V. R. R. getting a large number, we believe.

Recently, since Best began his operations afresh, and took after the Buford Syndicate, with the Boston Syndicate, we see the former demanding anxiously all the convicts they can get, they put all the hands possible to work, and then cry for more. Before they did not hanker after convicts. Now that Best is on hand—the striped fellows are wondrously useful and are needed greatly. What produced the change of tactics? What caused "a change to come over the spirit of their" plans? The work lagged for a long time—drew its very slow length along—looked as if Ducktown would be a failure. There was no push, but they improved what had been built already. Now, the Buford Syndicate is working might and main, and the reports of progress are most favorable. What brought all this about?

If we could only know all—could only get under the nicely and delicately constructed table and see all of the wires and triggers and springs by which the slight-of-hand performer gets off his astonishing results, we would then be in a position to tell more, for we would know more. In the meantime the Buford Syndicate is driving away, and the narrow gauge road to Ducktown is being pushed forward with celerity.

We give Senator Vance full credit for an honest and honorable purpose to serve the people of North Carolina in his war with a tremendous monopoly. He may have blundered in his statements; he may have written without proper information, but that he has acted from a high sense of duty and from a sincere desire to serve the best interests of the people we cannot for a moment doubt. A life like his cannot be effaced by a dash of the pen. His record is before the people of his native Carolina. In war times, in peace times, he has been a tower of strength, and he has rendered the State great and important services. He has engaged in a contest that may give him trouble and even defeat, but it cannot soil his good name or change the opinion of the people who trusted and followed him in the troublous times of war and rallied around his banner and the white plume in the important political contests that have followed since.

Owing to the extreme length of Capt. Andrews's sur-rejoinder we can not now copy it, and it is impossible to curtail it in such a way as to present the points as they occur. The war documents are so voluminous we shall have to cease following the discussion. If Senator Vance replies we may take occasion to refer to it editorially, but we do not purpose now to copy any more documents bearing on the subject.

CORNELIUS HARNETT.

Editor of the Star: There is a slight error in the article on Cornelius Harnett in the issue of the 21st inst. Will you excuse my calling attention thereto?

Alluding to a communication in the Star of the 8th of March, 1881, you cause me to write to say of Harnett that "no stone marks his grave in St. James's church-yard."

Reference to that communication will show that what was said was as follows: "There is nothing to mark the grave of Harnett—who died as much a martyr to the cause he upheld as ably as any who fell upon the field of battle—except a battered old headstone, with its inscription almost obliterated, in the churchyard of St. James's church."

Respectfully, G. D.

It has been some time since you read Major Dave's article. We have never seen the headstone that marks the grave of the first man of the Cape Fear section in Revolutionary times. Upon the headstone, as we learn, there is the date of Harnett's birth and death, with a couplet taken from Pope's Fourth Epistle, lines 131, 132:

"Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks through nature up to nature's God."

These lines express free thinking.

We may mention that four years ago Col. James G. Burr read an eloquent and instructive paper before the Historical Society of this city upon Cornelius Harnett, in which he gave the inscription from his gravestone, referred to Josiah Quincy's visit to Hilton, when (he pronounced in a letter to be found in McRee's Life of James Iredell, that Harnett was the Samuel Adams of North Carolina,) and insisted that a suitable monument should be erected to his memory, whether his remains were removed to Oakdale or continued to repose where they had been for nearly a hundred years. Some steps were taken soon after to remove the remains to Oakdale, but the plan fell through owing to some cause of which we are not in possession. It is never too late to mend. In this centennial year of the patriot and sage's death it is a good and proper time to have him interred at Oakdale near the heroes of the late war, and to place a shaft of native granite over his resting place.

Maj. Roger P. Atkinson, as we supposed he would do, is out in a letter in the Raleigh News-Observer in reply to Mr. Williamson and Mr. Stamps. As we were certain would be the case, his reply is conclusive. A distinguished Presbyterian Doctor of Divinity, who has known the Major from his boyhood, writes to us within two days: "No one who knew Roger Atkinson could be made to believe that he was ever inhuman or cruel to any one." Maj. John C. Winder writes us that the late Col. David M. Carter said to him on several occasions that the Board, of which Col. C. was the able President until his lamented death, ought to give a vote of thanks to him (Maj. W.) because it was through him that Maj. Atkinson had been placed in charge of the convicts, and that if he were to leave the Board would not know how to get along without his valuable services. We think Mr. Stamps would have been guilty of a great wrong if he had attempted to place Maj. Atkinson on the defensive after admitting that God had sent the cold and the cold had produced the severity. We publish a portion of Maj. Atkinson's letter. The News-Observer says:

"In relation to Maj. Atkinson's letter, elsewhere printed, we merely say that we did not intimate that he had been forced to resign. We had no such information as the subject we stated that he had not been forced to resign."

Major Atkinson Indorsed by the Board.

From Maj. Atkinson's Letter in the Raleigh News-Observer.

As to my treatment of them, etc., you will please pardon me for referring to the following resolutions of the board of directors of the penitentiary, passed July 20, 1881, on accepting my resignation:

Resolved, That we regret sincerely that Maj. R. B. Atkinson found cause for severing his connection with this board as its officer to supervise and manage the State convicts upon the Western North Carolina Railroad, as we have ever found in him an efficient, courteous and capable officer, untiring in his efforts for the care and protection of the convicts in his charge, and we feel sure it will not be an easy matter to fill his place.

