THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 17, 1884. EVENING EDITION.

CRUDE IDEAS.

The economic ideas that have prevailed in the United States among the Republican legislators have been crude beyond comparison. What they have lived for would puzzle them to answer. The world is full and the Northern people have been given in their wealth to much travel, and the inter-communication with Europe has been constant, and still the representative Republican legislator has learned absolutely nothing sensible or valuable in the way of sound principles of political economy. The young men are sent to college, where they are supposed to study political economy. They read the newspapers, are supposed to be very "gumptious" and to be well qualified to run a school or run a government, and still their views of economic science are more immature and insane than those that prevail in any other country not

We do not mean to say that there are not some exceptions. Many of the ablest political economists of this country are Republicans. But we speak of the ruling classes -of that number that are in control of the Government-the legislators and makers of public opinion.

If you doubt the crudeness of the ideas of this class we refer you to the history of this country since 1860. The men who have had control have acted in a way to impoverish and deplete and when there was no necessity for such a course. The Republican leaders have taken counsel with monopolists and have applied a false principle to all their legislation. In private business it is the rule to amass all of the surplus that is possible. The universal commermal principle is to make as rapidly as you can and to pile up just as much surplus as your business requirements can offeet.

But before the advent of Republicanism no such principle was applied to Government affairs. The sound | A few days before the case was set statesmen of the past, and of all parties, opposed the accumulation of a surplus. It was regarded as a very | for trial in one of the courts of the to raise enough revenue for the actnal support of the Government and no more, and but for corruption and ignorance among politicians it would be the rule.

How do the great continental nations act? How does that best governed of all European countries act -England? Do her statesmen go to work to see how much tax they can wrest from the people and how much surplus they can pile up? If you think so, then you are indeed ignorant. Mr. Gladstone is known to be | Winthrop, "give the case to Badger, one of the greatest statesmen in I then go into the Supreme Court room finance that the world has seen. when he argues it, and you will come quarter of the Union. But $50,000,-

England never had but one or two statesmen who equalled him, Now how does he go to work as the head of the Government? He canses just enough tar to be levied to meet the legitimate demands of the Government. He tries to avoid a surplus. He makes an estimate of all needed and probable expenses and he then lays a tax that is sufficient to mee these expenditures. The last idea that would occur to him or to any Englishman in power, would be to apply mercantile principles and heap up a surplus.

But this is precisely what American statesmanship-so-called-has been doing yearly for a long time. The system of taxation adopted and applied in this country has been ruinous and oppressive and very unwise. What sense or justice is there in piling up annually a surplus ranging from 100 millions to 1454 millions as it was in 1882? No such surplus was required. Why then take all this excess from the burdened people.

Let us do as the English do; make up the budget with reference to positive expenses needed to run the Government, and let not one dollar, if this be possible, be raised beyond it. We do not now consider the way to raise this needed sum. We have often discussed that. The Democrats in the Congress are now fight ing to reduce this very unnecessary surplus by about $30,000,000. This is by the proposed Tariff reduction that the Republicans are so bitterly

There are other propositions to reduce the surplus such as additional pension claims, appropriations for public buildings, constructing a navy and educating the negroes.

True statesmanship will concern itself in adopting methods that will henceforth prevent the accumulation of a surplus. A Government is always corrupt when there is a surplus to be fought over. Put that

CHOATE-AN ANECDOTE.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston, Mass. the leading publishing house of New England, will soon publish a handsome large quarto volume entitled "Memories of Rufus Choate." The work is by Judge Neilson, of Brooklyn. The work is said to be rich in the recollections of personal friends of the gifted son of Massachusetts. Among them are the late Matt Carpenter, James T. Fields and George P. Marsh. The methods, opinions, style, &c., of the orator are considered. Mr. Choate was unquestionably a lawyer of a very high grade. He was a giant among New England lawyers, and possessed unusually electrical power as a speaker. His published orations are studies. They possess a peculiar charm and yet as compositions they are curious. No man ever wrote as long sentences probably as Choate did. We remember that in his very remarkable address on Daniel Websterwhich was called out by the terrific attack made upon the memory of the greatest of all New Englanders by one of the most original, incisive, acute and eloquent of critics, Theodore Parker-that there was one sentence that covered more than one

A work of the kind indicated will be enjoyable. Mr. Choate was one of the most striking figures among the representative men in New England within the century. He had more genius than Everett or Winthrop or Palfrey or Sumner, and in his chosen field had but few if any

We remember a pleasant anecdote in connection with Choate that may be interesting to some of our readers. Our great man, George E. Badger, was in the Senate. He and Robert C. Winthrop were warm friends. Mr. Choate was to come to Washington to attend to a case of much importance to Massachusetts. for a hearing another case that had peculiar claims upon Choate came on censurable and dangerous policy to State. In much anxiety he went to ereate a surplus. The true idea was | Winthrop and stated his perplexity, saying that under the gircumstances it was impossible for him to go to Washington, and then asked who could be retained among Washington lawyers to attend to the case before the Supreme Court. Winthrop's advice was to give it to Badger, But, queried Choate, "What in the world does Badger know about maritime law? He probably never had a case in his life involving it in the least degree." "Never you mind," was the reply of the courtly and cultivated to the conclusion that Badger has been doing nothing but practicing in courts of Admiralty all his life. VITAL STATISTICS.

