COTTON MILLING IN THE SOUTH AS SEEN BY A NORTHERNER.

The writer in the Atlantic Month ly on the South devotes a good deal of space to the question of cotton manufacturing. He is very full and intelligent in his discussion, and seems to have made a thorough examination of the question in the light of actual personal inspection of factories at work. We need not to follow him at length, as the STAR has discussed the question in its many bearings. We will give the sum of his reflections. He says the owners of Southern mills are well satisfied with results thus far. They are making money rapidly. He saw the books and balance sheets of many of the principal mills. In some instances Northern capitalists have of fered more money than is needed. He says the laborers are white, and as a class, whilst less intelligent than New England operatives, are happier, more contented. The following is important enough to be copied in full:

"It is manifest that there is a very comfortable and satisfactory feeling between employers and employed. Everywhere the mill owners, agents, and overseers say that the Southern operatives are the best laborers in the world, the most loyal to the interests of their employers, the most faithful, pleasant tempered, and easily man-On the other hand, I found it impossible to obtain from the laborers with whom I talked any expression of dissatisfaction with their employers. I could not find anywhere any indications of restlessness or discontent among the mill people. I believe there has been little or no socialist agitation, no labor disturbances, among the Southern factory operatives.

"The wages paid and the hours of labor in Southern cotton mills (they say 'factories' there, mostly) are about the same as in New England; but in their home life and all its most important conditions. Southern operatives are more fortunate than the same class of laborers in the Northern States. They have better and much larger houses. There is as yet very little, if any, unwholesome or injurious crowding in the tenements occupied by the operatives of Southern mills. Sanitary arrangements appear to be recognized by mill owners in the South as something that must be carefully

He finds the relations existing between employer and the employed altogether different from what prevails in New England. It is more patriarchal. The employers take a special interest in the welfare and prosperity of their people. There is no feeling of antagonism. The operatives are always paid in money. Rents are much lower than in New England. The families at several of the larger mills kept a cow and had a garden. The laborers go to church on Sunday. The women and girls are always of good character. No immodest women are allowed to remain. Persons of vicious habits can not find employment. The operatives do not move about from place to place as they do in New England. "They are more placid, contented and industrious and less restless than people of the same class in New England; they lar in their habits and character." This is important and instructive Nearly all of the hands are Southern natives. They read less, he says, have fewer ideas, and fare, in consequence, happier, less liable to discontent, and far more useful and agreeable to their employers." This is a very significant admission. Too much reading and too many ideas, it seems, do not promote happiness and contentment and usefulness among

New England operatives. He says the owners and managers of the leading mills impressed him very favorably as "gentlemen of high character." They gave very close attention to their business and trusted very little to subordinates. He says the operatives in the South. ern factories "are among the happiest and most truly prosperous laborers that I have seen anywhere." The principal mills have good day schools and the children attend Sunday schools. Again, in another place, he says: "In purity of life, content, and happiness, they surpass any New England factory population with which I am acquainted." The writer of this is a New England man and a Union soldier, who spent two or three years in the South during "the late unpleasantness."

He has some kind words for the 'drummer." He was ubiquitous, found everywhere, always clever and polite, and was also favored with the best the hotels had. He thinks the drumming system will not continue long "in its present proportions." He thinks it "clumsy and costly."

This intelligent and kindly observer does not fail to note the widely adopted system of selling on a credit. The result he gives in this brief sentence: "There is a larger proportion of the population who are hopelessly in debt than in any other part of our country." He thinks if the cash system were adopted from Norfolk to San Antonio that "it would mark the coming of a better day for Southern business men and for their customers." The excessive proportion of failures in the South compared with the remainder of the Union as reported weekly shows how disastrons is overtrade and especially when conducted on the credit system. That bad system, and the still worse one of mortgaging farms and crops to be grown hereafter, will keep any people down and confine them to the brink of impending bankruptcy.

A leading Wilson lawyer, in a very well considered communication in the Advance, makes some points that are weighty. He is discussing the proposition to get Congress to educate the Southern children. He shows that the Republicans do not intend that the States shall have control of the educational fund, as the STAR has insisted upon time and again, but that the "Nation" shall have control. Mr. Murray says:

"Perhaps you are right that much of the apprehended evil would be obviated by giving the fund into the control of the States, but that is just what the centralizing projectors of national education do not propose. Says Judge Tourgee, in the article to which reference has been made so freely, 'Instead of giving the fund in gross into the hands of the States and making them its almoner, the nation itself takes care that its purpose is fulfilled. It secures its bounty to the people, and not to the States.' It is ridiculous to suppose that the Republican party which originated this scheme for its own ends will allow the details to be so worked out as to defeat the main and ul-

The STAR will not favor any scheme that will increase the power of the Federal Government to the detriment and danger of the States. Ignorance is a burden and fraught with dangers to the stability of our institutions, but a centralized despotism is far more dangerous. Mr. Murray asks this question relative to the young "man and brother:"

"Have you not observed that in proportion as the negro gets 'books into his head' he becomes disinclined to manual labor, grows addicted to idleness and all its baneful concomitants?"

