When sectionalism raises its Gorgon head let the following words of the late President be remembered.

The Baltimore American, Republean, says the right thing for the Democrats to do is to elect "a moderate Republican." This would be generous. But where is the "mode-'ate" to be found, and if found who will go on his bond that he will continue to be "moderate?" The Democrats will be apt to do as the Republicans would if they could-elect one of their own number.

It is settling down fast in the North to the conviction that Arthur will make a clean sweep and make a new Cabinet out and out. The Stalwarts say this is what he will do and what he ought to do. One of this sort has been interviewed by the Philadelphia Times, who scouts the idea of Garfield's policy being carried out. Here is the ways this leader talks:

"The President is not Mr. Garfield, Mr. Hayes or General Grant. He couldn't be other than Arthur if he tried ever so much. As President he is sworn to discharge the duty to the best of his ability. As President he is responsible for the conduct of the government. It will not do for him to say, 'Well, well, Garfield would have done this and I'll do it,' for in doing so he would violate his oath and merit the contempt of all men for such an attempt to shift the responsibility of his office upon the dead President. He is no more bound by Garfield's policy and to Mr. Garfield's advisers than Mr. Garfield was by the policy of Mr. Haves or to his Cabinet.

After thus delivering himself he consoles the country by assuring it that Arthur is "a man of good, plain, horse-sense," and he will so act. Hear him farther with a statement of the

"'He will begin his administration from the beginning, and it will be President Arthur's administration, mind you, and the administration of no one else, living or dead.' The speaker was a warm friend of Mr. Garfield's personally, though sympathizing more strongly with the Stalwart wing of the party. His words so concisely illustrate a wide prevailing sentiment that they are given as nearly as memory serves.'

In refusing to pursue Garfield's policy, will the new President pursue the Grant-Conkling policy? That is the important question for the coun-

We had forgotten, until we saw it mentioned by the Cleveland correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, that there had been great danger of President Lincoln's remains being made way with through the act of human hyenas. He writes:

"That appalling chapter in the history of the Lincoln monument at Springfield was related to me to-day by one who knew and loved the dead Lincoln and who lived to enjoy almost a full measure of General Garfield's trust and friendship. The speaker recalled the fact that the plans of the Springfield robbers were laid while two millions of people were bringing their testimonials of love and respect to the bier of the dead President. The plot was as de-liberate as the assassination had been. The remains, after lying in state in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Cleveland and Chicago, were borne in a leaden casket to their last resting-place, a small vault shut in from the world only by a barrier of iron bars, to which the loving people brought fresh flowers. One who went to the tomb late at night discovered the work of ghouls, who knelt there, and, in the darkness of night, slowly sawed their way into the chamber of death. The casket was removed from its resting-place and carried out into the open fields before help was brought and the foulest of crimes interrupted. On the following day the ponderous granite block at the base of the tomb was taken up and the remains of the dead President placed

President Garfield's body has been placed in the public vault at Cleveland until the final interment. Veterans of the Forty-second Ohio Regiment have offered to guard the vault.

Senator Voorhees, in his eloquent memorial address on the late President, at Terre Haute, Indiana, said he had known him eighteen years and had served with him in Congress seven years. He said his two great traits were kindness of nature and mental activity, The following is good and cordial:

"He had the joyous spirits of boyhood and the robust intellectuality of manhood more perfectly combined than any I ever knew. Nature was bountiful to him, and his acquirements were extensive and solid. If I might make a comparison I would say that with the exception of Jefferson and John Quincy Adams he was the most learned President in what is written in books in the whole range of American his-

Narrow Escape.

Capt. Walter Taft's little steamer, the Biz, was coming up the river Saturday afternoon, with himself and Mr. Wm. Mints' son on board, when the boat ran upon a snag at the jettles, about nine miles below this city, and the two found it impossible to get her off. Finally they thought the boat was about to capsize and Capt. Taft with his young companion started to swim ashore, first having repeatedly blown the whistle and shouted for help. This was forthcoming, and after swimming some distance the two were taken up by a boat manned by colored men. The rescuers then took Capt. Taft and young Mints to the steamer, which, with their assistance, was removed from her perilous position, when Capt. T. and the young man got on board and came up to the city. When rescued Messrs. Taft and Mints were nearly

OPERA HOUSE. Juo. E. Owens.