The health statistics of the cities are instructive. We have from time to time drawn attention to the death rate in leading American and European cities. We have before us some recent reports that show two results; first that the Northern cities generally show a lower rate than Southern cities, and, second, that the European cities are not as healthful as are American cities with but few

The white death rate of Wilming ton, N. C., in the last seven years has not gone above 16 in the 1,000, we think; and it has fallen to about 14 in some years. Wilmington will compare favorably as to its mortuary statistics with any town or city on the Atlantic coast.

OUR BOOK TABLES HOT PLOUGHSHARES. A Novel. By Albion W. Tourgee. 610 pages. Illustrated. Cloth $1,50. Nicely printed and bound. We have never attempted to read but one of the carpet bagger's stories. We broke down in utter disgust before we had got more than one-third through. His novels are popular in the North because they are supposed to be hostile to the South. We found the one we attempted to read nasty. Whether that quality has anything to do with his popularity we are unable to determine. Tourgee is very smart in his way, and he knows how to make money out of the ignorance and blind prejudice of his people. We were furnished by the publishers with a ready made criticism of "Hot Ploughshares." It may have been written by the author himself. We did not read it-We took it for granted that it was highly eulogistic of the Judge's intellectual wares. Life is too short to waste over such writers as Tourgee. We had quite enough of him when he was a resident of this State and was slandering and oppressing our people.

AN HISTORICAL READER for the Use of Classes in Academies, High Schools and Grammar Schools. By Henry E. Shepherd, M. A., L.L.D., President of the College of Charleston, &c. New York: D. Appleton & Company, 1884. This is a new and enlarged edition of an excellent work we noticed at some length when firs published. It is exquisitely printed and bound in muslin, and contains 494 pages. The plan of the book is excellent and the execution is above praise. It contains admirable extracts from the acknowledged masters in historical composition, and nearly all of the great names are embraced. It is a delightful volume for home reading as well as for giving a proper bias to the mind and taste of the student. We note that John Richard Green's name is spelled with a final s and incorrectly, and that there are four and not two volumes of Lecky's great "History of England in the Eighteenth Century" that have appeared, as is stated in the brief notice of that remarkable writer. President Shepherd is a North Carolinian and a gentleman of admirable culture, ability and trate CURRENT COMMENT.

- Over two-thirds of the sum appropriated for education will go to the States named. Their support of the measure was brought in the Senate with $50,000,000. The temptation was too great. Neither the peoalluded to believe in the existence of the constitutional power in the Fed-eral Government to thus appropriate the money in the Federal treasury. It is contrary to all the teachings and traditions of opinion in that

000 was too much for the men who now represent that section. If the old flar is not dear to them they have shown that an appropriation is.

It shows in a very striking light the danger of a full treasury.

The constitution is of no account. and its limitations of no value when assailed with the power of money. A government which may collect, in time of profound peace, under a fixed policy, a hundred million surplus, is, to and intents and purposes, a govern-ment without limit to its powers and functions. Whatever constitutional barriers may seem to stand opposed to the exercise of any power will be swept away by the force of the golden current of a hundred millions surplus. -St. Louis Republican, Dem.

- Senator Bayard, in his speech against this (Education) bill, said very wisely that, if the vast surplus that is in the vaults of the Government now, and is being added to day in and day out, under the operations of the present infernal war tariff, were allowed to remain in the hands and pockets of the people, the States could and would educate their own people. All along the tariff reformers have warned the country that the amassing of large sums in the National Treasury that are not needed or required by the government would tempt raiders and lobbies. All history and experience teach the lesson that if there is any public money in the coffers unused and not needed. there are unrest and uneasiness begotten which finally impel men to seek it for political or personal ends. - Nashville World, Dem.

BY JUST TWO VOTES.

Thirty Nine Democrats Vote with the Opposition-Five Republicans with the Democrats. Washington Post.

