The Morning Star.

BY WILLIAM H. BERNARD. WILMINGTON, N. C. WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 21, 1882. EVENING EDITION.

CONCERNING MONUMENTS.

A gentleman sends us word that in February, 1857, the corner-stone of a monument was laid in Pender county (then a part of New Hanover), in memory of the very important victory gained by North Carolina patriots over the enemy in the war of the Revolution. The monument was erected on the battle ground by the people of New Hanover. In 1876 the centennial of the battle was celebrated, the address being delivered by Capt. Samuel A. Ashe. By the way, the American historians generally, do not appear to have heard of this really most important battle, which was fought before the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia.

The people of North Carolina know but little of their own State's history, and they cannot expect that other peoples shall know much. But then it progresses, we are glad to know. Ten people, in 1882, know a good deal of our most stirring and romantic history where one knew anything about it a decade since.

But we did not, in our editorial reference to monuments, have in mind monuments of this kind. We referred to statues and monuments erected to our illustrious men. We believe that the monument erected last year at Kinston to the memory of Gov. Caswell is the first one of the kind in the State, with one exception. There are other monuments erected to statesmen and warriors, but they were not public memorials, but were erected by the families of the eminent dead. In Warren county there is a monument to Gen. Jethro Sumner. We have seen it often. It is on the plantation of the late Alexander S. Jones, on the main road from Warrenton to Jones Springs, and not more than a mile from old Bute court house, that was on the same road and nearer to Warrenton. A few years ago many of the bricks of the old building were still visible.

At Tarboro there is a monument in memory of Col. Louis D. Wilson, erected, we believe, by the people of that county. We had forgotten this when we penned our paragraph the other day. But Edgecombe has never erected a monument in memory of the most illustrious man ever born in that county, and the greatest soldier North Carolina ever produced, Gen. William D. Pender. When we stood at his grave some twelve years ago the only monument were a few cannon balls. There was not then even a tablet to mark his place of repose. This is not creditable to so appreciative, refined and progressive a people as we know the people of Edgecombe to be. We have long said that a statue of the able soldier ought to be erected to his memory by the State and placed in Capitol Square facing the East, to tell the unborn generations of our State of the pure, devoted, conscientious, brave and able soldier that God gave to his countrymen in the days of tribulation and death.

"He was a soldier, fit to stand by Caesar And give direction —" In Richmond, Va., there is a beautiful monument erected to Washington and the great men of the Revolutionary period. Washington is above the others, who are arranged around the monument upon their several pedestals. We would be glad to see erected at Raleigh a State mausoleum—a building with twenty or twenty-five niches, each to contain a statue of some great North Carolinian. The building should be a work of genius, a monument in itself. At first let statues be erected to Revolutionary men. Davie, Caswell, Harnett, Howe and one or two others ought to be honored in this way. During the first ten years let $50,000 be devoted to statues after the building is complete. Let the statesmen of a later day then be honored from time to time. Gaston, Badger, Chief Justice Henderson, and other foremost men should be preserved in bronze or marble. Then the heroes of the late war would share the honors, and Pender and Pettigrew should be presented to the youth of the State as the highest exemplars of a great war in which North Carolina performed a great part. We express our own views and wishes merely without expecting them to be adopted. We would be surprised to see North Carolina rearing one monument to one of its worthies much less honoring a dozen or twenty. In fifty years the temple of our mighty dead would be filled, and then the generations after could erect other memorials if the breed of noble bloods did not become extinct with time.

"So the last of the De Long party is heard from. The brief record of the finding of the bodies is very touching. Dr. Ambler, of Va., lost his life by what may be considered a singular providence. He did not belong to De Long's boat and accompanied him at his urgent request. If he had remained with his own boat, which got through safely, he would now be among the living no doubt. He and the heroic Lieutenant were found wrapped in snow and bound in the icy arms of death only three feet apart. We hope never to hear again of fitting out any expeditions to take men to vast regions of danger and suffering where they may probably share the fate of Sir John Franklin and his crew and of De Long and his boat's crew, without accomplishing any important results, and without there being any good prospect of accomplishing any. It is a useless, absurd expenditure of time, money and precious human life. Let the foolishness stop.

