WILMINGTON, N. C.

EVENING EDITION

SUGGESTED BY THE OBSEQUIES OF GOV. STEPHENS.

Georgia paid fitting honors to the memory of Gov. Stephens. The first men in the State were present at Atlanta to speak of his high merits and Georgians in the solemn memorial services. It was a touching thing doubtless to hear that "old man eloquent," Robert Toombs, broken with the infirmities of age and almost blind, speak of the dead statesman. Gen. any man ever born in Georgia. He | bilities of citizenship. is regarded as an extremist in politics, but no man ever questioned the sincerity of his convictions, his ardor in defence of what he believed to be right, his courage of opinion, his devotion to principle, his splendid talents, his robust and picturesque eloquence, his manliness. He is said to have been much overcome when he stood up before seventy-five thousand Georgians to speak of the deceased, with whom he had been associated | phothgraphs Tabor: so long in public life. The great and fundamental doctrine of the reserved rights of the States under the Constitution is a cardinal doctrine with Robert Toombs, and he emphasized his own decided convictions, as well as expressed the opinions of thousands of other intelligent Southerners, when he declared that Governor Stephens "would have deserved all honor if he had performed no act in his life except to advocate those principles of States rights which he had always held to."

There can never come a time in the history of the United States when with safety to our institutions this great doctrine of State Rights can be held in abeyance much less be abandoned. It is the very foundation sills of our form of government. Give up that great principle incorporated into the Great Charter of our liberties and centralization is inevitable. And then will come the Empire or worse.

When such a great student of history and such a great writer of history as is Edward A. Freeman, the author of the admirable and elaborate work on the Norman Conquest, visits laws and institutions, and then sounds the alarm that our liberties are endangered by the centralizing tendencies in the North, it is time for all Americans to examine afresh the fundamentals of our Government and to see that the stones quarried by the illustrious men of the Revolutionary era and placed in the great and imposing structure of 'our Union of States have not been removed and rotten and unsafe timbers have not been substituted. But other eminent Englishmen have not failed to see this same evil and dangerous tendency. Herbert Spencer has given us a warning also.

It was, therefore, both timely and in good taste that Gen. Toombs should refer to the advocacy of the reserved rights of the States by Mr. Stephens. In his magnum opus-his history of the war between the States -he has made an argument for the great doctrine of the South that has never been answered and will never be answered. The sophists of New England are now firing their Hamiltonian guns at the great exponents of that doctrine through a certain set of biographies that are being published by a Boston house, but they fire at long range and with wet powder. From Webster's speeches alone it has-been shown by Dr. Bledsoe it is possible to construct an argument that no Hamiltonian can overthrow.

Gov. Stephens, the ablest exponent of the great Jeffersonian principle, is dead. Gen. Toombs, another eloquent and earnest advocate and defender of the same great doctrine, must soon follow. Ex-President Davis, another very able upholder of the same great and precious principle, will in a few years be gathered to his fathers. Rev. Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe, a corypheus in argument, and a tremendous advocate of the same great doctrine of State Rights, went to his grave years ago. When all are gone who will remain of equal temper and equal abilities to contend for the right? There is one fact that remains to sustain and comfort: the speeches of Calhoun, the works of Bledsoe and Stephens and Davis will remain. They will constitute for all time the armory whence may be drawn all the facts, evidences and arguments sufficient to meet every enemy of popular and free constitutional government. The men who assail those rampants with the weapons furnished by Hamilton and his peculiar disciples-Story, Curtis et id omne ge-FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 9, 1883. nus will find themselves assailing invincible and incombustible walls and fighting with hilts without blades.

The Georgians honor themselves in paying suitable honors to the pure and able Stephens. The solemn dirges of the dead should teach a lesson to every Southron: that he should imitate whatever there was in the to unite with tens of thousands of | life of the illustrious Georgian that was noble and pure and good, and that love of principle, love of the South, love of constitutional liberty, love, therefore, of a common country, should be an animating motive, a controlling impulse, a life-long Toombs is intellectually the peer of | guide in all the duties and responsi-

RANDOM SHOTS.

Tabor is the name of the rich Colorado Republican Senator who was elected to fill an unexpired term of a few weeks. He is a rich specimen of a "reform" Republican representative. Mr. J. R. Randall, in his last very graphic and interesting letter in the Augusta Chronicle, describing the closing scenes in the Senate thus

"Mr. Tabor, after having gone the rounds of his associates begging for their auto-graphs—much to their disgust—stretched himself in a chair and soon dozed off with his shaggy head thrown back and cavernous mouth wide open. He looked like some hideous monster washed ashore from some convulsed sea. He will step down and out to-day as the most despised creature that ever disgraced the American

His recent divorce from his wife, described as an excellent woman, and his marriage in Washington to another woman who has a husband in the West, is a most disgusting and shameful event. President Arthur attended the marriage and Mr. Randall says "made a prominent exhibition of himself." Shame upon all concerned in this infamous show!

Among other things that happened at the close of the Senate was a most scathing philippic on Attorney General Brewster by Senator Van Wyck, a conscientous Republican who has the boldness to speak out his convictions. Don Cameron tried to bully him for "going for" Brewster, and he advanced with a very threatening attitude, but some of his friends interfered and led him off. It is said Don was "in his cups." Van Wyck did not take water but reiterated his our country and closely examines our statements. Mrs. Van Wyck, in delicate health, was in the gallery and was very much excited at the

> "The Tariff bill was passed in a way that cannot be approved and hardly justified; but it was any port in a storm for the Re-publicans, and when brought to bay they do not hesitate at the machinery used for gaining their point. The Democrats, pending the final passage of the bill in the Sen-ate, did the talking; the Republicans did the voting."

He says Vance in a ten minutes' speech was "pungent and effective."

Referring to the failure to pass the River and Harbor bill, Mr. Randall says it "was sacrificed to Republican exigencies." He pointedly says:

"Millions of dollars have been added to the pensions, but the rivers and harbors of the South and West must pay the penalty of extravagance. The Van Voorhis idea of statesmanship has been allowed to triumph

Twenty Years Ago. In 1863, Mr. Wilson, now of Lawrence, Mass, was in the Commissary Department in Washington Somehow or other, he was taken with a violent soreness of the throat. Several Army Surgeons examined his throat and decided that it was a case of diphtheria, and that it was hopeless. After they had given him up, he tried PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. The next day the scales began to come off of his throat, and in two or three days he was well. A Vigorous Growth

Frank Byrne Released by the French Authorities-Speculation Relative to Eagan's Departure from Ireland. [By Cable to the Morning Star.]

LONDON, March 9 .- A Paris dispatch ays Frank Byrne was released last evening, the authorities not deeming his case one for extradition.

Dublin, March 9.-Mr. Jenkinsen, director of the Irish Criminal Investigation Department, states that Eagan has been under police supervision for some time, but left Ireland Thursday unknown to the police. Mr. Jenkinssn believes Eagan fled because he thought if Sheridan was extradited important evidence would come into the hands of the authorities. Three letters from Eagan were found on Carey's premises, dated October and November, 1881 at which time the Invincibles were established. One of these letters expresses the hope that Carey will succeed in the work he has on hand.