The House of Representatives

agreed yesterday to consider the Morrison bill by a vote of 140 to 138, a majority of two, the affirmrtive vote consisting of 135 Democrats and 5 Republicans, and the negative of 99 Republicans and 39 Democrats. The Republicans who voted in the affirmative were Anderson, of Kansas; Nelson, Strait and Wakefield, of Minnesota, and James, of New York. The Democrats who voted against consideration were Hewitt, of Alabama; Budd, Glascock, Henley and Tully, of California; Eaton, of Connecticut; Finerty, of Illinois, Lamb, of Indiana; Hunt, of Louisiana; Findlay, of Maryland; Ferrell, Fiedler and McAdoo, of New Jersey; Arnott, Hardy, Muller, Robinson, Spriggs, Stevens, Van Alstyne and Wemple, of New York ; Converse, Foran, Paige, Warner and Wilkins, of Ohio; Boyle, Curtin, Duncan, Elliott, Ermentrout, Hopkins, Mutchler, Patton, Post, Randall and Storm, of Pennsylvania, and Barbour and Wise, of Virginia. The motion was at least two votes stronger than the record showed, the Speaker not voting, and Lowry, of Indiana, coming into the House too late to vote. A majority of the Democrats from every State having Democratic Members voted or were paired for consideration except California, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, which voted solidly with the exception of Rosecrans of California, who voted aye, and Sumner of Cali fornia and Connolly of Pennsylvania who did not vote. The following Democrats in favor of consideration were paired with opposing Republicans: Fyan, Rankin, Morgan, Cook. Shelley, Burnes, Campbell, of N. Y. Gibson, Lewis, Covington, Broadhead, Dargan, Hill, Clements, Reagan, Moulton, and Rogers, of New York, with Pettibone, Robinson, of Ohio; Morrill, Cullen, Thomas, Calkins, Davis, of Illinois; Smalls, Mc-Cormick, Holton, Bayne, Brumm, Houk, Browne, of Indiana; Stephenson, Wait, and Brewer, of New York. Mr. Follett, Democrat, of Ohio, in favor, was paired with Mr. Connolly, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, opposed, Mr. White, of Minnesota, Republican, in favor of consideration, was paired with Mr. Nicholls, Democrat, of Georgia, opposed to consideration, Messrs. Bowen and Hooper, of Virginia, Campbell, of Pennsylvania, and Laird, of Nebraska, Republicans, and Hutchins, of New York, and Sumner, of California, Democrats, were not paired.

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

To our mind it is clear that the Democratic party in the State has everything to gain from a short, brisk campaign. Why should a political campaign be made to cover five or six months,-wasting the energies of the speakers and putting a severe strain on the patience of the people? Two months is long enough in all reason to keep the State in a ferment of political excitement. People have other work to do now-a-days besides spending half their time in listening to political speeches. - Elizabeth

Oity Falcon. The bill abolishing convict contract labor as fast as contracts expire has passed both branches of the Ohio Legislature.-Ex. If the Democracy wish to make fast friends of the working class of our people, let the party at its first opportunity follow the example of the Ohio Democracy in this matter. In other words, let the Democratic party of North Carolina at its next State Convention place a plank in its platform favoring the abolishment of the convict labor system. - Smithfield Herald.

It is said to be dangerous to tinker with the tariff now. Why? Dangerous to what? To our chances of success this year, they say. The condition of the county has changed, and States and sections that once favored free trade now demand protection, and vice versa. Does that change a principle? If protection was unconstitutional and wrong in principle when the Demo-cratic party declared it as one of its funda-mental principles, has a change in the con-dition and sentiment of a State or section made it constitutional and right?—Hickory Carolinian.

THE DEMOCRATIC BOLTERS.

Washington Post, Dem.

In a house, Democratic by 71 majority, the privilege of considering a revenue bill reported unanimously by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means committee, was granted yesterday by two votes only. Thirtynine Democrats expressed their contempt for the bill by voting that no member ought to be allowed to speak on it and it would have been summarily disposed of had it not been for five Republicans who joined one hundred and thirty-five Democrats in giving it a place.

These bolting Democrats show themselves by this vote to be, in principal and practice, as thoroughly devoted to the present protective tariff as the extremest among Republicans. It is to be regretted that they have so emphatically set themselves against what now is and is to continue to be the settled and recognixed policy of their party on the leading political issue of the day.

Their attitude is in no respect less hurtful and in many particulars more damaging to the Democrats than the reconized opposition of the Republi-

AN UNSTATESMANLIKE OP-POSITION.

New York Herald.

The Morrison bill is a beginning; t has never been claimed for it that t is anything more. It is an extremely moderate beginning, and it is difficult to see how a more moderate measure could be framed. Yet Republicans who voted for the more radical proposals of the Tariff commission, and Democrats who fail to see the opportunity presented for a great and lasting victory over the lliberal and wicked tariff policy fastened upon the country by the war and since maintained by private greed, seem about to deny even a consideration of this bill. This is not statesmanship.
