There is a heavy tax levied on iron, steel, woolens, cotton goods, boots, shoes, sugar and molasses. We do not stop to discuss this tax. It is soon be over. Our reading tends to a burden and it comes out of the many. There are tens of millions of persons who are made to pay a tax every day for the benefit of those who are engaged in manufacturing certain articles. This burden is heavy; it is believed to be far heavier than there is any necessity for. The tax increases the prices of the manufactured goods or there would be no need or demand for the tax. The woolen goods would cost less if there was less tax. It is true goods are now extremely low but they would be lower if the tax was lower. The tax on 4,000 articles averages 43 per cent. If it was but 30 or 25 per cent. of course the burden would be less.

BAYARD THROUGH INDEPEN-DENT SPECTACLES.

The Chicago Times is edited with marked ability as are all of the leading Northern dailies bearing that name. It carries an independent lance and it is quite as apt to make war upon one party as another, and upon one statesman as upon another. It knows much of our public men and it often measures correctly. O Senator Bayard and his elevation to the Presidency it says that he would "an honest, upright, careful, pains-taking, scrupulous, though not brilliant chief magistrate." What a character ! Is it not possible for such a man to be at the head of our Government? Think of a man sitting in the chair disgraced by Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur of whom it may be truly and justly affirmed that he is "honest;" that he is "upright;" that he is "careful;" that he is "painstaking;" that he is "scrupulous." These are noble attributes. These are the precise qualities needed in an American President. Never

INTERESTING LETTER. The State Exposition-The Tileston

School, &c. [Star Correspondence,]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.-] was greatly gratified to meet President Primrose here last week. He told me of the splendid work that the people of Wilmington were doing for the State Exposition, and for the representation of the interests of their city and county. I cannot say that I was surprised at it, for I saw so much of the intelligent appreciation of your citizens of the value of their own resources and so many evidences of their enterprise during my brief visit in your city last spring that I was prepared to hear of almost anything, and should have been seriously disappointed had Mr. Primrose told me a story different from what he did. As it is permit me to congratulate through you the good people of Wilmington, that they have taken hold of this matter with characteristic energy, and permit me to assure them that the work they are doing will be repaid a thousand fold all that it shall have cost in money and in effort.

I met yesterday at the office of Gen. Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, Miss Amy Bradley, the principal of the Tileston Seminary. She was consulting with the Com missioner at his request as to what kind of an exhibit she should make at Raleigh. It was determined that she should illustrate the methods of instruction and the progress of the pupils in all the grades, from the kindergarten to the graduating classes. With the methods there will be a display of all the adjuncts appliances of the institution, with pictures of the buildings and several of the rooms occupied by the classes. Here will be a chance for the bright-eved youth of both sexes, whom I saw in the assembly room of the Seminary, to do a grand thing for the children and youth in less favored sections of the South, by showing by their own work what can be done under favorable circumstances, and how they are preparing themselves for their life work. It is a part of the plan to transfer this exhibit to New Orleans, so that not only the teachers and youth of North Carolina may see it, but that all the world may also know what the boys and girls of Wilmington are doing. This morning I was in the State Department in the Statistical Bureau where all the consular reports are examined, and where those which are deemed most important to American trade and commerce are edited before being sent to the printer. found the gentlemen there engaged in a discussion suggested by a report they had before them from the East Indies, on the immense consumption of tropical fruits all over civilization, and of the comparatively limited area in which those fruits were produced. One of them made a remark that struck me as being of peculiar importance to your section: It was to this effect, that if communication to all parts of the world increased in the same ratio during the next decade as it had during the past two, that the demand for oranges, figs, and other well known fruits, and for almonds, olives and other products of the semi-tropical countries would inevitably lead to a considerable advance in their prices, for that consumption increased in much' greater ratio than production. I was somewhat staggered by this statement at first and questioned it, but he overwhelmed me with a mass of statistics that proved he was exactly right. Ten years ago one would have supposed that the immense production of oranges in Florida, to which we are now accustomed would have made that splendid fruit a drug in the market, but instead the reverse is the fact and the annual average gain in prices is pouring wealth into that State in increasing volume. Wil mington and the country round about it can produce everything that is raised in California, and there is no reason why it should not become as famous in the early future for its semi-tropical fruits as is the country surrounding the Golden Gate. I hope the modesty of the STAR

SOME INSTRUCTIVE FIGURES. It is instructive to know "how the money goes." Men must eat and have clothing. Children must be educated, the Gospel must be preached, and the grand work of saving men must be carried on. We have before us some very significant, some very alarming, some very reproachful figures. They are gathered, says the Christian Union, from "the census of 1880 and other reliable author-

People are heavily taxed by the Government. Since the war the sum that has been taken from the taxpayers is something marvellous to behold and to think about. The hundreds of millions that have been stolen, wasted and misapplied are enough to make all men of ordinary sense reflect long before they agree to entrust the Government into the hands of that party that has done the mischief and has heaped up the oppressions.