Resolved, That we cheerfully recommend Maj. Atkinson to the favorable consideration of any and all concerned in him in his new field and wherever his lot may be cast in the future. He is so well qualified that we trust and believe he can at all times find suitable and profitable employment.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and a copy of them sent to Maj. Atkinson at Greensboro.

You can well imagine, living the life I have, and having earned some little reputation for honesty, and a plain, straight-forward, old-fashioned way of trying to walk uprightly in the path of duty, how indignant I should feel at seeing my name paraded in the papers and criticized as one who violated the trust reposed in him by treating prisoners inhumanly. The Wilmington Star did me but simple justice in saying I am incapable of such conduct, and I have charity enough to believe even that Mr. Williamson will, when he finds out something more, accord to me a different opinion than the one he now insinuates. * * * I will add that all through the fall and winter months, and as late in the winter as could be procured, this force had beef once a week, molasses two or three times per week, flour once every ten days, and peas and tobacco once per month. The sick were fed on chieken, crackers, rice, and whatever diet the doctor prescribed that could be obtained. So that the charge made first by the railroad authorities that surry was caused by "improper diet," according to the doctor, is not founded in fact. Coupled with this charge of lost time from surry, caused from improper diet, was another, that from "improper clothing a good deal of time was lost from frost bites." True, there were some frost bites—rather the exception than the rule. There are some nearly every winter. All hands do not take the same care of themselves. And yet last winter the statistics show that they used more coats, pants and shoes than usual. Upon an average the hands were supplied with new shoes every sixty days, besides having old ones repaired. The winter was very cold, but generally dry. There were no deep snows in the mountains. Besides, orders were given and executed that all the working parties have big fires, and the prisoners were allowed to warm often. Upon several occasions I ordered in the hands, deeming it too cold to work. But it seems to have settled down that it was "overcrowding and foul air" that caused the surry. Capt. Stamps says the cells were such as had been used ever since the force had been working on the Western North Carolina Railroad. In this he is mistaken. There is a decided improvement in the quarters and cells since moving the first time from east of the Blue Ridge; they are better ventilated, there is more room, they are new and occupied from not over six to eight months, and good hospitals. I unhesitatingly declare that the accommodations on the Western North Carolina Railroad, for both convicts and guards, are, were better than I have ever seen on any public work, with or without convict labor.

They were well fed and clothed, properly treated when sick, and not overworked.

The physician, Dr. H. F. Bengert, was particularly attentive to his duties.

Captain Stamps, in his communication, reflects on my management when he states that he "should certainly have taken the position before the board at its July meeting that Major Atkinson must be made to show cause why he should not be held responsible for the evil effects of overcrowding and foul air had he not resigned before the time," but he admits in the same paragraph that the "disease never would have occurred had it not been for last winter's exceptional cold."

Well, I did not certainly cause the cold, and if the cells were not large enough, why not have ordered them to be made larger? They were then larger than they had been accustomed to, and far better in every particular. My judgment was that they were large enough.

POLITICAL NOTES.

—It is unfortunate for the Republicans that they did not set a better example of generosity and patriotism in the Senate last spring.—Boston Herald, Ind. Rep.

—The Snow Hill (Md.) Register nominates Samuel J. Tilden for the Presidency this year. There is a peculiar appropriateness about the first suggestion coming from Snow Hill, because if Mr. Tilden is nominated he will certainly be snuffed under.—Balt. American, Rep.

—Mr. Henry Watterson remarks in the Louisville Courier-Journal that "the prospect now before the questions we have with prominence in Congressional debates which they have not enjoyed for a long time. The Democrats propose to stand by the Cincinnati platform—a tariff for revenue only."

TWINKLINGS.

—The population of Alsace-Lorraine has increased over 34,000 in five years.

"—If I was as bald as you," said Gus De Smith to one of the most prominent citizens of Austin, "I would wear a wig."

"I don't see why you should wear a wig if you were bald," said the other. "My hair hasn't fallen out yet."

—A Philadelphia gentleman, who, a year ago, bought 2,000 shares of Haubal & Co. stock, sold it last week at 110 making $130,000. Another, who lost $130,000, dumped out his shares and was drowned. Here are texts for many reasons.

PERSONAL.

—Lieutenant Charles P. Roe, of the Second Cavalry, reports that the monument erected to General Custer on the battle field where he fell has been completed.

—Surgeon General Barnes is quoted as having said, since his return to Washington, that the President was almost in a dying condition when he reached Long Branch.

—A Paris telegram announces that Prince Jerome Napoleon has decided to renounce his claims to the leadership of the Bonapartists in favor of his son, Prince Victor.

—Governor Littlefield, of Rhode Island, has determined to call an extra session of the Legislature to fill the vacant seat of the United States Senate caused by the death of General Burnside.

—It is said that the private fortune of Queen Victoria amounts to $80,000,000, and she possesses an annual income of $3,250,000. Before her birth her parents were so poor that they had to borrow the money to pay their passage to England, that the expected Princess might be born on English soil, and she remained in comparative poverty until she ascended the throne.
