On Friday the mercury stood at 89 degrees. On yesterday it was 93, the hottest of the year, but one when it was 95. Owing to the humidity of the atmosphere and the want of our usual fine breezes during a part of the day, it felt like 105. The air was furnace-like.

The irrepressible Hammond is out in a letter against Dr. Bliss and the other physicians who have attended the President. He excepts Drs. Agnew and Hamilton from his bill of indictment, which consists of seven counts, all of which occurred within forty-eight hours after the shooting. We find in the Baltimore Sun the summary as follws:

"Neglect to make a thorough exploration of the track of the wound and to locate the position of the bullet; neglect to remove the fragments of clothing and of bone which afterwards caused such great suffering; neglect to extract the ball while the strength of the patient was at its maximum and before the track had been partially closed by the swelling of the soft parts; treating the case from the first from the standpoint of guesswork, instead of from actual facts gained by thorough and intelligent exploration; neglect to give exit to pus that had collected and to pieces of fractured ribs till the consulting surgeons had arrived from Philadelphia and New York, and Dr. Agnew did what was proper; being from the first overweighted with a sense of responsibility, owing to the fact that the patient was the President of the United States."

the Accidental Shooting Case.

The following from the Fayetteville Examiner gives fuller details of the accidental shooting, with fatal result, alluded to by us a few days ago: "A sad accident occurred on last Saturday, at the residence of Mr. William Overby. Mr. Edward Rhue, of Wilmington, was in the parlor, and going to the mantel took up a pistol and told some one present that he would show them how Jim Heaton shot himself. He first put the pistol to his side and snapped it, then placing it to his right temple again pulled the trigger, when it discharged and inflicted a most serious wound. Mr. Rhue, of course, thought the pistol unloaded, for it had been lying in that condition for some months. It seems that a few days previous to the occurrence a number one cartridge had been placed in it by some one who was going to use it, and this fact had been forgotten. Mr. R. lingered until Tuesday evening about 4 o'clock, when he expired. His remains were interred in Cross Creek Cemetery."

Assault With a Deadly Weapon. with making an assault with a deadly weapon upon one Lucy Morse, about 12 o'clock on Thursday night last, on Dock, between Front and Water streets, came up for preliminary examination before Justice E. D. Hall in the City Court room yesterday morning, the case having been turned over to him by the Mayor. Quite a number of witnesses were examined, and the evidence, after being sifted of generalities, was to the effect that Lucy Morse and Hannah Watson were on their way to the house of the latter, in company with some strangers who were to be supplied with a drink of water, when, just as they arrived at the gate, Lucy Morse was suddenly seized by the shoulders by some one and felt a sensation as if a pin had been stuck into her neck; she turned and recognized in her assailant the prisoner at the bar. Something was said about calling for a policeman, when Phinney commenced picking up rocks and hurling them at Lucy Morse, one of which struck her on the head. One or two of the witnesses testified to seeing a knife in the hand of Phiney when he first seized the woman, and another saw something glitter in the moonlight and was confident it was either a knife or a razor. Some one started for a policeman, and Lucy hollowed, crying and shouting on the street until she reached the corner of Front and had to be taken to her home. Dr. Walker testified that the wound under the shoulder-blade was made by some sharp instrument, probably a knife, and that the wound on the head was apparently
