in a way that shows that he understands them thoroughly. What he says is in the line of our recent editorials on the Government Pedagogie scheme. He says:

"The extreme nationalists virtually regard the Union as a consolidated nation which is the source of all national and State authority, and whose government possesses all powers not prohibited by the national constitution. There are no American statesmen who explicitly profess this doctrine, but there are plenty of them whose public acts betray the existence in their minds of such an impression. Every Republican politician will repudiate it in words, while the tendency of Republican legislation is in that direction."

Here is more about Mr. Tilden, and he is very bad off. It is nonsense to talk about him as a probable candidate for any place but the grave. The Washington correspondent of the Augusta Chronicle writes:

"I do not deny that Mr. Tilden could get the nomination, but I seriously doubt his acceptance of it, under any conceivable circumstances. He is paralyzed everywhere except in the brain, and that may be involved at any moment. He cannot cut his food or carry ft to his mouth. All motion is painful and rapidly becoming impossible. He is losing control of the muscles of his mouth and saliva trickles from it disagreeably. Dr. Austin Flint, his physician, pronounces that if he accepted the nomination he would not survive it thirty days. Is the Democratic party prepared to inominate a man who may die during the campaign?"

A Wraning to Parents. The perils of childhood are many and various, and it requires constant care and attention to keep them from accident and harm. The very thing that the anxious parent is desirous that the little innocent should shun or abstain from is usually the first to receive its attention, and they are almost constantly getting themselves into trouble of some sort. We have a very striking instance in point, and one that shows the importance of constant alertness on the part of mothers and nurses to prevent serious accident to the little ones. A lady residing in the southern section of the city, on Friday of last week, had her nurse engaged in scouring the floor of one of her rooms, while see nursed the baby. In the mean time she had told her son to go down the street for some purpose, and he had but just departed on the errand when she thought of something further she wanted to say to him. Calling the servant from her work she told her to hasten to the door and call her son back, and at the same time put the infant on the floor and followed the woman, to give her boy the necessary directions. She remained at the door but a few moments and then returned the room she had just left. to her unmistakable horror, she found that during her absence the child had crawled to the tub of water which the nurse had been using in scouring the floor and had plunged head foremost into it, only its little feet being visible above the surface. She snatched it from the "laws of death" which it had so innocently catered, hurriedly applied the restoratives usual on such occasions, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing her darling once more restored to her.

Does Advertising Pay? OTTERBOURG'S VERSION.

Being extensive advertisers, we are Being extensive advertisers, we are asked, we answer emphatically—YES. No matter what your business may be, a fudicious use of printer's ink pays, and pays handsomely. But, mind you, there are several ways to advertise, viz., one the untruthful or blowing advertisement; one the "originale minus", or borrowed advertisement; and the other the TRUTHFUL, HON-EST and ORIGINAL advertisement. The use of the former class will never bring success to a dealer, for if a man uses his newspaper to practice deception, he'll be sure to sail under the same canvas behind his counter, and the people will emphatically find it out, and his business can never prosper. The use of the second class, if followed for any length of time, will meet with its own merited reward. The merchant who is not original in his advertisement can t be original or lasty in the selections of his styles. Originality in any business is its main stake and secret of success. A "Brain Robber" can't succeed; no matter whether he be in the halls of Congress or behind a counter it's all the same. People appreciate merit. People appreciate merit.

11. It will withstand hot and cold weather.

Why do we paint the sides of our buildings and leave the most exposed part, the roof, unpainted?

If a tin or shingle roof is leaky do not go to the expense of newly covering, but use MOTT'S FIRE AND WATER PROOF PAINT.

We, the undersigned, having had shingle and tin roofs painted with Mott's Patent Water and Fire Proof Paint; feel no hesitation in raying that so far it has given entire satisfaction, stopping leaks where nothing else did any good.

C. H. WARWICK, (shingle).

MRS. V. J. TAYLOK, (tin).

PETERSBURG TESTIMONIALS:

Mr. L. D. Mott, Jr.,
Dear Sir: This is to certify that I have used your Water and Fire Proof Paint on several very leaky roofs, and since they were painted with your Paint they have not leaked at all. I cheerfully recommend the "Mott's Paint" as the best roof paint I ever saw.

DANIEL RAHILY.

L. D. Mott, Jr., Esq.,

Dear Sir: Your Water Proof Paint, used on my kitchen and stable roofs, gives entire satisfaction. Both of these roofs leaked badly, and since you applied your Paint I find no leaks, and we have had, since the work was done, some heavy rains. I take it I am but doing you justice, as well as your Paint, to say that I consider it a first-class Roofing Paint. This Paint was, by my direction as Chairman of the Public Property Committee of this City, applied to a part of one of the Market Houses, and it gave entire satisfaction.

E. A. GOODWIN.
Mr. L.D.Mott,Jr.—It is with pleasure that I add for the testimony of the excellency of your Fire and Water Proof Paint. The tin roof of my printing house leaked badly, but since you applied your Roofing Paint it has not leaked at all, notwithstanding some heavy rains have fallen. JNO. B. EGE. have leaky roofs. We also refer to: J. T. Young, President Planters & Mechanics Bank; John Mann, Attorney at Law; F. Gallagher, Deputy Collector, and J. A. Warwick & Bro., Commission Merchants. (From Petersburg Index-Appeal, Jan. 24th, 1884.) TRIED AND NOT FOUND WANTING.—The test of the fire-proof quality of Mr. Mott's roofing paint was made on Courthouse avenue last evening, in the presence of a large number of spectators, and the ordeal satisfactorily established all that was the ordeal satisfactorily established all that was claimed for the paint. A small hopse made of dry pine covered with a thin coat of paint, was placed under a pile of shavings, upon which six gallons of kerosene oil were poured and ignited. The flames leaped high into the air and burned furiously for forty minutes. Finally the house was raked from debris and drenched with kerosene oil, which burned off clean, leaving the wood unscorped. unscorched, as any one may see who has the curiosity to call at the Walthall Hotel, where it is on exhibition to-day. The object of the test, which on account of the caution of the authorities was not as severe as usual, was not to prove the impossibility of destroying the box by fire, but to show that the paint is an effective protecbut to show that the paint is as effective protection against the ordinary accidents which cause fire. This was made so plain to our mind that it has been deiermined to treat the roof of the Index-Appeal's building to a coat of it as soon as the house is remodeled. Another, and in our opinion a more valuable quality of the paint is its imperviousness to water, making it a sure remedy for leaks in old shingled and tinned roofs. As a test of this two paper boxes were painted on the inside and keresene oil poured into one and water into the other without the slightest effect upon the paper. The Loxes with their contents can also be seen at the Walthali Hotel to-day. Persons who may have leaky roofs, Hotel to-day. Persons who may have leaky roofs, or who may wish to guard against fire should give Mr. Mott a call and learn from him about the matter. We have no hesitation in saying that he has a good article which is worthy of the at-tention of property owners.

A public test of the fire-proof qualities of this paint will be made in this city in a few days. Due notice of time and place will be given.