It is proposed by the House Committee on Appropriations to begin the creation of a navy by voting over $15,000,000 at once. "Secor" Robeson, who certainly stole and wasted over one hundred million dollars while he was Secretary of Navy under Grant, is now the chairman of this committee. A corrupt fellow named Chandler is now Secretary of the Navy. There is a real need for a navy. It is a blistering shame that after all the hundreds of millions expended that the United States have no navy, but it is not a good time to begin the construction of one. If the millions proposed are voted it may be "absorbed" or wasted just as the hundreds of millions was absorbed. The danger lies in the men who will manage the funds. Who can trust Chandler? Who can trust Chandler bossed by "Secor" Robeson? We would be slow to favor an expenditure of $15,000,000, as a start, to be manipulated by two such corrupt and tricky fellows as these.

It is now confidently asserted by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and after careful investigation, that the real cause of the many crimes occurring in that unhappy country are societies organized for just such disturbances, Oppressions in Ireland are producing the same bitter fruit as oppressions in Russia have produced—secret organizations bent on mischief. Nihilism in the one is the legitimate fruit of wrong doing through centuries. The machinery for advancing crime in Ireland is the resultant of long continued misrule and despair. We do not believe there will be quiet or peace until Ireland has home rule. We do not know why it is that England resists so pertinaciously all attempts on the part of Irishmen to obtain that previous boon—local self-government. She has given Scotland and the Dominion home rule, why not give it to Ireland also? We have not met a single Democrat "in good standing" who will tolerate for a moment the cruel Radical project of placing New Hanover and other Eastern counties under the control of the negroes again. Like men of sense they know that such a course will result in a swift and heavy increase of taxes and a return of all the corrupting agencies that were at work prior to 1879. They regard, as the STAR does, such a proposition as pregnant with unnumbered woes. They have drunk deep before of the cup given them by negro dominancy, and they have not forgotten its intense bitterness. That any persons calling themselves Democrats, in view of the damning records that will not out, can for a moment entertain such a proposition is indeed very strange. We shall be ready to hear them advancing anything, however loaded with danger.

The Commission appointed by Arthur to further delay in the matter of tariff reform was confirmed in the Senate. Four or five Democrats favored it. By the way, we have not been able to get the vote on Joe Brown's new method of wasting other people's money and saving his own. We refer to the high-bred (Joe is high-bred, you know) way of sitting back in your easy chair and thinking of nothing, whilst a perfumed youth, got up without reference to cost but in the latest style, writes your letters for you at a salary of $1,200 a year. As an economist the Georgian Joe is not a pronounced success.

THE PERIODICALS. The Critic holds its own manfully as the best exponent of pure and independent criticism in this country. For the man of letters it is a desideratum. Terms $2 a year. J. L. & J. B. Glider, editors, New York. The Atlantic Monthly probably has the last poem that Longfellow wrote before he lay down his pen forever. Thomas Hardy, a novelist of very exceptional powers, and whose writings are exquisitely finished, contributes six additional chapters to his very fresh and delightful serial story—"Two on a Tower." The very fair and instructive papers entitled "Studies in the South" are continued. We shall refer to No. 5 more particularly hereafter. Some of the other articles are "Care for the People under Despotism," by O. B. Frothingham; "Shall Members of the Cabinet sit in Congress?" by Willard Brown. Miss Sarah Orne Jewett's "The Mate of the Daylight," Miss Phelps's story of "Dr. Zay," and Mr. Bishop's novel of New York society, "The House of a Merchant Prince," are continued. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. All this is about the July number.

CURRENT COMMENT. The Government, as shaped and directed by the Republican party since 1864, has created two classes in the United States—capitalists and laborers, noblemen and serfs, landholders and beggars, railway kings and tramps. Each turn of the crank of Republican legislation makes one great lord of banks or mills, or railways or telegraphs or of bonds, and at the same instant and by the same process ten thousand beggars. The Republican party is the party of this plutocracy; the Democratic party is the party of the people.—American Register, Dem.

