We were in hopes after the American experience with the Langtry that "our English cousins" in the theatrical line and of distinction could show a clean bill of moral health. But read what ex-Mayor Hall, of New York, says in a recent interview reported in the Cincinnatti Commercial Gazette:

" 'An effort will be made, I suppose, to bring Miss Terry into society in New York?"

That is already being done, said Mr. Hall, but I do not think it will succeed. Mr. Kelly, Miss Terry's divorced husband, is in England, and Mrs. Brodribb, who was formerly Mrs. Irving, also remains abroad, and while Mr. Irving and Miss Terry are staying in different parts of the city, it isn't probable that New York society will take up either.

Levy, the cornetist, is a coldblooded fellow. He has had two wives. His first has just obtained a divorce. He coolly tells a reporter:
