These require the election of a Stated Clerk and of Synodical Agents every three years. Quite a discussion sprang up on the effect of this action, whether the terms of office were not thereby vacated, and after some action and reconsideration a committee was appointed to draft a minute covering the matter in question.

Rockwell, D. D., and R. A. Knox. It was made the order of the day to hear Major Robert Bingham this evening after public worship, concerning the interests of Davidson College. Winston was chosen, after a handsome little speech from the Moderator nominating this point, as the place for holding the next meeting of Synod. Twelve hundred copies of the Minutes of the current session of Synod were ordered to be published. The Synod also approved the docket as prepared by in the ated Clerk and mailed to the ministers and churches and ordered the preparation of such docket for succeeding meetings of Synod, and that the expenses be payed by the Treasurer.

Rev. J. Rumple, D. D., was chosen Synodical Agent of Education, in place of Rev. L. Mckinnon, removed from the Synod. Dr. Rumple was requested to prepare a report on this subject.

In the afternoon, Rev. L. C. Vass, the Synodical Agent of Sabbath Schools, made an interesting report on this subject. A resume of the work of the year indicates in every particular gratifying increase, both in interest and work accomplished. Mr. Vass reported 154 schools, with 1,841 teachers and 10,418 scholars; 342 scholars have been received into the Church. The contributions for school purposes, werefor school purposes $2,373, and for benevolence $1,269. This work of the schools The Moderator announced the standing of the Church awakened much interest. On the subject, Rev. Roger Martin, of Shoe Heel, made extended and earnest remarks, approving the resolutions, urging the attendance of older people with their children, and the critical and spiritual study of the Scriptures, and commending the holding of Presbyterian Sunday School Conventions.

After divine service, Major Robert Bingham. Superintendent of the Bingham School, made an address, presenting specially the Davidson College Improvement Society, but treating, with exceeding naivete, greatly enjoyed by the Synod and the audience present, with much force and originality and in striking and sententious manner, of the need of higher culture, and the special advantages and necessities of Davidson College. His scriptural allusions and quotations often were telling, and were evidently keenly relished by the Synod. Major Bingham is a man of cosmopolitan views; aggressive, energetic, broad and liberal. His address was listened to attentively to the very close, and was backed by large experience and wide ob ration. His work for education in the State, apart from his own private enterprise (of such marked success) in normal schools, teachers institutes, and educational associations, gave his opinion great weight. His commendation of Davidson College as a Pres byterian institution of high merit was intelligent and sincere. He claimed for it a position not equalled by any denominational institution south of the Potomac. An immediate effort was made in behalf of the Society, and hearly four hundred dollars at

Among the delegates in attendance upon the sessions of the Synod of North Carolina are many whose names and influence are held in high esteem-prominent in literary and educational circles, as well as-ecclesiastical and religious.

Col. W. J. Martin, Professor in Davidson College; John B. OBITUARY.

DR. J. S. ROBINSON.

Died, at Elizabethtown, Friday, 9th November, 1883, Dr. JAMES S. ROBINSON, eldest son of the late Dr. H. H. Robinson. Forty-five years ago, in Bladen county, the sun rose on the infant face of James S Robinson: a few days since that same sun set on the grave of his manly form. From infancy to childhood, from boyhood to manhood, amid joys and sorrows, in health and in sickness, in life and in death, Dr. James S. Robinson was hated by none, was respected by all, and was loved by many. Nor was it a common love, confined to brothers who adored him, and a sister and wife who idolized him; but many loved him as few love strangers.

tation, engaged from the first in a large practice, Dr. Robinson was a physician of unusual ability. He inherited from his family, among whom were and are so many distinguished physicians, medical talent of a high order, and he cultivated succal talent of a high order, and he cultivated suc-cessfully nature's gift.

Whether in the hospital, administering to the torn and mangled limbs of Confederate soldiers, or in the humble cottage attending upon Charity's sick, or in the bed-chamber of wealth, earning his professional fee, Dr. Robinson was that rarest of men, the same. Unselfish to a fault, charitable beyond human, generous in excess of his means, the subject of this indifferent tribute to his memory early won and to the last retained more memory early won and to the last retained more of love and less of enmity than any ever known

All the sad and long day on which his remains lay in his home, callers of every age, from timid maiden to more composed matron, from fright-ened youth to saddened and sorrowed old age, paid him respect by a tearful look at him they loved him so well. Many an historic hero has died over whose grave fewer tears were shed.

The river bank, his native Cape Fear, along whose edges he had played in boyhood and whose waters had mingled its murmurs with his whose waters had mingled its murmurs with his happy laugh of "auld lang syne," was thronged with people of all conditions and color, who had followed the coffin of their friend to the steamer "North State," which bore his remains to Wilmington, where others of his kindred had preceded him to Oakdale Cemetery.

The high esteem in which the departed was held in Wilmington, where he had formerly practiced medicine, was manifestly shown by the large concourse of people who followed him to his grave. In Wilmington he was buried, last Sabbath afternoon. The city, that gave him his bride, has given him a grave. But a few years ago, in Carolina's "City by the Sea," he stood at the matrimonial altar; to-day, in his winding sheet, he reposes in her Cemetery. The beautiful affection and faithful aursing of him, in his last sickness, by that former bride have proved her well worthy to be his present grief stricken widow. May the God, who has received the one, in His Own good time, accept the other; and may in His Own good time, accept the other; and may they and their kindred yet meet in that Heavenly me, where deaths and partings are no visitors is the sincere Lope of

108 NORTH FRONT STREET,

If old Ben Butler wrote his Thanksgiving proclamation Harvard College ought to make amends at once by making him a D. D. What could be more pious than this: "Let every one that bath an overflow of blessings remember the poor and lowly who may be deprived of them, and give and make happy according to his abun-dance, and thus on that day cheer the heart and quicken the gratitude of every such one, for how can any refrain from thanks to Him when partaking of His lessings? Let every one be merry and mirthful with every innocent sport and pleasure, rejoicing thereby in the goodness of God. So shall all men testify to the glory of the Father, who in His provisee bath given the earth her increase for the farmer, strengthened the arm of the artisan, stayed the tempest from fishermen and merchants, raised up the poor and lowly, and ordained an upward progress of people and given them power in the Homicide at Laurinburg. A shocking murder occurred at Laurin burg on Tuesday night last, about 11 o'clock. It seems that a row originated in a bar-room on Main street between a young colored man named Charles Warren and two other colored men (brothers) named John and Murdoch Malloy, concerning some counterfeit money. The quarrel was finally adjourned from the bar-room to a ball room on the opposite side of the street, where a dance was going on, and where the dispute assumed a more serious aspect. Finally John Malloy dealt Warren a blow with a hatchet, and Murdoch followed up the deadly assault by stabbing the unfortunate man in three separate places with a
