THE FOREIGN OUTLOOK.

The Republican party in France have now such an overwhelming majority that there is no prospect of any reverse for years to come. In fact the growth of republicanism in France has been steady for decades, and since the disastrous war with Germany its growth has been very marked. At least three-fourths of the people of France are in favor of a republican form of government, and if wisdom and justice and honesty prevail in the administration of public affairs the whole body of the French people, with the exception of a few thousands who love monarchy and aristocracy, will become attached sincerely and thoroughly to the new and changed order of things. The tendency in the world is to a more liberal and equal government where the people have rights and exercise power. In England there is constant progress in the direction of popular freedom and power. In almost every nook and corner of Europe there is leaven of this kind at work in the great popular heart. While Spain has gone back to a monarchy and Germany is governed still more despotically, there are signs of measurably better things in the operations of oppressive laws. It is known, now, and we shall show this more at large hereafter, that the protective tariff, now in operation in Germany, has proved a perfect dead weight and a stupendous failure.

The receipt of the German Emperor excites a great deal of discussion throughout that country. The excitement is represented to be very deep and the situation grave. One paper was seized because it characterized the manifesto as nothing short of a coup d'etat. There will be nothing like an attempt at revolution, but the discontents are deepening and widening. The fact that the aged Emperor contemplates having his son proclaimed Regent on the 22nd of March indicates, we suppose, a serious condition of affairs.

In the mean time Irish affairs grow worse if anything. The Government is strengthening its grip steadily, and repressive and coercive measures are being increased each week. The people—the majority—hate the Government, and disorders of various kinds are manifesting themselves. Some are hopeful that the Landact will yet triumph, and that before two years the good will so completely assert itself that murders and incendiary meetings will disappear and order and contentment prevail. So be it, but we are doubtful. In a few weeks the Parliament is to assemble and then the excitement may be renewed. The Premier is between two fires. The Irish, under Parnell's leadership, curse him for his Land act. The Tories are using every known appliance to increase popular discontent at home over the supposed failure of the law, and Parliament must take steps in some direction, to either pacify Ireland if possible, or to increase the severity of the procedure against that unfortunate and badly governed people. Gladstone will be worried by Tory jibes and assaults. Naturally kindly and wishing well to the Irish, he may be forced into a very harsh and unfortunate attitude. If he retreats, he is lost. If he advances, he becomes for the time the instrument of measures that no real lover of liberty ought to ever consent to use. If the Tories insist upon stronger measures of repression Gladstone must yield or surrender his place. In other words, he cannot remain stationary. He must retreat from his advanced position and confess failure; or he must go farther still and thus play the part that Tories love and demand. This just now seems to be the aspect.

ment may be renewed. The Premier is between two fires. The Irish, under Parnell's leadership, curse him for his Land act. The Tories are using every known appliance to increase popular discontent at home over the supposed failure of the law, and Parliament must take steps in some direction, to either pacify Ireland if possible, or to increase the severity of the procedure against that unfortunate and badly governed people. Gladstone will be worried by Tory jibes and assaults. Naturally kindly and wishing well to the Irish, he may be forced into a very harsh and unfortunate attitude. If he retreats, he is lost. If he advances, he becomes for the time the instrument of measures that no real lover of liberty ought to ever consent to use. If the Tories insist upon stronger measures of repression Gladstone must yield or surrender his place. In other words, he cannot remain stationary. He must retreat from his advanced position and confess failure; or he must go farther still and thus play the part that Tories love and demand. This just now seems to be the aspect.

We find in the Boston Transcript a discussion of the matter which takes a view so gloomy (and still not improbable), that we hope will never be realized. It says:

"There are mutterings as to what will happen when Parliament reconvenes. Gladstone is to be hurried more than ever, because of the state of Irish affairs, by those who would have all dissent against English measures crushed out by an iron heel. Suppose for a moment that these efforts should prove successful through the aid of the Irish contingent of Parliament, who would take the places of the Liberal ministers? By a logical necessity, men who would go for eradicating from Ireland, by fire and sword, every symptom of enmity to British rule. No other alternative remains. It is not to be denied that the Irish policy is to strengthen the hands of the opposition to the Liberal ministry, and so hasten the inevitable conflict between the two races. Earl Derby said some months ago that no doubt could exist as to the universality of the sentiment for a separate government, entirely free, entertained by Irishmen. This is the underlying cause of the confusion and anarchy prevailing in parts of Ireland, which some maliciously assert to be its normal condition, the object being to tire out England and compel it by sheer disgust to give up its control over the Irish soil. This it will never do, and when the conflict comes for English supremacy it will probably prove as terrible and merciless as Raleigh's raids or Cromwell's successes."

