One escaped but the other was captured and committed to jail Yesterday was the day set for the trial, in this city, of Messrs. Burns, McCall and Parks, the three men who were captured in King's Mountain on suspicion of making an effort to kidnap the children of Captain George Coolidge, about three weeks ago. The men were sent to jail by a justice of the peace in default of $1,000 bond each. and were brought before Judge Shipp at Chambers' court yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus. Immediately upon receiving their discharge, the three men took particular pains to get away from Charlotte, having received intimation that if they did not clear out pretty quickly, they might be compelled to stay here a little longer than they would desire. The intimation was correct, for even while the men were leaving Charlotte, a paper was being drawn un for their detention. This was a bench warrant for their arrest. As soon as Judge Shipp made known his decision in the case. Captain Coolidge applied for a bench warrant, which was at once issued by Judge Shipp and placed in the hands of the sheriff, but the men were already beyond reach.

LIBRARY HALL.

"Stonewali" Jackson.

A refined and a larger audience than on Wednesday night, heard the very impressive and eloquent lecture of Rev. Dr. Milburn at Library Hall, last evening, on that unique, grand, almost ideal hero, Gen. Thomas J. Jackson, now passed into the immortality of history as "Stonewall" Jackson. The Doctor, we were gratified to see, was in a better plight of voice and of body than on the occasion of the lecture on Randolph. Although still suffering he was able to command his naturally very fine and flexible and responsive voice much better than on the first night. His lecture on JACKSON is delightful. It is very elevating and suggestive. It is full of fine reflections, often rising into an impressive and engaging eloquence, and is not without a flash of fun now and then. He gave an elaborate, careful, discriminating, vivid, luminous portrait of the great captain, beginning with his childhood spent in privation and trial and poverty, and ending with his calm and pathetic death, so worthy of the Christian hero. He told of his ancestry for three generations, and it was a most interesting recital. He brought out with exceeding care and minuteness all of the environments of the boy, and showed what blood and characteristics of lineage entered into the future eader of men. This was a most instructive study, and it was absolutely essential to the comprehension of one of the grandest characters of the nineteenth century. In his case the boy was indeed father to the son, and the skilled and richly endowed lecturer, by his rare vocabulary and powers of narration and description, was able to present a living man, the marked lineaments of his being all revealed in clearest light. It was no demigod-no highlyglossed image-no unreal and immaculate creation that stood before you, for the painter is too great an artist for such imperfect work as that; but it was human sout—a man of some peculiarities of disposition and temper-a quiet, reticent, self-poised, self-reliant, conscientious, delving, resolute man you saw, who dared to do his duty in every place whereunto he was appointed-who took duty for his pole-star and guiding principle-who had high ideals and was capable of high living and noble doing. A man hard to understand. A man of true genius; but it was a slumbering genius until it was kindled into action by the fierce fires and volcanic throes of war, and then it flashed and so that all men could see it bask in its splendor and feel secure under its scintilla. The lecturer disappointed us in two particulars, and it was pleasant to us. He dwelt upon the great, high moral principles of the man and his deep and simple and earnest piety, and made these prominent, for they were basic to all of his future greatness and made his name "one of the few; the immortal names that were not born to die." He had far less to say of war and its grim and ghastly results than we expected. The military career was finely touched but not dwelt upon as it was so well known to all. It was the training that made the man and the hero. The splendor of his military genius was the outcome of the sound and relying principles of a pure, simple, and yet noble manhood. It was a most instructive, pleasing, and elegant entertainment. No youth, no man, whether young or old, could listen to that discussion without catching a new impulse and forming a fresh purpose to reach after.

higher things. We may mention an interesting fact: Dr. Milburn has never written a line of any lecture or sermon he delivers. He is master of a most select, beautiful and impressive vocabulary. His English is very charming and full of surprises to the student of rhetoric. To us it is a constant stady and a source of unmingled delight. We have necessarily written most hufriedly, and we shall be glad if aught we have said shall draw attention to this instructive, eloquent, useful and impressive lecture.

It was shortly after supper, and Calvin, hearing an unusual noise in the back part of the house, went to the rear door just in time to see a colored man throw a trunk over the fence into the street. Calvin pursued the fellow and pushed him so close that he did not secure his booty. which was recovered by the owner, who found that its contents had not been disturbed. Doubtless the fellow will be doubly chagrined when he hears that the trunk contained one hundred dollars in cold specie, together with other valuables 'not necessary to mention."

Foreign Exports.

The following comprised the foreign shipments vesterday: The German barque Auguste Jeannette, Turgens, for Stettin, Germany, by Messrs. E. Peschau & Westermann, with 3,190 barrels of rosin, valued at $4 800; the British barque Venus, Harriss, for New Castle on-Tyne, by Messrs. Alex. Sprunt & Son, with 2,505 barrels of rosin and 300 casks of spirits turpentine, valued at $8,900; and the Schr. Cook Gorden, Lunt, for Philipsburg, West Indies, by Messrs. Parsley & Wiggins, with 75,736 feet lumber and 25,000 shingles, valued at $2,440. Total $16,140.

Lecture at Point Caswell. Rev. Dr. Milburn lectured Thursday night at Point Caswell, Pender county, in Simpson's Hall, to a large audience, his theme being "Sargent S. Prentiss, or Flush Times in Mississippi." A good many of the Sampson people came to hear the distinguished lecturer, and all were delighted with the words of eloquence that fell from the lips of the wonderful orator. Dr. Milburn returned yesterday on the steamer John Dawson, and some of our up-river friends came to hear his lecture in Wil mington last night.

The colored people of this city have organized a Tent of the Grand United Order of Rechabites, to be known as Cape Fear Tent No. 1. The following are the officers: James Winfield, C.; James H. Harriss, D. A. Walker, Recording Secretary; Samuel Allen, Financial Secretary; Jeremiah Hall, Treasurer; John Davis, Prelate; Calvin Kelley, I. S.; Lewis Nixon, O. S.; Austin Middleton, Chaplain; John Jackson, Coun-

Magistrate's Court.

James Turlington was arraigned before Justice Millis, yesterday morning, charged with assault and battery upon Wm. Serles, colored. The evidence developed the fact that the affray took place on the steamer A. P. Hurt, while in Bladen county, on her passage from Fayetteville to this city, and that the case therefore did not come within the jurisdiction of a court in New Hanover county. It was dismissed.

WHO IS MRS. WINSLOW:—As this question is frequently asked, we will simply say that she is a lady who for upwards of thirty years has untiringly devoted her time and talents as a female Physician and nurse, principally among children. She has especially studied the constitution and wants of this numerous class, and, as a result of this effort, and practical knowledge, obtained in a lifetime spent as a nurse and physician, she has compounded a Soothing Syrup for children teething. It operates like magic—giving rest and health, and is, moreover, sure to regulate the bowels. In consequence of this article Mrs. Winslow is becoming world-renowned as a benefactor of her race; children certainly do rise up and bless her; especially is this the case in this city. Vast quantities of the Soothing Syrup are Dally sold and used here. We think Mrs. Winslow has immortalized her name by this invaluable article, and we sincerely believe thousands of children have been saved from an early grave by its timely use, and that millions yet unborn will share its benefits, and unite in calling her blessed. No Morher has discharged her duty to her; suffering little one in our opiniou until she has given No Mother has discharged her duty to her suffer-ng little one, in our opinion, until she has given it the benefit of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup Try it, mothers—Thy IT NOW.—Ladies' Visitor, New York City.