The audience last night, though not so arge, was even more highly pleased and enthusiastic over the performance than on the evening previous. "Everybody's Friend" and "The Happiest Day of My Life" were the pieces, and as acted by Mr. Owens and company made a very agreea ble and enjoyable entertainment, that should, we thought, have been more generally patronized.

The next engagement is that of the Hoey Hardie Combination, for next Monday and Tuesday nights, in "The Child of the State" and "Diplomacy," both excellent plays, and to be presented by an exceptionally fine travelling company. The Philadelphia Times says that Mr. George Hoey's play has conquered a genuine success at the Arch Street Theatre, and it is a pleasure to say that it deserves all the patronage and applause it receives.

An Alleged Case of Burglary. Isaac Stanly, colored, was arrested Monday evening on the charge of burglariously entering the residence of one Carrie Boone, colored, on Church, between Fifth and Sixth streets, on Friday night last. It seems that the complainant's husband was away from home, and that some time during the night, there being a lamp burning in the room at the time, she suddenly awoke and found a man standing near her bed. She thought at the first moment that the person was her husband who had returned home, but upon closer view discovered that the man was a stranger. She then screamed and shouted, arousing the neighbors, some of whom resided in the same building, but in the meantime the accused had made his escape. It was subsequently discovered that the man entered by forcing open a window, and had afterwards unlocked the back door and changed the key to the outside. a precaution which can be readily understood. Carrie Boone had a daughter in the room with her who said she knew the man, and identified him the next morning as i alleged, in the person of Isaac Stanly, who was arrested and lodged in jail to await a preliminary examination before Justice

Mr. Sneeden's Condition.

We were glad to learn, as we did at a late hour vesterday afternoon, that the condition of Mr. John Sneeden, the unfortunate young man who was so badly injured by the premature dtscharge of a cannon during the ceremonies in respect to the memory of President Garfield, on Monday afternoon last, was as favorable as could be expected and that he was resting tolerably easy. It cannot be determined with any degree of certainty, as yet, as to the probable result in regard to what remains of the wounded right hand or with reference to the injury to his sight. He may lose one of his eyes, and there is a possibility that they may both be preserved. The great matter for thankfulness just now is the assurance of his physician of the probability of his final recovery from the shock of the wound upon his nervous sys-

OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

Some Facts and Speculations in Connection with the Proposition to Establish Direct Communication by Steam Between Wilmington and Foreign Ports, &c.

British steamer Barnesmore in our waters as a matter of only ordinary interest, without important or permanent significance. are greatly mistaken. Her appearance here was the result of months of earnest thought and deliberation, and with the view of inaugurating a new era in the commercial history of our port. Her visit here is an experiment, it is true, but there is every reason to hope that it may prove a successful one, and that the Barnesmore may in reality prove but the pioneer of a permanent line of steamships between Wilmingtonand European ports. No seaport town or city has ever attained to a position of any prominence where their leading business men have lacked those indispensable requisites to prosperity-push and energy. To these important qualities Norfolk to-day owes whatever of commercial prosperity she enjoys, and the diversion of the products of our own State from our own ports to build up that of a neighboring Commonwealth is one of the natural results. Norfolk, though possessing better natural advantages than some other ports, made very insignificant strides in commercial progress until her business men resolved to have direct steamship connection with European ports. This was the great incentive which has given her a position among the most prosperous and promising of Southern cities, while the lack of it has kept Wilmington, as it were, in a state of commercial vassalage and consequent poverty. There is no reason to-day why Wilmington should not be among the foremost of her Southern sisters in the struggle for wealth and commercial prosperity if her business men would only

One argument in favor of steam in con nection with our foreign exportations is its superior reliability as compared with sails When a steamer starts for a foreign port some idea can be formed as to when she will reach her destination, which is a matter of considerable importance, especially to shippers in the interior, who sell for delivery in Liverpool in the following month, which at the beginning of the season is the most profitable business. All such shipments as these have hitherto passed Wilmington and gone to Norfolk, Port Royal, etc. Another point for consideration in this connection is the fact-and we are assured that it is a factthat a steamer sailing every week from Wilmington, at current rates of freight, would (in all probability) double the cotton receipts in a year.

The Barnesmore will remain here about ten days, and will, we understand, leave not less than $5,000 cash for pressing, supplies, paying stevedores, etc., which fact is adduced in answer to the oft-repeated assertion that steamers leave no money in Wilmington.