It is time, therefore, for Southern manhood to reassert itself. Our State governments are safe and cannot be disturbed while we are faithful to ourselves. As for our share in the Federal government, it remains for us to choose our best men, and send them to Washington, backed by such indorsements as the Robesons and Calkines, and their ilk, will be slow to reject. If our allegiance to Democracy shall in time help to bring about a fall of Radicalism, the good that will follow will compensate for the years of suffering we will have undergone. As for the rest, let Southern men be true to themselves; let the Southern press be fearless, and Southern representatives brave and wise. Let us tell the people of the North that when they care to meet us on the broad plane of fellowship, and recognize us as free citizens of this great republic, we will be ready, as we have been for years, to cordially accept the emblems of reconciliation.—Savannah News, Dem.

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES. One of the resolutions that figures conspicuously in those passed by the so-called "Liberal and Prohibition" Convention, on the 7th inst., and by the Republican Convention on the 14th inst., is that opposing the present system of county government, and demanding that all the officers be elected by the people. This is simply a piece of demagoguism on the part of the Republican managers and a ruse to divide the Democratic party in the coming contest. They don't care a snap of the finger whether the present county system continues or not, and they would prefer that it did if they were certain of carrying the next Legislature and thus getting control of the appointing power. Their object in springing it at this time, and placing themselves in the attitude of special champions of the elective franchise is to array the West against the East on that question.—Charlotte Observer.

The harm done by the revolution in Virginia, computed in money value, is beyond reasonable calculation. The injury worked to morals has been incalculable. The unhappiness, bitterness and bad feeling engendered by it have marked this age of Virginia's history as one of the most miserable in the annals of the people. We heard nothing in saying that a restoration of negro domination in North Carolina would inevitably be attended with consequences still more disastrous and unhappy than those which we have witnessed in Virginia. It is these things that we who love our people, and who feel an interest in the progress of our State, must look squarely in the face.—Raleigh News-Observer.

POLITICAL POINTS. The Hancock boom in Pennsylvania seems to have died "a borning"—Cincinnati Enquirer, Dem. $100,000,000 in ten minutes was the gain of the House yesterday—the most expensive time on record.—Philadelphia Press, Rep. The Russian soldier has to be knocked off his feet after he is killed. The Democratic party has to be killed, knocked down, dissected and vaporized, and even then it is a bad man from Bitter Creek in an off year.—Commercial Rep. It is estimated that John Sherman is now the possessor of several millions of dollars, acquired by the ceremonies of his political career in Congress and in the Treasury. His financial ability as exhibited in this result is almost miraculous.—New York Sun, Ind. Dem.

It is discouraging, when the Oregon success is enlivening the Republicans of the country, to hear that ex-Attorney General G. H. Williams will make a canvass for the Senatorship from that State. The circumstance that Mr. Williams ventures to be a candidate shows that a change has come over the state of affairs, and that favorable influences at Washington and elsewhere are to rehabilitate politicians whose strength had decayed and who have long been without the consolations of office.—Boston Advertiser, Rep.

SOUTHERN ITEMS. C. R. Breckinridge, the Democratic candidate for Congressman at Large in Arkansas, is a son of John C. Breckinridge. The Charleston News and Courier concedes the Republicans one member of Congress from South Carolina at the next election. Ice frozen by machinery is now used almost exclusively in Southern cities, as it is cheaper than that brought from the North, except at seaboard places.

Mrs. Virginia C. Hamilton, of Augusta county, Va., on Monday last established a scholarship in the Law department of Washington and Lee University. Dr. Wm. H. Ruffner, late Superintendent of Public Instruction, has accepted a position as lecturer on field geology and commercial mineralogy at Roonoke College.

A man in Augusta county, Va., was tossed over a fence by an infuriated bull, and then rolled down a thirty-foot precipice on the other side of the fence. He took an active part in a dancing party the same night. President Porcher, of the South Carolina Historical Society, claims that Whitney did not invent the cotton gin after all. He has found a letter-patent granted by Gen. Washington to Hogden Holmes, of Georgia, for a similar device which he produced in 1796.
