THANKSCIVING SERMON.

By a vote of the Conference Bishop

Linus Parker preached the Thanksgiving Sermon before a large audience in the Front Street Church. It was a very appropriate and impressive discourse. It had the same characteristics of thought and treatment that marked his Sunday sermon-clear, vigorous, luminous; the style simple and the arrangement comprehensive and admirable; the language accurate, choice, felicitous often; the sweep of thought wide and with enough of fervor to drive it home. Said Dr. Wilson, of the Presbyterian Church, himself an elegant writer, to us: "It was a very fine sermon—the eloquence of thought."

Said the editor of the N. C. Presbyterian to us: "You said Bishop Parker was not a great preacher. But I think that was great preaching."

We thought it highly intellectual, forceful, interesting preaching. The Bishop is evidently an uncommonly strong man, and if his temper and spirit are sweet the General Conference made no mistake in raising him to the Episcopal Bench. He carefully minds the discipline, we noticed, taking no liberties in the service.

Who is to Blame?

Happening in a grocery store on Thursday morning we were witness to an occurrence which we thought at the time afforded an explanation to some of the fancied shortcomings for which grocerymen have been heretofore mainly held responsible. How often do we hear the complaint that this or that groceryman has cheated by giving short weight or short measure! The occurrence was this: A girl came in and called for some articles, and among them was butter. She asked the price of the latter and was told that it was 35 cents per pound; when she said she wanted 30 cents' worth. The groceryman told her to take a pound, as she had the right change. "O, no," she replied, "I want to get something else." The groceryman very properly refused to let her have the quantity of butter she wanted, knowing, as he remarked, that the result would be the old complaint of short weight. The groceryman inform ed us, after the girl went out, that he often had such customers to deal with, and we have no doubt that others have the same experience. At all events it is not always the groceryman who is to blame for short weight and measure.

We had a pleasant call yesterday from Rev. Dr. B. F. Dixon, Superintendent of the Oxford Orphan Asylum. We are glad to know that he will carry back with him a substantial addition to the orphanage fund. We hear of one gentleman who gave him, unsolicited, his check for $50. Among those in attendance upon the sessions of Conference we notice Mr. Julian

S. Carr. of Durham. We were pleased to meet an old friend in the person of Rev. P. J. Carraway, one of the prominent members of the Conference. We were also glad to meet Rev. Mr. Rhodes, formerly pastor of Fifth Street Church of this city.

Rev. J. W. Primrose has accepted the call of the Second Presbyterian Church, of this city, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. C. M. Payne, the late pastor, now of Concord; and will arrive already tendered his resignation of the Presbyterian Church of Oxford, and of Grassy Creek and Shiloh Churches, in Granville, Fortunately the danger was quickly perceived and a bucket of water from a plug near at hand served to extinguish what little fire there was. To render assurance doubly sure, however, one of the stone slabs of the pavement was taken up and the paper and rubbish was thoroughly overhauled until it was settled beyond question that not a spark lingered to be fanned into a flame.

Thanksgiving Day. This day was observed in Wilmington in much the usual style. Very little business was transacted, the most of the stores being opened for a short time in the morning and then closed for the day. Many resorted to the wild woods in search of game and found it not. Some few were smiled upon by kind fortune and returned with a goodly string of innocent birds, who warbled forth from their tiny throats the last notes of thanksgiving, for them, as the cold shot from relentless weapons of death penetrated their delicate frames.

Thanksgiving services were held in seveal churches. At Front Street Methodist Church Bishop Parker preached to a large congregation, the building being crowded on the floor and in the galleries.