When the ship returns to Liverpool Capt. Trenery will make his report, exhibit his account of disbursements, his log showing whatever difficulties or inconveniences he may have encountered in making this, his first trip to Wilmington, and we are assured that from present indications the exhibit will be exceedingly favorable to our port. There is every reason to expect, and at a very early day, a still further improvement in our bar and river, but even with the present depth of water Capt. Trenery is of the opinion that a line of steamers could run here without any trouble. We are satisfied that Messrs. Alex. Sprunt & Son, the 'consignees of the fine steamer now here, have ventured upon the experiment of introducing her as much with the view of benefiting Wilmington and endeavoring to place the city upon the highroad to prosperity, as from a desire to minister to their own personal aggrandizement, and that nothing would please them better than to see a general interest awakened among our business men upon this subject, with the resulting cooperation so necessary in bringing about at once a system of direct communication by steam with Liverpool and other foreign ports.

an appropriate sermon for the occasion by Rev. Joseph G. Fry, pastor in charge, in response to calls George L. Mabson and Joseph E. Sampson delivered short ad-dresses touching the death and merits of the President, after which a committee appointed by the congregation to draft a series of resolutions, reported the following which were, on motion, adopted: WHEREAS, By the inscrutable providence of God the nation received on the 2d day of July last the sad and appalling intelli-gence that James A. Garfield, the President of the United States, had been assassinated; and whereas, on the 19th of this September a still more heart-rending announcement of its fatal result in the death of the Paesident: therefore Resolved. That this congregation, as wor-shippers of an all-wise God, bow in humble submission to His decree in removing from us our chief executive, James A. Garfield, who, while administering the nation's tem-poral affairs, adorned the highest position in the gift of his country with moral virtues and Christian graces.

Resolved. That while we are called to sit in the shadow of a great national bereavement, which naturally casts its deepest gloom over the nation, as a race we feel more keenly his unnatural death, he having endeared himself to us by years of long friendship, both in private and public life.

Resolved, That, cherishing for his memory a profound admiration and affection, we proffer to his bereaved family our sincerest sympathy and condolence. Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing proceedings be furnished our city papers with the request that they be published. J. E. SAMPSON.

WILMINGTON, Sept. 27, 1881. Mr. Editor: It was my pleasure (and) feel to my profit) to worship last Sunday morning at the Front Street Methodist church. As I approached I noticed the doorways were draped in mourning. Entering the church my eyes resaid upon the sad emblems festooned around the front of either gallery and over the pulpit arch. The pulpit was clad in the habiliments of sorrow, and the pillars 'neath the gallery were wreathed heavily with drapery. Tender hands, moved by tender and sympa thizing hearts, had tastefully draped the church in mourning, consequent upon the tragic death of the nation's Chief Executive. The surroundings were calculated to soften the heart, and make one tread lightly, as though it were upon the threshold of the grave. Soon the pastor entered, and the choir sang in full harmony with the occasion Blessed are the dead," &c. After the usual service of prayer and song the pastor, Dr. Yates, took for his text a part of the 1st verse of the 97th Psalm: "The Lord reigneth-Let the earth rejoice." I shall not attempt to give even a synopsis of his sermon; it is beyond me to do this; but for grandeur of thought and impressive of truth, a lesson from the sad event-fraught with warnings to us as a nation, I have never heard the like. It was a bold stand for God and righteousness; a bold stand for law and order; a bold stand against abuse and political sinnings. It was full of tenderness and sympathy for the wife and mother whose hearts have been pierced by the assassin's bullet, and for whom s great tear-drop of the world was being shed. Few dry eyes were in that audience, and none I think left but that felt they had learned a great lesson. For one, I would like to hear that sermon repeated, and would that every citizen of Wilmington could listen and learn the same lesson. Truly yours, HEARER. DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE.-Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, bed-bugs, roaches, vermin, flies, ants, insects. 15c. per box. J. C.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.—Rev. Sylvanus Cobb thus writes the "Boston Christian Freeman": We would by no means recommend any kind of medicine which we did not know to be good—particularly for infants. But of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup we can speak from knowledge; in our own family it has proved a blessing indeed, by giving an infant troubled with colic pains, quiet sleep, and its parents unbroken rest at night. Most parents can appreciate these blessings. Here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the sleep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." And during the process of teething its value is incalculable. We have frequently heard mothers say they would not be without it from the birth of the child till it had finished with the teething siege, on any consideration whatever.
