FOOD FOR REFLECTION.

Senator Morrill, in a speech made in the Senate at the time of the adoption of the present High Protective tariff, said that it was a "war measure" and was only to be retained "temporarily." How long a burdensome, unjust and absurd tariff must remain in force before its "temporary" character is served we are not informed. Seventeen years after it was put in force it continues and promises to continue indefinitely. The Protectionists are united and have no idea of allowing it to be curtailed in any of its important protective features. The Democrats are split up as usual, and some advocate a measure that plays directly into the hands of the Protectionists, although protesting that they abominate the Morrill tariff. But in point of fact the present tariff is not as it was when first created. It contains 4,000 articles, higher now than they were in the beginning. The New York Times says:

"On most varieties of iron the duty remains unchanged; on pig iron it has been advanced from 60 cents per 100 pounds to 70 cents. On steel, lead and zinc it remains the same. On copper in pigs and bars it has been advanced from 24 cents to 5 cents per pound; on copper rods from 35 per cent. to 45 per cent. On varieties of wool which then paid from 3 cents to 6 cents a pound with from 10 per cent. to 11 per cent. ad valorem duty, the rate is now 20 cents per pound and 35 per cent, ad valorem, Vsrieties of plain glass which then paid 35 per cent. ad valorem, now pay a specific duty which in 1880 amounted to 69 per cent."

Mr. Fessenden, an able Republican, said in 1864, as quoted by the

"The policy of the country, I take it, is to get money to support the Government principally from internal taxation, and, to an exceedingly large degree, from manufactures. The tariff is adjusted, and was adjusted before, upon that simple principle with reference to the internal revenue tax-

In 1864 the internal revenues were $211,000,000. Of this vast sum $163,000,000 was derived, as the Times shows, from articles that are no longer taxed. It thinks that this fact makes it obvious that there is great reason for a revision of the tariff that was intended, as Mr. Morrill said, as "a war measure," and to be "temporary." Surely, seventeen iniquity and burden resting upon the people. If you get rid of the taxes raised by internal revenues, you will be sure not to get rid of the war tariff. You may have it, by 1884 or 1886, razeed itpon a thousand articles, but the great sources of taxes by imposts will remain in force. The Government has to be maintained and the taxes have to be raised. If not raised | nations of the earth. The point is on tobacco and liquors, must they to make good selections and then stick not come from articles that are used | to them.

The North pays five dollars to the South's one dollar under the revenue system, you increase your own burpose to take a hand in such game.

A special from Lexington, S. C., says that the death sentence of Squire Clark, colored, has been commuted to imprisonment for life. He was to have been hanged yesterday for the marder of a white man named W. Scott Hook, in October, 1877.

In nearly every State the pardoning business is progressing at a lively vet see the folly of allowing one man to undo the work of the courts. As sure as truth is mighty if there is not an end put to this autocratic business hangings by mobs will become of weekly occurrence in the South. One of our State exchanges says nine hangings by Judge Lynch have occurred in North Carolina since last May. If these figures are correct then that is more than one a month. Papers may say what they please of the horror and dangers of mob law, but in the present uncertain condition of the courts, with nine chances in favor of a villain's escape to one that he will he punished to the fullest extent, when a great crime like rape or murder is committed in a peaceful community, the best men will take a hand in giving the culprit a quick and sharp exit to another world, Pardonings must cease or hangings by mobs will continue, moralists to the contrary notwithstanding. We may deplore justly such acts, but society must feel safe or the vengeance of men will follow crime without fear and without mercy.

One dastardly, horrible murder perpetrated in a neighborhood-such as shooting a good citizen in his own home or killing him on the highway -has been known to throw every household into a condition of alarm and no man felt safe at home or on the road. The law seems powerless. The pardoning power stands ready to be exercised. The Judges and officers of the county are ready to sign a petition. People by hundreds can be got to ask for pardon instead of demanding a life for a life. Is it then to be wondered at that men thus aroused and standing in apprehension of assassination at a time they know not when, should unite and taking law into their hands send the villain to the grave, untried, unshrivened and unpardoned?

SCHOOL BOOKS.

