OUTLINES.

Elaborate preparations are being made at New Orleans for the celebration of the La Salle anniversary. —A high wind at New Orleans Friday night caused $50,000 damage to boats and wharves. --- Many plantations above and below Shreveport, Louisiana, are under water and the levees are giving way ; an overflow of the whole lower country on the Mississippi seems inevitable. --- The total visible supply of cotton in the world is stated at 3,120,082 bales, against 2,830,814 bales last year. -The Kellogg hotel, at Nashville, Tennessee, burned Friday night; thirty-five people in the building abarely escaped: many leaping from windows. Thirtygas in the Midlothian coal mine, near Petersburg, Virginia. -- The House of Representatives adopted an amendment to the Postoffice appropriation bill providing $100,000 for the establishment of the freedelivery system at places where it is not now established. - Guiteau sentenced to be hanged June 30th. -The private stockholders of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, at their meeting at Fayetteville, ratified the sale to Dr. Canedo's Company; possession will be taken early in April. -- A severe snow storm prevailed vesterday in Virginia, and northward as far as New York State; at Washington City at 10 P. M. snow was still falling and the ground was covered to the depth of twelve or fourteen inches. --New York markets: Money 5626 per cotton dull at 13@121c; southern flour quiet at $5 65@8 00; wheat closed dull and declining, ungraded red $1 22@

Adelina Patti will give New York her best operas when she returns. She says nothing else will satisfy Americans.

Twelve hundred idiots at New Haven, Conn., paid to hear Oscar Wilde whip his syllabub. Two hundred were trying to learn something at Yale College.

We are glad the New York Herald is fighting the admission of Dakota. It puts the case thus:

"With the 'rotten borough' of Nevada be-fore his eyes as a monument of deceit, the New York Schator or Representative who yotes to invest the 135,000 inhabitants of Dakota with equality with the 5,082,000 inhabitants of New York in the Federal Senate basely defrauds and betrays his own

Our Washington namesake takes the view we do of the threatened scandal over the body of Guitean. It says "the opening exhibition would seem to be an excellent opportunity for the operation of a little mob law, if there ever can be an excuse for such an exercise of the popular will." John W. Guiteau is very indignant at the proposition and is out in a Tammany won the day at Albany. It was John Kelly who broke the dead-lock. The arrangement, bargain or compromise, is that Tammany is to have a representation on the Railroad and Cities Committees, as well as the Clerk of the Honse, and with this understanding they have cast their votes for Patterson, the caucus nominee for Speaker, and thus elected him.

The Oxford Free Lance corrects an historical error of Senator Ransom's relative to Gen. Burnside. We quote: "According to Senator Ransom, Gen. Burnside commanded the Federal forces at the capture of Hatterss, the first conquest of the Federals along the Southern coast. This is a mistake. Hatters surrendered to Commodore Stringham, of the United States Navy. Gen. Benj. F. Butler was in command of the land forces of the expedi-

The Senator made a literary blunder, also. He spoke of the Iliad being forty centuries old. Rather, this was the inference from what he said of Achilles. The best authorities place Homer (if such a poet ever lived) about 776 Before Christ. This is John Addington Tymonds's statement, and he is sufficient authority. So it is only twenty-six centuries that the story of the serrow of Achilles has been delighting the world, and not forty.

inspiration in his Hamlet. The ghost scene, the scene with his mother, and the scene with Ophelia revealed a certain power that was surprising. His recitation of some of the famous passages was fehcitous, but he failed lamentably in his elecution in many places, whilst his voice was often too guttural and his enunciation of whole lines too indistinct and rapid to be earlier. Whilst we cannot say his personation of the greatest creation of the highest damatic gentles was successful as a whole, we can say truthfully that it indicated originalty of conception, and was, in fact, spirited and effective, with a tendency occasionally to rant. The Ophelin of Miss Chauncey is deserving of all praise. It was very charming, sweet and realistic, and the snatches of song in the scene when the poor girl is mad were delightfully given, and with a plaintive melody quite pathetic and ravishing. We do not believe there is as good an Ophelia now on the American stage. The best male actor, in our judgment, was the gentleman who personated Polonius. Horatio was well played. Laertes was fairly done. The King was respectable. Kings on our stage have been mere sticks. The King of Friday night had dignity, and altogether acted his part successfully. The Ghost was not as good as some other Ghosts, but he spoke his lines with deliberate cadence and accent, and was sufficiently palpable to interest. We are free to say we enoved the entertainment throughout. Who can hear the wonderful words of the greatest of all productions and not be interested?

A Georgia paper refers to him as 'Colonel Clingman, the North Carolina Mahone." . The following was telegraphed from Washington on the 30th ult. It speaks for itself and for the "Colonel":

"Gen. Thomas L. Clingman, of North Carolina, who served with Clay and Web-ster and Douglas, beginning as far back as 1843, who represented the Old North State in the United States Senate for several years next preceding the war, and who has been an ardent Democrat for thirty years past, is in Washington, and unreservedly and most emphatically declares that he is sick, un-easy, and disgusted with the Democratic party of his State as it exists under the leadship of Senators Vance and Ransom and Gov. Jarvis. Gen. Clingman in the plainest possible terms avows as his conviction that that party in his State is as corrupt as any political organization that ever existed during the history of the country, and has repeatedly said since his arrival here that he is ready to co-operate in a move to combine into one independent party all those who with him since tely desire the overflarow of the Vances and Ransoms and Jarvises of the State and the party these men lead and control. Clingman exhibits great earnestness with reference to the wish to effect such a combination to crush Bourbon Democracy in North Carolina.

