for drunkenness," will be universally regarded as the best temperance men in the State. ls it not astonishing, Mr. Editor, that in this enlightened and Christian land-this land of liberty and boasted equality -there are men, claiming to be our best men, who, in their mad zeal for a favorite enactment, have so far forgotten their duties to God and society as to manifest a determination to tyrannize over the liberties and consciences of a portion of their fellow-men? I charge this as literally true, and, without specifying, refer the people for proof to the "thousand-and-one" utterances in Prohibition prints and elsewhere during the last few months.
