We hope to see an awakening interest in the community in the matter of their public library. It is an institution of which our people should feel proud, containing, as it does, all the standard and popular works of the day, as well as of other days, together with many of the leading periodicals and newspapers of our own time, to say nothing of the old files, the perusal of which is such a source of satisfaction to many readers. If the reading community generally would become interested in the Library to the extent of lending some pecuniary assistance in meeting its liabilities and keeping it up to a proper standard of efficiency, there would not be so much trouble experienced by its friends in making it, as it deserves to be, a valuable and prosperous institution in our growing city, It should be remembered, too, that in years past it has been through the instrumentality of the Library Association that the literary appetite of the community has been catered to, in the admirable lectures which have been delivered from time to time; and this is another and important reason why the association should receive every possible encouragement at the hands of the people