In the making of books, and school books especially, there is no end. I is true many excellent new books are produced that are an improvement on all that have gone before, but there are hundreds that are published just for the sake of money, and when there is no need of them. A book like Anderson's "Ancient History First Part," is a blessing, because it is done so faithfully and with a full understanding of the latest and highest authorities. But then every publisher must have his "Ancient Histoand many of them are taxed actually ry" also, and the result is the teachers, parents and school committeemen are as apt to select some of the badly done as the best.

> There is a vast demand for school books, and hence every Northern publishing house has its series, and so the country is flooded fairly with good, bad and indifferent. The following is an estimate of the multiplicity of school books that we find in the Providence (Rhode Island)

> "The number of higher arithmetics required in the public schools of the United States is 1,750,000; arithmetics, lower, 3,-750,000; algebras, 500,000; astronomies, 750,000, book-keeping, 500,000;copy-books, 15,000,000; composition books, 1,000,000; etymologies, 500,000; geographies, 5,000-000; grammars, 2,000,000; histories, 2,000, 000; natural philosophies, 500,000; readers, 5,000,000; spellers and definers, 2,500,000. The annual cost of school books to the users is estimated at $5,000,000. As most persons are aware, the change of text books goes on continually, else publishers would have no business. As soon as the pupil is fairly grounded in one arithmetic, some one discovers that the pupils will go astray if the book is longer in use, and a new book is introduced. This takes its turn to go out as soon as another has been invented to

CURRENT COMMENT.

Why should it be a matter of surprise that the Virginia Legislajority of the members of that body were elected because they were opposed to paying honest debts, and rate. We do hope the people will men who don't pay their debts are just the kind likely to be the most sensitive on the subject of their "honor," and most desirous of settling such questions, not by evidence of reason, but by the chance shot of a pistol. Repudiation and duelling go very well together .- Phil. Ledger.

- The result of the recent election in Virginia presents a case strikingly in point. Nothing but the united efforts of the Republican party throughout the Union, backed by the active intervention of President Arthur's Administration, enabled Mahone and his repudiators to cover the old State with dishonor, and place her in the disgraceful attitude so long occupied by that model Republican State, Minnesota. All these efforts, and all this power, were directed to the one single object of banding the negroes of Virginia into a solid column, and marching them, "like dumb, driven cattle," to the polls to deposit ballots they could not read, for the shameless and most dishonerable repudiation of an honest debt.-American Register.

--- The venom with which Mr. Blaine is pursued by the Grant-Conkling wing of the Republican party shows how completely that leader and his friends are to be ostracised in the house of their friends. Their influence is to be reduced to the minimum. They will be allowed to vote for Administration candidates, but in places of trust the Administration will have none of them. There is but one thing left for those who opposed Grant at Chicago, and that is to make a square fight for their political lives. In an acquiescent mood they will not amount to the Yankee's traditional "row of pins." In the Stalwart caravan of progress under command of Arthur they are not respectable "yaller dogs" under the wagon. Every time the slaughtering ax comes down a Garfield Republican head falls into the basket. The President does not talk, but there is concentrated logic in all his acts .- St. Louis Republican.

- Boston Post: The so-called "Half-breeds" of the Republican party can begin to see by this time without the aid of an opera-glass, that they are left out in the cold. The men who jeered at Roscoe Conkling and "me too" Platt as the great political wrecks are now wandering in the Siberia of powerlessness, while Conkling, Grant and all the "old crowd" are coming to the front. Every change "puts a "Half-breed" out and a "Stalwart" in. Blaine, the great leader of the anti-Grant forces, is now merely a private citizen, and Frelinghuysen, one of the old guard, is the head of the Cabinet. Mac-Veagh, the famous reformer (according to his friends), and Windom, the wise man from the Northwest, no longer enter into the secret counsels of the Government, "Half-breedism" is at a discount, and "Stalwartism," apparently crushed and helpless, now flourishes like a big sunflower. For the leaders of the "Half-breeds" no sympathy will be evoked. Men who will use the patronage of the nation to bribe legislators to vote for certain candidates for Senators; men who don't know what it is to keep a promise; men whose idea of statesmanship is to sneak and play sharp dodges; in short, men of the stamp of the "Halfbreed" leaders can never hope to have the sympathy of the American

An Old Story of the Fight Between the Constitution and the Guerriere.