If Ireland is dragooned as it was under Elizabeth and Cromwell it will be attributable to many causes: first and most important, to misrule and oppression through centuries; second, to ill-advised leaders; third, to the undying hostility of the Tory party; fourth, to the unwisdom of Irish members in Parliament combining with the Tories against the Liberal party in the matter of a Land act. We must hope most sincerely that the horrible woes indicated in a struggle between the Government and five or six million people will be averted, and that much good may yet come to the people from the Land act, to which so many prominent Irishmen at home have given their support.

THE DRAMA.

In 1881 there were forty new plays produced in New York. Of these but two or three are thought to have merit. Mrs. Burnett's "Esmeralda" is a success. Tourge's drama ("A Fool's Errand") died before it was born. Mr. Gilbert's new opera, "Patience," was "the artistic hit of the year," says the Critic. Five melodramas were produced and they were damned incontinently as bad. Two, however, had some success at first. Miss Genevieve Ward played very impressively in "Forget-Me-Not." The Critic says her acting was fine. Of foreign actors it says Mile. Rhea "is a well trained actress of the Bernhardt school." Of the Bernhardt it says:

"But she is, in fact, a good stock actress; her voice, her dreamy ways have a fascination for elderly playgoers; she has moments of great energy; her tempestuous bursts are made more noticeable by her physical lightness; and our estimate of her histrionic ability would be understood by those who care for the French stage if we say that she seems to stand on a level with Croizette and Bartet, somewhat above the plane of Blanche Pierson, and very much below that of Farguelli."

It says Rossi "is a master."

Miss Mary Anderson is not a stranger to Wilmingtonians. Her father having been a Confederate officer and her parents being Kentuckians, the Southern critics and theatre-goers have been very kind to her from the beginning of her very remarkable career. She has made a great deal of money and received a great deal of applause. Five years ago, when she first appeared in Wilmington, the STAR claimed dramatic genius for her. She has improved very much since that time. She is beginning to experience what it is to have enemies. Last year the Washington Post was savage in its attacks upon her acting. Recently it praised her and acknowledged that she was playing with much more of true art and finish. Just now she is being criticised very favorably and very unfavorably in New York. The two best papers in that city take the most opposite views possible of her performance of Juliet. The antagonism is so pronounced and so serious that we will copy a few sentences from each paper. The Sun says very sharply:

"The artlessness, simplicity, awkward sincerity, and genuine goodness of her earlier acting, its pardonable rudeness and crudity, have all disappeared, and in their place we have the complete staidness, mechanical experience, and artistic sophistication. Her Juliet is a performance utterly without feeling, measured, attitudinized and draped, set apart into periods and postures, full of inspirations and languors like the signs of a bellows, and without a trace of natural sentiment or genuine feeling. It chilled the audience; there was not a trace of fire to arouse their sympathy, and they watched the performance with a half-hearted interest or entire indifference."

"How Miss Anderson's perversion of her advantages has come about it is difficult to tell."

This would be very damaging if true. But is this criticism just? Let us turn to the Times and read as follows:

"Miss Anderson embodies this character with a natural charm, grace, and unaffectedness which commands sympathy; also with a power and a tragic seriousness that are not common. Her treatment, however, is curiously marked by abundant enthusiasm, and notable for its lack of passionateness; it is more dramatic and imposing than truthful. This, nevertheless, is the best Juliet that our stage can now present."

Was there ever any thing more unlike? What is criticism worth when two able men take such opposing views? Fortunately for the handsome Mary she has the ear of the country and most people will agree with the Times. It is not to be denied, we suppose, that however interesting and effective Miss Anderson is, she is not fulfilling all that was claimed for her by her admirers in the beginning. She began to star too soon. She lacks those finer and more artistic touches that mark the great actresses. The Times, in a subsequent notice, says of her Gaieteur:

"Miss Anderson is more graceful, more careful in the use of her rich and large-compressed voice, and more in earnest than she was two years ago; and, though the desire to criticize her seems to weigh like an indigestion upon many estimable persons, we do not find that she has lost the attractiveness of her inexperienced youth. She is by no means a great actress, though her gifts and instincts are uncommon; but she is clearly designed for a certain work, and it does not seem to us doubtful that she will fulfil it. It is not in what she is not, but wholly in what she is, that her force lies."

She is unquestionably one of the most popular actresses now in America. She fills the theatre in New York and everywhere she goes she plays to crowded houses.

Mr. Abram S. Hewitt, an able man, is engaged in getting iron ore extensively, and is also interested in manufacturing steel rails. He says he favors the abolition of duty on the ore. He says:

"The duty acts as an obstacle to the best interests of the industry, yet if the proposal is made to abolish it it is met with active opposition from the mining furnaces of Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia, because of the popular ignorance on the subject."

As to the duty on rails, he says he intended to introduce a bill in the House to reduce the duty. He thinks it should not be more than $14 per ton. He says this, and mark it:

"This reduction would not interfere in the slightest degree with the growth of this industry. One mill for the manufacture of steel rails in this country, with a capital of $2,000,000, made a profit in one year of $5,000,000."

