Mr. Archibald Forbes and his Lecture To-night.

To-night Mr. Archibald Forbes, the celebrated war correspondent of the London Daily News, whose graphic descriptions of the stirring scenes and bloody encounters of the late Russo-Turkish war gave him a world-wide notoriety and fame, and who has since achieved for himself an equally brilliant reputation in the role of a lecturer, will appear at the Opera House and give our people some idea of "The Inner Life of a War Correspondent." The lecture will be under the auspices of the Wilmington Library Association, and we have ample assurance from all sides that it will be of such a character as to warrant all the seemingly extravagant praises that have been bestowed upon it by the press everywhere it has been delivered. The Boston Post thus speaks of Mr. Forbes' effort

"Mr. Forbes told his story with becoming modesty, but at the same time with a true appreciation of the grandeur and importance of the events which he described. His style is marked by the bold and decisive features which characterize men who have become familiar with army discipline, and yet contains enough of social or courtly grace to leave upon the mind of the listener the impression that he is addressed by one who speaks not only from the standpoint of a skillful soldier, but at the same time from the standpoint of an impartial observer. His descriptive narrative contains all the beauty which might characterize a poet's dream, and that thrilling interest which holds the auditor spellbound un-til the last words fall from his lips. On the other hand his sallies of wit and humor reveal' a nature which, if it revels in the sublime, yet stoops at times to a keen relish of the humorous and ridiculous.'

Foreign Shipments Yesterday.

The shipments to foreign ports yesterday embraced the following: The German barquentine Maria Sophia, Capt. Sachan, for Rio de Janeiro, by Messrs. Parsley & Wiggins, with 260,848 feet of lumber, valued at $4,303 91; the British barque Joe Read, Capt. Edwards, for Liverpool, by Messrs. Alex.