Chicken Thieves Operating Again. J. S. W. Eagles, colored, residing on MacRae, between Hanover and Brunswick streets, says chicken thieves made a raid upon his premises yesterday morning, about 8 o'clock. It seems that a neighbor heard a noise in the yard, but upon opening the window and looking in the direction whence it proceeded, could see nothing amiss. Remaining silently on the watch for a few. minutes the thief, who had been frightened off by his raising a colorwood talaking the neighbor had retired, returned and recommenced operations on Engles' chicken coop, when the watcher hailed the thief and he ran off Upon examination it was discoVILMINGTON, N. The Storm Yesterday Same of Its Effocts-Velocity of Wind, &c.

A severe gale prevailed here yesterday, accompanied much of the time by rain, though we learn at the Signal Office that up to 3 P. M. the rainfall had only aggre gated 80-100 of an inch. The barometer fell rapidly from 11 P. M. on Friday night until yesterday morning at 7 o'clock, when it was down to 29.64; and afterwards continued its rapid descent until 4.58 P. M., at which time the storm centre passed this place, when it recorded 29.35. The maximum velocity of the wind was 44 miles per hour, but it came in such fitful gusts that it frequently reached 60 miles per hour for a few minutes at a time. The storm came all the way from Galveston and the Gulf, and points all along the coast south of Wilmington have felt its fury. It will be followed, the Signal Officer informs us, by clear and cool weather. In fact, at this writing there has been a decided change in the atmosphere. There was no communication north or south by signal wire, owing to the cable being dragged away by a vessel which broke loose from her though he harbor during the gale.

About 10 o'clock the steamer Waccamane, the barge Modoc and the schooner Siam, beonging to Messrs. Geo. Harriss & Co., broke loose from their moorings at their wharf on the west side of the river, carrying a portion of the wharf with them. Fortunately, however, owing to their anchors being out, no damage was done or experienced by them, their speed being gradual until they reached the wharf foot of Princess street, where they were promptly secured. There was only one man on board and in charge of the three vessels at the time, and he could do nothing. The schooner Thomas R. Pillsbury also broke loose from her moorings at the Messrs. Chadbourn's wharf and drifted to the neighborhood of the dry dock.

The Horrible Murder in Newbern, Mr. Joseph M. Agostini, whose murder

in Newbern on Thursday night last was mentioned in our telegraphic columns vesterday, was a brother of Mr. F. M. Agestini, Sr., of this city. We find full particulars of the dastardly deed in the Newbern Commercial News, which we condense as

Mr. Magilton, clerk, Mr. Galloway, telegraph operator, Mr. Joseph M. Agos-tini, night watchman, and Henry Bryan, a colored employe of the Midland, were in the ticket office of the road. Mr. Agostini was sitting by the stove warming. Mr. Magilton was engaged in writing at the desk, and requested the negro to cease talking, as he had important work to do. Mr. Agostini, rising from his seat and touching the colored man but the lapped of the coat, remarked pleasantly, 'Come, Henry, let's go; we are disturbing these gentlemen.' Bryan was talking somewhat oudly and became angered at being told to leave the office, and as quick as a flash struck Mr. Agostini a blow—it was thought by the bystanders on the face—the report sounding like a slap, and immediately Mr. Agostini sank in a chair. The parties present were surprisee at the assault, and rushing to the aid of the old gentleman, they discovered that he was stabbed in the cape. He stood mute and sullen, with his cotton hook in his hand, while Mr. Agostini was being removed to a table and his wound bathed. Moses Mason, constable, appeared promptly on the scene, and took Bryan in charge and to the jail. The officer demanded his knife, but Bryan said he had none; that it broke off when he cut

. nor business the Thirdure . The performance last night of this play though given to the usual Saturday night sudience as to numbers, was presented in a style fully in keeping with the previously gained reputation of Mr. Frank Mayo and his company. Nothing was slurred, nothing left out, and no pains spared to present play in every way acceptably. Mr. Mayo may not yet be a great Shakesperean actor, but he possesses enough of great ness to be never ordinary or poor; and with so full and excellent a support he is enabled to present legitimate dramas of great requirements in far better, and much more satisfactory style than they are generally done by travelling companies, whoever may be "the star."

The matinee was largely attended in spite of the stormy weather, and Misa Claucey won / increased favor by her life-like and admirable impersonation of Parthenia. The part of Ingomar was sustained by Mr. Geo. C. Boniface, a great favorite here, on as well as off the stage, and to say aught of praise of him as an actor would be as superflous as it is unnecessary. He played Ingonar evenly, intelligently, and excel-lently, as he does every character he im-

HERRING'S SAFES

WITHSTAND THE ORDEAL

"I bought a HERRING'S SAFE eleven years ago, and during the past week it was subjected to many hours of intense heat in the destruction of my four-story factory. When unearthed from the ruins, seventy-eight hours from the inception of the fire, one side was red hot. All my books and papers are preserved. The safe fell face downwards in the midst of twenty odd tierces of lard.

'A new safe of another make, less exposed in the same building, lost its entire contents, they being hurned to cinders. "FRANK E. BLOCK. "Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 27, 1882."

ANOTHER.

"We had two of your CHAMPION SAFE in our office on the Zist fast, when we had the most disastrous fire since the war. These Safes were subjected to very great heat, and owing to the scarcity of water were hot about sixty hours before we could get them out of the ruins. We found the contents in good order.