From the New York World. The late Ogden Hoffman, who was a midshipman with him, used to tell an odd story of the engagement between "Old Ironsides" and the Guer-He said that as the ships drew near to each other an officer came in haste to Hull to ask for orders to fire. "Not yet," was the quiet response. As they came still nearer and the British vessel poured in her fire, the First Lieutenant of the Constitution came on the poop and begged permission to return the broadside, saying that the men could not be restrained much longer. "Not yet," was the reply. Still nearer the British ship came, and the American prisoners who were in the cockpit of the Guerriere afterwards said that they began to be-lieve that their own countrymen were afraid to measure their strength with the enemy, and this thought gave them more pain than the wounds which some of them were suffering from. In a moment the Guerriere gallantly came forward, showing her burnished sides, and as the swell carried her close to the very muzzles of "Old Ironsides," Captain Hull, who was then quite fat and dressed in full tights, bent himself twice to the deck, and, with every muscle and vein throbbing with excitement, shouted out: "Now, boys, pour it into them." That broadside settled their opponents, and when the smoke cleared away their commander's tights were to be seen split from waistband to heel. Hull, nothing disconcerted, gave orders with perfect coolness, and only changed his tights when the British commander's

To Europeans the proposal to have a day's horse-shooting sounds inexpressibly barbarous; but the Australian farmers near the interior regard the troops of wild horses which may often be seen trespassing on their inclosed lands as vermin. They do not possess any of the qualities which often make the wild horses of the South American plains valuable, and besides destroying vegetation which might be made to support more valuable life, they not infrequently tempt the settler's horses to join them and lead a vagabond life. Worse than this, they are suspected of communicating disease to settled districts. To meet the difficulty of dealing with the increasing hordes of wild horses, the Chief Inspector of Stock in New South Wales proposes that they should be classed as noxious animals, under the Pastures and Stock Protection act.

A Little Girl's Christmas Letter. Cleveland Herald.

A letter was received at the postoffice yesterday addressed to "Mr. Santa Claus, Cleveland, O." The direction was in printing, and bore the ear marks of a child's inexperienced hand. The letter itself was in printing also, and covered, in a very rregular manner, half a sheet of note paper. It read as follows:

"Dear Darling old Santa claus. Please Send me a nice little bed and A Dolly and a tree. Like the dolly To have Blond Hair and Blue eyes Wax But you know Best what I like I am a sick little Girl I cant walk. Mama told Me how to spell some of the Words. I made my Letters Big and small. I will love you. I is eight Years old. MAUD."

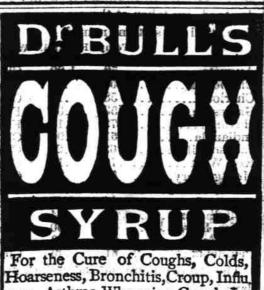

The address was affixed and one of the carriers in that part of the city quietly investigated and found Maud to be a reality and the little daughter of a poor widow living on Woodland avenue. A little fund was immediately raised and an elegant large doll purchased. The wife of one of the clerks has dressed it in handsome attire, and on Christmas morning little Maud will wake up to find that old Santa Claus got her letter and granted her request.

A man by the name of Price, near Alma, who is almost blind and who is wholly uneducated and not at all sprightly in other respects, is said to be able to solve almost any problem in mathematics that can be given him. He uses no figures, but makes his calculations on his fingers. Mr. Hampton, who is teaching in that neighborhood, gave him last week the following problem, which he solved quicker than a good scholar present could do by algebra: A man bought a horse, buggy and harness. The horse cost forty-eight dollars more than the buggy and the buggy two and three fourth times as much as the harness which, but a few brief days ago, was | and the harness one-seventh of the whole sum paid. What was the whole sum paid? what did each cost? He has no difficulty in working fractions, however complicated and intricate. Mr. James P. Graves informed us that he once asked him what was the third and the half of one-third of three and one-third and he was ready with the answer almost as soon as he had finished the question. He is about 23 years old.

> — The Chinese Navy is picking up. The Emperor has established a great arsenal at Kao Chang Miao, six miles from Shanghai, where 1,300 natives are at work making arms and ammunition. The rifles are said to compare with the best English and American make. Nearly a dozen steam frigates, each carrying twenty six guns, and provided with 400 horse-power engines, have been built and launched from the works.
