CHICAGO.

Continuation of the Debate in the Democratic National Convention on the Unit Rule Question—The Vote on Grady's Amendment. CHICAGO, July 8.—In the Democratic National Convention this afternoon, Mr. Fellows concluded his remarks by saying that as far as was concerned the method by which the vote of a delegation should be governed, there had been no change in his opinion since he had had the right to command it in the Convention. Every member from that State in this Convention voted for the enforcement of the unit rule, and the delegation itself had declared by more than two-thirds majority that its chairman should express the will of the State by casting its seventy-two votes as one.

Mr. Minnie, of Indiana, offered as an amendment to the amendment that no State shall change its vote until the result of the ballot has been announced. Mr. Grady, of N. Y., spoke in favor of his amendment. He claimed that the delegation from New York had been misled by a statement in this manner: "There was a change," he said, "that through the power and influence of political machinery the honest and truthful opinion of New York might not have its proper force point in the columns that 72 solid votes from New York would be cast for one candidate; but there was no power to make that so. [Cries of "hallelujah!"] There were a few men in the New York delegation who would not only give their reasons why one candidate should not get the nomination, but would have the right to give their votes to that candidate who they thought would be elected. [Cries of "hallelujah!"]

Mr. Harris, of Va., made the point of order that the discussion was not in order pending the temporary organization of the Convention, but the point was overruled by the chairman. Mr. Grady continued his speech. He said that when the New York delegation left that State it was understood their votes would be decided by one way, but a political combination of the peoples' will was sought to be interfered with and as they made this only protest they could make they made it for the honor of the party and for the honor of the country, and so that New York might take its place in the Democratic column. He hoped that this Convention would adopt the old Democratic method, "let every man speak his sentiments and vote for his sentiments," and that whatever sentiment prevails, all would give it a hearty support. [Cheers.] He admitted that the State Convention of New York had adopted a resolution in favor of the unit vote, and he was not today because it was the choice of the majority would be what it was not today. [Laughter.] The fact still remains that whatever was done in the New York State Convention could not control the action of the National Convention. There was no power in the Convention that could make a reporting secretary place a lie in the minutes of the Convention and falsify its proceedings. If the chairman of a delegation announced twenty-four of his colleagues as voting for a certain candidate for whom they had already announced their intention not to vote; if the secretary so reported, then he and his colleagues would be voting for a man for a form which their lips denied, and that would be an outrage on free speech.

Mr. Gough on Silk Hats. "It would be no violation of the commandment," said John B. Gough, "if a man were to fall down and worship the silk hat, for it is not made in the likeness of anything in heaven, or on earth, or in the waters which are under the earth. New York might as well worship the hair to fall off. Parker's Hair Balsam will stop that, and restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Not oily, not a dye, beneficial, deliciously perfumed. A perfect hair dressing. See. All druggists."