Some of the negro counties pay very heavy taxes. We would like to publish the taxes paid by every county that will be controlled by the negro vote if the present law concerning County Government is changed. We will endeavor to publish the sums before the campaign ends. New Hanover pays $68,000, Wayne $29,000, Craven $42,000, Cumberland $32,000, Wake $70,000. The Raleigh News-Observer makes this very important point which we hope all eastern tax-payers will consider well and act accordingly. Says our contemporary:

While the State taxes last year amounted to $455,000, the school and county tax was $1,235,000, nearly three times as much as the amount raised by the State. It then is much more interesting to the people of the eastern counties to have a good, economical, honest administration of their local matters than of their State concerns. Besides the State moneys cannot be so easily stolen or wasted. The Legislature has to make the appropriations, and that is done in public, and the Treasury is never very full. But experience has proved that counties can be robbed with but little differents. are more domestic, settled and regu- ties can be robbed with but little difficulty unless honest officials have the handling of the county funds.' Amid the gush and blarney and humbug of the day do not forget the past or lose sight of your material interests. Keep your eyes wide open and do not be bamboozled. The press of the country do not seem to have appreciated the dangerous character of the militia bill before the Congress that met its death in the House. Until we read a portion of the debate, we confess we had not considered the matter, and failed to warn our readers against it. It was loaded with danger. If it had passed 7,000,000 men would have been enrolled, and their exclusive control given to the President-a man not to be trusted with any such stupendous power, especially with Grant standing at his ear. The proposition ought to have aroused the indignation of the whole country. Under the bill the President could call them out at will without the authority of the Congress. If clothed with such supreme and terrible power Arthur would be a "biger man than old Grant," or any European poten

The Republicans in Pennsylvania are united enough to triumph, it may be, but it is said Blaine is pulling the Independent strings. That is the report in New York city. The harmony is not so complete as to force all Republicans to swallow Cameron and Arthur. Arthur is playing for the nomination in 1884, and Cameron is helping him. That is the bond of their union. It is this that has given Cameron so much power over recent appointments.

THE PERIODICALS.

The Atlantic Monthly for June contains several contributions of ment. Dr. Holmes sends a fine poem on Longfellow, and Dr. Frothingham contributes a paper on the dead poet. No. 4 of "Studies in the South" is full of suggestive and instructive points. There is a poem by Longfellow entitled 'Decoration Day." Edward Atkinson writes on "The Rapid Progress of Communism." The next war in the North will be socialistic. Mark the prediction. John Fiske writes on Charles Darwin. Henry James, Jr., discusses a brother novelist, Alphonse Daudet. The excellent English novelist, Thomas Hardy, sends five other chapters of his exquisitely written novel-"Two on a Tower." There are other papers of more or less interest. Price #4 a year. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The North American Review for June contains seven papers as follows: The Currency of the Future, by Senator Allison; A Memorandum at a Venture, by Walt Whitman; Andover and Creed-Subscription, by Rev. Dr. Bacon; Mongolian Immigration, by George F. Seward; Old School Medicine and Homeopathy, by Prof. Dowling; Swedenborg, by O. B. Frothingham; Has Land a Value? by Isaac L. Rice, and An Unconstitutional Militia, by Charles E. Lydecker. This Review, by its discussion of current political topics, does no little in shaping public sentiment. Tourgee publishes his national education scheme in this Review, and behold its influence (possibly for evil) among Southern Democrats. In the March number Prof. Palmer went for Homeopathy without gloves. Prof. Dowling gives him something to think about in the reply in this number. It seems to be a sort of throwing stones by those living in glass houses. Terms $5 a year, published monthly. Address 30 Lafayette Place, New

DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZA-TION.

The Democratic Central Executive Committee have issued another "Plan of Organization." It is dated "Raleigh, May 20th, 1882." There are some changes. We give them. Under

TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION the following changes are made: 6. Each township shall be entitled to cast in the county convention one vote for every tweny-five Democratic votes, and one vote for fractions "of fifteen" Democratic votes cast by that township at the last preceding gubernatorial election: Provided, That every township shall be entitled to cast at least one vote, and each township may send as many delegates as it may see fit.