Taxation is a positive necessity and a positive curse. It has to be borne, however, as we must have Government, and there can be no Government without taxes. So al good and true citizens will agree to be taxed and to bear their proportion of the public burden. No man, who is able, should be allowed to go untaxed. Every voter should be made to pay for the privilege. Why should a man be allowed to select candidates to tax others when he does not pay a cent of tax himself? It is a foul injustice and wrong to those who are taxed to allow this.

But the heaviest tax placed upon the people is that which is levied by taste and appetite. Men expend more for drinking and smoking and dress and other extravagances than they do for government, religion and education. The voluntary tax levied for vice is far greater than the tax imposed to cure souls and educate the mind and to secure an economical Government.

To begin: the total sum expended for Christian missions, home and for-To begin: the total sum expended eign, is $5,500,000. That is contemptibly small. The sum expended for liquor annually is $900,000,000nine hundred millions. Behold the contrast. And yet the United States are called by way of favor a Christian "Nation." The total sum expended for education is $85,000.000. There are ten times as much money spent for liquor as for education. The other items are as follows: Iron and steel 290,000,000 Sugar and molasses 153,000,000 | was for peace, mind about the "brilliancy" so we secure honesty, and aprightness and scrupulousness and carefulness. Bayard is at least as "brilliant" as Grant or Hayes or Arthur. He has precisely those qualities that are needed at this juncture. What is "brill iancy" without virtue? What is brilliancy without character?

Deliver the United States from "brilliant" and depraved Chief Magistrate! Deliver this great country from another corrupt administration! Deliver our people from foreign complications and the cost and bloodshed of a foreign war! Give us a President like Bayard, with clean hands, an upright heart, diligence and fidelity and an unswerving patriotism. Mr. Bayard may not be a "brilliant" man after the style of Blaine; but he is a man of solid brains; a well balanced intellect, well cultivated, well disciplined, well furnished. He has high views of statesmanship, ripe experience, a singular devotion to principle, a brave heart in maintaining the right, and a character so pure and unspotted that he may never fear the light.

The New York Sun is sometimes dangerous friend and it is always most dangerous enemy. It is already opening its strong guns on Blaine. There was an editorial of extraordinary merit upon him last week in which it showed what sort of electric light would be turned upon him. It represents a visit to Blaine by "Strict Justice" and makes the latter show a package to the "plumed Knight" and then says of him :

"You would like to look them over? aven't the least doubt of it. You promise faithfully on your honor to restore them to me? Ah! my dear sir, I am not Mulli-gan. I haven't his simple faith in the pledge of a desperate statesman. What is in the bundle? I assure you that is a very interesting question. One of the conse-quences of indiscreet correspondence is that you never know when judgment day is coming. Perhaps the bundle contains the whole story of the paper bounty swindles. Perhaps there are letters to Tom Scott there-who knows? Perhaps it is Wallace will permit me to use its columns for Rowell White's confessions. The full working strength of the Convention is on the ground with but a few individual exceptions. A roll call would show the presence in the city of eight hundred accredited delegates. dull, with pri The feature of the day was the arrival of lation and expo the marching organizations. Their comng was heralded by bands of music, and from early morning until the arrival of Tammany Hall to-night, there have been constantly recurring scenes of - marching bodies and boisterous receptions. Great crowds were assembled in the vicinity of the Palmer House, and each arriving coningent was met with great cheering.

The Cook County Democratic Club, strong local organization, performed the reatest portion of the local duty, but were oined as the day advanced by outside lubs, so that the McDonald Club of Indianapolis and the Irving Hall and Tam-many Clubs of New York had as their corts the Americus and Randall Clubs of Philadelphia, the New York County Democracy, and other outside organizations. To night, in brilliantly lighted streets about the Palmer House, is a mass of peole computed to number twenty thousand lrawn there by the commotion occasioned by these arrivals.