That will do. Who would not put $200 in a business that in one year pays $500, or $2,000,000 if it pays $5,000,000? That beats the "tiger" or any other popular game "all hollow."

The resolution of Gen. Vance in the House prohibiting the sub-letting of contracts for carrying the mails is needed and proper. The revelations in the Star Route frauds show that when sub-letting is allowed it is a source often of much corruption and rascality. Mr. Belzhoover, of Pennsylvania, has introduced a bill that should be very carefully considered. It is to provide for a direct vote for President and the representation of the minority vote in each State. A system that elects minority candidates, as in the case of Lincoln, and almost in the case of Garfield, needs overhauling. In fact, the reasons justifying the present system seem to have been superseded by the changes that have taken place in the country. Mr. Belzhoover proposes that the electoral vote of each State shall be divided in proportion to the popular vote. A receives 200,000 and B, 150,000 votes in a State. The electoral vote of 12 shall be divided on this basis. Such is the proposition.

What is fame? Think of the American Register, published in Washington, referring to Mr. Samuel F. Phillips as "Hon. M. Phillips." By the way, the attention of that worthy is called by the Register to the "manly and ringing letter from Attorney General Brewster" on the Star Route rascalities. The "Hon.

M." has heard about as much of the Star Route as his stomach will well bear, even supposing that he has "recovered" from those "convulsions of official dignity" referred to by the Register.

The immigrants from abroad in 1881 will aggregate at all the ports more than 500,000. At New York alone 455,000. Their general condition is said to be better than those of former years. Over one-third were from Germany and of these most were frugal and industrious laborers.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Look back twenty years, and trace the course of this corrupting tide of profligacy and extravagance in the administration of the Government alone. In 1860, under Mr. Buchanan's administration, the total net ordinary expenditure, exclusive of interest of the Federal Government was $60,056,054 71. In 1870 it reached the sum of $164,421,507 15; and in 1880 the sum of $171,885,382 67, exclusive of interest and all war debt. And now the estimate of this net annual cost of the Federal Government to the people has actually reached $194,948,260 61 for the year 1882, being about or near five millions less than two hundred millions of dollars. Thus, exclusive of the interest and war debt has the net annual cost of the Federal Government to the people increased under the administration of the Republican party about $135,000,000 a year, or over fifteen millions more than double what it was under the last Democratic administration.—American Register, Dem.

—If that time should ever come, if President Arthur should set himself against the will of the majority, strive to reverse the policy of his predecessor and refuse to be more than the leader and instrument of a defeated faction, the country would survive, for it is great, and the Republican party would survive, for it is true to its principles, but President Arthur as a political leader would not. Public feeling would in that event be clearly and strongly expressed. The President would then learn, first, the full strength of the public hostility to personalism and bossism—to the attempt to set up a government of favored individuals, by favored individuals, for favored individuals, in place of that government of the people, by the people and for the people, in which the Republican party believes.—N. Y. Tribune, Rep.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

A certain man went from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, who beat him, and stripped him, and left him for dead. Rheumatism Neuralgia, Sprains, Pain in the Back and Side. There is nothing more painful than these diseases; but the pain can be removed and the disease cured by the use of Perry Davis' Pain Killer. This is not a cheap Benzine or Petroleum product that must be kept away from fire or heat to avoid danger of explosion, nor is it an untried experiment that may do more harm than good. Pain Killer has been in constant use for forty years, and the universal testimony from all parts of the world is, it never fails. It not only effects a permanent cure, but it relieves pain almost instantaneously. Being a purely vegetable remedy, it is safe in the hands of the most inexperienced. The record of cures by the use of Perry Davis' Pain Killer would fill volumes. The following extracts from letters received show what those who have tried it think: Edgar Cady, Overton, Minn., says: "About a year since my wife became subject to severe suffering from Rheumatism, and I have used your Pain Killer, which speedily relieved her, and she has never had any return." Charles Powell writes from the Fallers' Home, London: "I had been afflicted three years with rheumatic and sciatic pains, and the agony was such that I was unable to get up. I was advised to use your Pain Killer, and I did so, and in a few days I was able to get up, and I have never had any return." G. H. Waltham, Saco, Me., writes: "I used your Pain Killer for rheumatism, and it relieved me, and I have never had any return." Barton Seaman says: "I have used your Pain Killer for thirty years, and it has never failed me, and I have found it a never-failing remedy for all kinds of rheumatic pains." Mr. Burdett writes: "I have used your Pain Killer for rheumatism, and it relieved me, and I have never had any return." Mr. Gilchrist, Saco, Me., writes: "I have used your Pain Killer for rheumatism, and it relieved me, and I have never had any return." All druggists keep PAIN KILLER. Its price is so low that it is within the reach of all, and it will save many times its cost in doctors' bills. 25c, 50c, and $1.00 a bottle. PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors, Providence, R.