The following paragraph contains the change made in

COUNTY AND DISTRICT CONVENTIONS. 1. The several county conventions shall be entitled to elect to their Senatorial, Judicial and Congressional conventions one delegate and one alternate for every fifty Democratic votes, and one delegate for fractions over twenty-five Democratic votes cast at the last preceding gubernatorial election in their respective counties, and none but delegates or alternates so elected shall be entitled to seats in said conventions: Provided, that every county shall have at least one vote in each of said conventions.

Here is the most important change as to the number of delegates:

STATE CONVENTIONS. 1. The State convention shall be composed of delegates appointed by the several county conventions. Each county shall be entitled to elect one delegate and one alternate for every one hundred and fifty Democratic votes, and one delegate for fractions over seventy-five Democratic votes cast therein at the last preceding gubernatorial election; and none but delegates or alternates so elected LATEST STYLES in Ladies, and Gents, Stashall be entitled to seats in said convention; provided that every county shall have at least one vote in said convention.

ENERAL RULES. 1. Such delegates (or alternates of absent delegates) as may be present at any Democratic convention shall be allowed to cast the whole vote to which their township or county may

2. In all conventions provided for by this system, after a vote is cast, there shall be no change in such vote until the final result of the ballot shall be announced by the chairman of said convention.

3. All Democratic Executive Committees shall have the power to fill any vacancy occurring in their respective bodies.

3. That the chairman of the different county conventions shall certify the list of delegates and alternates to the different district and State conventions. And a certified list of said delegates and alternates to the State conventions shall be sent to the secretary of the State Central Committee.

CURRENT COMMENT.

-The only hope the South has now for its restoration to the coequal place in the Union of States it once enjoyed is in the defeat of the Republican party-that sectional organization, which, through the means given it by the immense revenues of the country, has been enabled to retain power during the past twentytwo years and keep the people of the South, and nearly one-half the population of the North, under the ban of political proscription. It is useless to cry peace to us when there is no peace, and to ask us to still wait for instice at the hands of this party. We can never have peace or obtain justice while that party is in power. -Richmond State, Dem.

-David A. Wells took the first step from protection to free trade when he personally saw the effect upon the industries of different countries of Europe of the two policies. Consul Shaw, of Manchester, and Charles O. Shephard, late Consul to Bradford, have also been converted to an advocacy of an extensive modification of our tariff by what they have learned in their positions abroad. They see that England is by far the best customer that we have, while we are by no means the only large customer of England. England buys fully twothirds of what we self abroad yet she buys from other nations fully three times as much as she takes from the United States, while she sells to other countries fully eight times as much as she does to the United States. It will thus be seen that the British market is much more important to us than the United States market to Great Britain, and these Consuls believe that if the policy of Great Britain should be changed so as to place restrictions upon importations from the United States, the effect would be much more serious upon the American producer than upon the British consumer.—Savannah News,

LONDON, May 21.—A dispatch to the Observer from Cairo says that the Ministry are making strenuous efforts to obtain the support of the Notables in their policy of resistance. The Admirals of the English and French squadrens have no orders whatever except to protect Europeans, which they will be utterly unable to do in the event of resistance, as it would be easy to destroy the shipping from land and ruin the city before the allied fleet could silence a single fort. It is represented here that the English and French governments are mistaken if they think Arabi Bey will be frightened into yielding at Cairo by the presence of the ironclads at Alexandria. [By Telegraph to the Morning Star.] WASHINGTON, May 22.- The announcement that the decision of the Court in banc. upon the exceptions in the Guiteau case, would be read this morning, attracted an unusual gathering at the Circuit Court room. At 10.15 the Judges filed into Court and took their places upon the bench. Soon after the formal opening of the Court Justice James said: "I am instructed by the Court to announce its decision in the case of the United States vs. Charles J. At its conclusion Judge James said: "Although the Court was unanimous in the views set forth, there were some questions which it was desirable to discuss more fully than could well be done in the opinion he had just read, and Justice Hagner had consented to discuss those questions in a separate opinion. Big Apparent Defalcation in Ex-Treasurer (now Governor) Churchill's Account-A Satisfactory Explanation Expected.

[By Telegraph to the Morning Star.]

LITTLE ROCK, May 20.—The long deferred report of the Senate Investigating Committee on State Treasurer (now Governor) Churchill's account, and that of present State Auditor Crawford, both running through three terms of two years each, was filed with the Secretary of State this evening. The Committee have been at work since March, 1881. Their finding is that ex-Treasurer Churchill's books do not balance by $139,400, from which there is a credit for $24,800 for scrip turned over to Treasurer Woodruff, but not credited on Churchill's books. The total nearly all belongs to this account. The scrip, Churchill and the clerk in his office assert was burned according to law, though the books failed to show the proper credit, Gov. Churchill and his bondsmen express confidence that when the matter goes into court this will be shown. He personally paid but little attention to the office, which was unsystematically managed, and the developments have not shaken public confidence in his integrity.
